MUST LOOK TO U. S. FOR HELP

Armenians Will Have to Depend Upon America For Help in Their Terrible Situation —— Germany Should Act

SUMMARY OF WEEK

LONDON, Oct. 9.—It is to America that the friends of Armenia must look for really effective action for relief from the wholesale massacre of the last two years. A strong Armenian committee has been working among the members of the House of Lords and Commons. Lord Bryce is one of its members. The committee has organized other committees in every Continental capital, has held international conferences and kept in touch with Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian statesman, who is now the chief figure in the Armenian world and urged on Turkey several schemes of reform. Dr. Leipsius, the well-known German missionary, was one of the most valued members before the war.

When the news of the massacres reached London the committee got in touch immediately with the other Armenian associations. All expressed the same opinion, namely, that two factors alone could stop the massacres. The first was the German Government. If it persisted in ignoring the events in Asia, then the support of public opinion in America was to be sought. Hence Lord Bryce's appeal to the United States.

Appeal to the Pope.

I was asked also to request the intervention of the Pope, through Cardinal Bourne. The Cardinal promptly informed me that the Pope had taken up the question. I was also asked to join in the appeal to America. Cable accounts of the strong action of the American Ambassador in Constantinople and of the important movement in America helped to start a similiar movement of protest and relief in England. The Lord Mayor of London called a meeting to start a fund for the Armenians, and Cardinal Bourne, Bishop Gore of Oxford, and Mr. Arthur Balfour have given strong adhesion.

Turning to our immediate affairs, this week has been full of greater transformations and more uncertainties than any since the beginning of the war. Exultation over the proof in last week's victories that the German front is not impregnable remains. Nobody doubts that the Germans will be driven from France and Belgium, though the date is uncertain. The German reconquest of the Hohenzollern redoubt is disappointing and the long list of casualties conveys a more real sense of the magnitude of the horrors. But the deter-

WOUNDED HEROES WELCOMED HOME

PTE. JOS. VOLLANS, a member of the Peterborough Overseas Battalion. He was formerly in the Manchester Regiment.

Pte Mosley of the 2nd Battalion and Pte. Langley of the 21st Battalion Received by the Civic and Military Authorities This Morning

ADDRESSES OF WELCOME

Two of Peterborough's sons, invalided home from the front, were given as hearty a welcome by the civic and military authorities this morning as the circumstances permitted. They were Pte. Ernest Mosley of the 2nd Battalion, and Pte. J. Langley of the 21st Battalion. Pte. Langley has been home several days, slipping in quietly on Tuesday, with no opportunity afforded to give him a reception, and Pte. Mosley got in on the 8.16 train this morning, ahead of the expected time, as he was not counted upon to arrive until this afternoon or to-morrow morning.

On learning of his arrival arrangements were quickly made for a reception. Motor cars were sent to the homes of Ptes. Langley and Mosley, and the two gallant soldiers taken to the Armouries, where a parade was organized, headed by the band of the Peterborough Battalion. The returned heroes followed in motor cars, draped with flags. Lt.-Col. Walker, Rev. Canon Davidson, J. H. Burnham, M. P., G. A. Gillespie, M.P., Mayor Buller, City Clerk Armstrong, Ald. Evans, Edgar, McIntyre and Langford, representatives of the Speakers' Patriotic League and other citizens accompanied them. The Overseas detachment formed the escort.

The procession passed through the down-town streets and returned to the Armouries, where addresses of welcome were presented to the returned soldiers.

The proceedings were opened by Rev. Canon Davidson, who offered prayers of thanksgiving for the return of Ptes. Langley and Mosley, after which the gathering recited the Lord's Prayer.

Lt.-Col. Walker, Officer Commanding the 57th Regiment, was the first speaker. He reminded his hearers of the glorious part the Canadians had been stirred last April, when the news came back from across the seas of the glorious part the Canadians had taken in the Battle of St. Julien. A little later the people had been stirred in a different way when the cost of the exploit had been received. One of the soldiers they were welcoming to-day (Pte. Mosley) had been wounded in the charge led by Major Bennett. Representing the Militia of Peterborough Lt.-Col. Walker extended a cordial welcome home to Ptes. Langley and Mosley.

Mayor Buller, on behalf of the city, welcomed the returned heroes. He regretted that sufficient time had not been given to arrange a demonstration on a scale such as every citizen of Peterborough would desire to have, but he assured Ptes. Langley and Mosley that all citizens shared in the welcome. Speaking as the Mayor of Peterborough he extended to the two soldiers the freedom of the city.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., said that the citizens of Peterborough were proud of Ptes. Langley and Mosley, proud of what they had done, and would be proud to do everything in their power to help them. He expressed his regrets that the notice had been so short that a reception on

Fred Howard of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute Captures Mr. Justice Riddell's $200 Scholarship

SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENT

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute has scored again the winning by Fred Howard, a pupil of the local Collegiate, of the Riddell scholarship in Modern History. The Mail and Empire says:

The senate of the University of Toronto announces the ward of matriculation scholarships in modern history as follows:

The Matthews Scholarship, the gift of Wilmot D. Matthews, of the value of $100 with free tuition for two years, of a total value of $180, awarded to Miss F. A. Smith, Goderich C.I.

These scholarships are awarded for the first time and are based on the results of (a) a paper on the history of Canada and Great Britain since 1763, (b) a paper on general knowledge, (c) an English essay, and (d) an oral examination.

Edward Blake Scholarships in Modern—1, Miss H. Hoffman, Miss M. C. Peterkin, Miss F. A. Smith and A. R. Gordon, ranked in the order named for this scholarship, which was awarded by reversion to Miss F. E. Riley, St. Mary's C.I. 2, E. K. Logan ranked first for this scholarship, which was awarded by reversion to Miss I. B. Giles, Peterborough C.I.

This is a splendid achievement for the young student as he was in competition against the province.

ROYAL THEATRE

Has secured for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at a great expense, Charlie Chaplin and "The War Comedien" feature in four reels, which were taken in New York by star actors.

IMPORTANT MEETING

The Speakers' Patriotic League will hold a meeting to-night at 8 o'clock in the recruiting rooms, corner of George and Brock streets. Every member is urged to be present as important business will come up for discussion.

Our want ads are worth crowing about because they are bound to bring the results you want. Try one to-morrow.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY

Owing to the steady growth in our various other departments in our store, the Optical Department has not had the attention that it should have had. In spite of that it has shown a healthy increase that has not satisfied us according to the "Warne Way" of doing business. We want the best. We want to build up our Optical Reputation to the same height as Warne Reputation is in our other departments, therefore we investigated the means used by the Leading Eye Specialists in Toronto, Montreal, and New York, and found, without exception, the best in the profession strongly recommending using the "Shadow Test" system, or "Looking into the Eye" to locate its defects. I have engaged Mr. Mayor, who is considered one of the foremost exponents of this system to teach me this system, I ask all to consult him with the utmost confidence, as the results achieved by him in other places in Ontario have brought forth loud praises of Mr. Mayor's work.—S. C. Warne Jeweller, Peterborough.

THE COST OF PAVING.

For almost anything worth having we have to pay; and street paving is no exception. It is something worth having, and is worth what it costs; that is supposing it is as permanent and satisfactory as we expect it to be. We know what it costs per square yard; every property owner for some years to come will have a reminder in his tax bill,

The mere construction cost is, however, not the whole cost. There is considerable expense for maintenance, or rather keeping clean and free from dust and litter. It is estimated that the cost of doing this (cleaning pavements) is about $1,400 or $1,500 per mile per year. Contrary to the conditions with the ordinary streets, macadam or gravel, the pavement dust is a more serious matter. The accumulated dust on pavement lies loose on the surface and is not incorporated by rain or moisture in the road surface. The pavement dries quickly, and the dust being loose is a much greater nuisance than on other forms of road.

Then in the case of pavements on residence streets, where trees are abundant, there is the problem of leaf removal. We don't know how the Board of Works proposes to deal with this problem, or how it is dealt with in other places. The leaves that fall thick in autumn cannot be removed by burning in situ. They must be removed entirely; and if the means of doing so promptly, cheaply and effectively, have not been devised by the street authorities, it is high time to consider the matter.

In any event the process will add something to the cost of maintaining pavements in satisfactory condition. Since paving is an expensive thing, any means that can be adopted to lessen the cost should be adopted. There is one way that can be adopted to lessen the cost to the frontage taxpayer directly, and the body of ratepayers generally. The primary cost of pavement depends upon the area paved. It is a simple truth to say that the smaller the surface the less the cost. Logically the way to lessen cost is to lessen the surface to be covered with pavement upon our streets.

It is admitted that the driving surface of all our streets—between curbs—is too wide, much wider than the traffic needs require. This is true of all our streets, but especially of pavements, where surface costs so much. A narrow roadway on all our streets, so long as it is wide enough for traffic purposes, is evidently much cheaper to build—to put into good condition, and to maintain in good condition.

The way of lessening cost of paving in future operations, especially on residence streets, is to narrow the driveway—the space between curbs.

In other cities, the space between curbs on residence streets is from 22 to 25 feet; and there is no necessity of traffic that indicates that ours should be wider, either for pavements or other street surfaces. All the street authorities of Peterborough recognize this fact, but unfortunately they have not acted upon it in the paving of Hunter street, especially the western portion. Here the taxpayers will have to pay for many years for a width of pavement greater than is necessary. In this case they are penalized by having to pay for what is quite useless from the point of necessary provision for traffic.

Other cities have dealt with this wrong and burdensome condition and have taken steps to avoid unnecessary cost, at the same time retaining all necessary traffic advantages.

The town of Superior, Wisconsin, in the United States, faced and solved the problem of avoiding unnecessary cost. Some streets had to be repaved, and in order to escape almost prohibitory cost, the streets were narrowed; that is the surfaces to be paved, were narrowed to widths equivalent to traffic needs. This was done by setting the curb lines further towards the middle of the streets, thus widening the parkings or boulevards, or by dividing the street, where exceptionally broad, by a middle line of boulevard. On one 66-foot street a 24-foot parking or boulevard was built in the middle of the drive, leaving a paved driveway on either side of 18 feet, with cross-connections of at street intersections. Superior city found that the adoption of these methods cut down the per square foot liability for paving about one half.

The adoption of such methods in Peterborough is not necessarily advocated; but the matter is referred to, to show that we can in future operations secure the benefits of paving at a much lower cost than is imposed by the making of the paved surface of our streets wider than necessary. By applying the same principle of narrowed drives to all our streets we shall greatly lessen expense and secure better streets, for it stands to reason that, say, $1,000 spent in street building or repair will go much further on a street with a 25-foot driveway than with one of 35 feet or 40 feet.

We need to practice the greatest possible economy. This war will increase our direct taxation and make large demands upon our own liberality for the purpose of relieving the conditions it creates. From an economic, as well as patriotic viewpoint, would it not be wicked extravagance to spend two dollars for street paving or street work when an expenditure of one dollar, would meet all traffic requirements, and correspondingly relieve the overburdened individual as well as general taxpayer?

TAXATION REFORM.

From henceforth the matter of taxation will be an all important one. We shall be obliged to submit to burdens of taxation, quite in contrast with our past experience in this regard. It is essential, therefore, to provide that the burden be equitably distributed. In this connection the visit to Peterborough at an early date of Mr. F. J. Dixon, M.P.P., for Centre Winnipeg, who will deliver an address on taxation reform, will be a matter of great interest. It may seem incongruous to inject such a subject into the present war situation; but the results of the war are involved, and it seems a matter of prudence to envisage conditions that must be as bravely confronted as the duties arising out of our relations to the Empire and the war, are met at the present time.

WOMAN'S WORKS AND RIGHTS

Many gentlemen, themselves orators or judges of oratory, have nothing but words of praise for the addresses of the ladies who presented the claims of the Red Cross work to the city fathers Thursday night. Their remarks were to the point, with cogent tersely presented reasoning and brief—and gracefully expressed. While their eloquence was admired by others it evidently did not stampede the city fathers into voting an extravagant sum to the Red Cross fund, but still the tribute to their eloquence holds good—the official heart is harder than that which beats in the ordinary bosom. This cruel war has helped us find ourselves and revealed new possibilities in all of us, especially the ladies. The short speeches of Mesdames Davidson, Travers and Neal, have vindicated their sex, and demonstrated that women have ideas and resources of expression of them, that men, supercilious men, would give much to possess—that women can reason as well as feel—that they are qualified to be a considerable factor in our political life as they are the dominant factor and authoritative influence in social life and in all the spheres where refinement, devotion to duty, fine feeling, are essential elements. Equality of political and civil rights to women will not be the chemerical idea that it appeared to men before this war developed the knowledge of their resourcefulness and capacity. The fighting is not all done in the trenches. The women of Peterborough, of Canada, and of the Empire, are waging their share of war uncontentatiously, perhaps, but effectively in their own way. Hereafter we shall take off our hats to our women, with more than perfunctory politeness—we shall do it in true tribute to their gallant self-sacrificing share in winning the victory we are all fighting for in our several ways. We shall all of us be ready to consider, and concede to women, rights and privileges, that have been, in past denied the gentler, but, in a thousand ways, the greater, sex.

IS FERDINAND SO BASE?

Bulgaria owes all she has and is to Russia and England. As with Greece, Turkey has ever been Bulgaria's implacable enemy, from whom Russia and England have protected her. If King Ferdinand has really sold his country to a Teuton-Turk Alliance he has given an exhibition of baseness almost unparalleled.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

THE BEAUTIFUL PATRIOTISM THE BOOZE BUSINESS

That is a good heading, now isn't it? It has a real nice alliterative sound to it. But we would wager a farm—if we had it—that there isn't a man, woman or child in the whole Dominion of Canada, outside the lunatic asylums, who would let it pass. True? Why the devil himself, sitting up nights, couldn't manufacture a bigger or more bold-faced lie than is suggested by it. There some untruths that can be got off on the public, but a man wouldn't have much of a chance with that one.

Here is an item: "We are willing for our sons to become soldiers; we are willing for them to fight for their country, we don not mind their being killed, but we do not want them to become drunkards."

"Where did we get that? you ask. Well, it was part of the evidence given by Col. Clingan at Brandon, Man., the other day in connection with the commission investigation touching the licenses in Brandon and Carberry, nearly related to the Sewell Camp. Col. Clingan said that parents out west had a far greater dread of the liquor peril for their sons than they had of German bullets or asphyxiating gasses, and that the facilities for getting liquor greatly hindered recruiting. And this straightforward and stout-hearted soldier did not hesitate to say that the open bar was the open foe of the country's cause, as that cause was in the hands of the soldiers in training. Fine patriotism that, isn't it?

And, by the way, it would do you good to read some of the evidence presented to the commission above mentioned. And if in reading it you wouldn't get more righteously indignant over the patriotism shown by some booze sellers than you got even when reading the story of German frightfulness, then we fancy your own patriotism needs a little fixing up.

Last week our local papers reported that a conference had been held between certain military authorities and members of the License Commission relative to future action touching the sale of liquor in those centres where soldiers would be in training for the winter. And it was intimated, though no details were given, that the commission would not likely see its way to do all in the way of restricting the traffic that the military authorities were asking for. And the question that has been asking itself in our minds ever since has been, 'Why couldn't they?' They have the power to do it. The military authorities ask for it because they believe it the best and the necessary thing to be done. And yet for some reason this best thing, this sensible, patriotic thing, is not to be done; but something less satisfactory and less patriotic is to take its place. And the only reason, of course, is that the traffic is insisting that the restriction be not too radical. Again the booze business is standing right directly in the way of the country's good.

Did you ever know of any time or condition under which it did not stand in the way of the country's good? If you did, we wish you would tell us about it. And now that we are finding out what an infernal and eternal nuisance and hindrance it is, would it not be a sensible thing and a courageous thing to rise up and be done with it?

We have Germans and Austrians and Turks in our detention camps here and there throughout the Dominion, but the most unpatriotic thing we have in the whole country to-day is the booze business.—Christian Guardian.

Stock Markets

John G. Bates, who bought 1,800 shares of Bethlehem Steel at between $86 and $400 a share on the New York Stock Exchange on Wednesday, again was the principal purchaser of that stock yesterday.

One New York Stock Exchange commission house reported having purchased $900,000 of odd lots for cash, the shares being taken out of the market.

Zimmermann & Forshay in their advertisement of the new issue of imperial German government five per cent. bonds append a comparison between the American bond of $1,000 par value and the German government five per cent. bond of 4,000 marks par value, showing the profit resultant from the present low rate of exchange.

Production in the Connellsville coke region was increased this week to 400,000 tons, at which rate it will round out the year with a total output of 17,250,000 tons, as against 10,000,000 last year.

In despatches from Washington it was stated that Thomas W. Gregory, the Attorney General, would subject to the closest scrutiny the recent Midvale steel combination. All other new combinations will be watched, he added, to prevent violation of the anti-trust laws.

After opening subscriptions for the new $30,000,0000 Brooklyn Rapid Transit five per cent. notes, the Central Trust Company, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Kidder, Peabody & Co. announced the issue had been oversubscribed.

Application has been made by the Chalmers Motor Company for the listing of its $5,000,000 common stock on the curb.

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Laidlaw & Co.—There is still plenty of money available for speculation in the railroads and the standard industrials, which have not been boomed in connection with the war, and banking interests can hardly be censured for using every means at their command to divert stock market activity to safer channels.

Shearson, Hammill & Co. — The Street has rarely taken into account this crop report proposition which is so bullish on rails. They will come to it, however, in time.

Post and Flagg.—The Coppers are being bought freely in anticipation of better dividend returns, which in many cases are practically certain to accrue from the very favourable conditions which now exist and are in prospect for the metal.

Margins Are High.

One brokerage house now demands a margin of 50 per cent. of the purchase price on the war issues, and in some cases transactions are conducted only on a full cash payment. This is the list of revised margins required by one house: American Can, 15 points; American Coal Products, 25; American Locomotive, 20; Baldwin Locomotive, 50; Bethlehem Steel, 150; Continental Can, 25; Crucible Steel, 50; General Electric, 25; General Motors, 175; Lackawanna Steel, 25; Mexican Petroleum, 20; New York Air Brake, 40; Studebaker, 30; Texas Oil, 25; U. S. Industrial Alcohol, 25; Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke, 30; Westinghouse, 30; Willys-Overland, 75. In addition to raising the margin, some houses are insisting that a stop-loss order must accompany each buying order.

The Connecting Link.

The connecting link between the merchant and his customer is the newspaper advertisement. In it the merchant may make plain to the housewife or the househusband, the advantages of his store and the commodities he has to offer, in a way that would be impossible otherwise, because of the limited time, and the interruptions when the customer visits the store.

When people go out to shop, they want to get what they need, and go home again. They want the business news, but they want it when they have time at their disposal. You can give it to them through the advertising columns.

ONTARIO TO RAISE $500,000 FOR THE BRITISH RED CROSS

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Under most favorable auspices that foreshadow success, the campaign was launched at the City Hall yesterday afternoon for the raising of half a million dollars for the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem on Trafalgar Day Thursday, October 21st. The campaign is the result of an appeal sent by the Marquis of Lansdowne in behalf of the societies to his Honor Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor, requesting that the people of Ontario join with the other provinces of the Dominion and states of the British overseas dominions in an Empire-wide contribution towards the funds of the societies who are doing so much for the soldiers and sailors of the Empire in the present war. Every municipality in the province will be asked to do its share in raising the amount, and Toronto is expected to take the lead and to provide the major part of the money. Yesterday's meeting was convened by Mayor Church for the purpose of considering ways and means of raising the money. It was decided to hold a whirlwind campaign on Trafalgar Day, when everyone will be expected to contribute. The whole arrangements will be under the supervision of a strong committee of citizens, of which Mayor Church will be hon.-president; Mr. W. J. Woods, of the Board of Trade, president; Sir Edmund Osler, treasurer, and Dr. A. H. Abbott, secretary. These gentlemen with the assistance of Sir John Hendrier, Premier Hearst, Hon. T. W. McGarry, and N. W. Rowell, K.C., provincial Liberal leader, will nominate the general committee, who, in turn, will select the captains and teams which will undertake the collection of the money. The plan to be followed will be somewhat similar to that adopted in raising the Patriotic Fund, with probably some of the features of the tag day scheme, the details being left to the committee to arrange. Mayor Church presided yesterday, and, after thanking the representative gathering for their attendance, briefly outlined the proposition and introduced the Lieutenant-Governor.

Lieutenant-Governor's Address

Sir. John Hendrie said the appeal of Lord Lansdowne spoke for itself. It was a call to the people of the outside points of the Empire to render assistance to the soldiers and sailors who were doing so much for the Empire in the present war. It was the first call that had been made by the Motherland, and he hoped the response would be a worthy one, worthy not only of the Dominion, but of the great Province of Ontario. This was a call for one day only, and it would not interfere with any other project or injure the Canadian Red Cross. It was a call by the British people at home to the British people beyond the seas. There were 880 municipalities in Ontario, and all had been asked to help, and he trusted the response would be so great that Ontario would head the list of contributaries. The people of Ontario looked to Toronto for leadership in these matters, and he hoped they would form a strong organization that would ensure their collecting a large proportion of the sum, which had been fixed at $500,000.

Hon. W. H. Hearst, the Premier, said that he had attended to show the interest the Government and every member of the Legislature was taking in the movement. In this matter the Legislature was united, and the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Rowell, was an enthusiastic as himself in doing everything possible to make the campaign a success. He appealed to the citizens of Toronto and the people of the province to make a noble response to the call from the Old Land. We in Canada are a favoured people, he said, we are so far from the scene of strife and are able to pursue our business without interference from the enemy, thanks to the protection afforded by the British navy. For that reason we should be eager to do our duty. We were well able to bear the burden, and our response to the call should be worthy of the confidence placed in us and of the prosperity which all enjoyed. He concluded by saying the whole resources of the Government would be placed at the disposal of the city to aid the campaign.

Mr. N. W. Rowell concurred in the appeal by the Premier and expressed the hope that Ontario would make a noble response to the call. They had a great opportunity to show their appreciation of the heroism and self-sacrifice of the men who were doing so much in the trenches.

On the motion of N. F. Davidson, K.C., seconded by President Falconer, a resolution was passed, expressing appreciation of Sir John Hendrie in starting the campaign, and pledging the city to contribute its share or more of the $500,000 objective set for the province, and calling for the heartiest and self-sacrificing support of every citizen.

Sir. Edmund Osler, Mr. J. W. Woods, Col. Noel Marshall, Mr. K. J. Dunstan, Canon Plumptre, Canon Dixon, Rabbi Jacobs, Hon. Thomas Crawford, and others, including ladies, promised to help the campaign in every way possible. The clergy of the different churches will preach special sermons on the matter the Sunday previous to Trafalgar Day.

IN FIVE MINUTES! NO INDIGESTION, GAS OR SOUR ACID STOMACH

"Really does" put bad stomach in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.

KEEP away from the flame of the candle if you don't want your wings singed" is a proverb as old as the hills. So old we have almost forgotten to apply it to OURSELVES. In every community men and women are imitating the moths. How often have WE been singed by the fascination of that LONG DISTANCE "bargain"? And how many times have WE come BACK, and back AGAIN, to the flame? How much MONEY is lost each year to this community by this same SINGEING process? The flame of the candle mounts higher. The moths crowd closer and closer to the flame. It is OUR business to put that flame OUT. WANTED:—A few MEN and WOMEN in OUR community to apply the SNUFFER.

Trades and Labour Notes

(By the Official Scribe.)

A good attendance of delegates was again the sight that met the eye of President J. J. Hartley, when he called the meeting to order this week. It is to be noticed, however, that representatives of some of the local unions stay away with steady persistency. This should not be. If there is a grievance against anybody or anything, the time and place to bring it forward is at the regular meetings of the Council every first and third Wednesday.

The Chairman of the Municipal Committee presented his report which agreed with the reports already published in the papers. One thing, however, appeared strange, which was that no notification had been given the City Clerk of the injury to two of the city's employees.

"That this Council go on record as being in favour of the city being run by a commission," was the notice of motion presented on Wednesday night. After several of the members had spoken favourably, Alderman Edgar, who was present as a visitor, was given the floor. Mr. Edgar has devoted some time to this proposition, believing it to be a solution of the deficiencies of present administration. A man who has to give of his best all day so that he can provide for himself and family, is naturally worn at end of his task, and it is then that the City Dad has to sally forth to attempt the direction of local municipal affairs. A commission, well paid and forceful, would have to make good during day-night hours or else get out. As things are now it is a case of, "What's everybody's business is nobody's business," so municipal management just happens along with varying success as we all see. The Water Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission right here in our city is an argument in favour of a trial. In thanking Mr. Edgar at the close of his address the President said that if only the public could be led to take an intelligent interest in this question much good would result. Secretary Wm. Stevens will look up other towns with a commission system, and invite correspondence.

It was reported that conditions had improved at a local planing mill turning out ammunition boxes.

Trouble was reported occurring at a local factory amongst weavers.

President J. J. Hartley did not definitely announce his candidature for the mayoralty. He was considering requests from a large number of people that he declare himself in the field.

Next meeting October 20th.

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANGES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

A laxative today saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs", which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

BONACCORD BRIDGE HAS DOZEN MEN ENGAGED

Excavation work on the new Bonacord Street bridge is beginning to assume material proportions. From the amount of discussion expended over it, one would have expected a structure of formidable size, approaching the Smith Street bridge. Work was begun on Tuesday excavating in the ground for the footings. City Engineer stated that ten or twelve men were employed in preparing the location of the concrete basins.

If Too Fat Get More Fresh Air

BE MODERATE IN YOUR DIET AND REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT WITH OIL OF ORILENE

Lack of fresh air weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs are hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

Fat put on by indoor life is unhealthy and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off by increasing the oxygen-carrying power of the blood a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout, take the matter in hand at once. Don't wait until your figure has become a joke and your health ruined through carrying around a burden of unhealthy and unsightly fat.

Spend as much time as you possibly can in the open air; breathe deeply, and get from any druggist a box of oil of orilene capsules, take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the treatment until you are down to normal. Oil of orilene is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, helps the digestion and is designed to increase the oxygen carrying power of the blood.

Even a few days treatment should show noticeable [illegible] weight. There is nothing [illegible]

Any druggist can supply you or a large box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Liddle Drug Co., Box 1249, Montreal, Can.

HAS GIVEN 28 AIRSHIPS.

$170,000 Subscribed to Overseas Club Aircraft Fund.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The Overseas Club Aircraft Fund, composed of units scattered throughout the colonies of the British Empire, which was formed for the purpose of presenting to the Imperial Government a flotilla of aircraft, recently presented its twenty-eighth aeroplane.

These aeroplanes are divided between two types—the 70 horse power Renault, costing $7,500, and used for scouting and fast despatch work, and the 100 horse power Gnome, Vickers gun biplane, costing $11,250. This latter type carries two men and is used for attacks and for Zeppelin hunting. The Vickers gun is of the rapid-fire type, and capable of more than 600 shots a minute.

At the last statement of the fund it was announced that more than $170,000 had been subscribed. The money came from all over the world, and one of the largest single contributions was from Walter Douglas of Bisbee, Ariz., who gave $510. He is one of the best known mining engineers in the West, and is general manager of Phelps, Dodge & Co., and a member of the Engineers, Rock Mountain, and Columbia University Clubs of this city.

The largest single contribution came from Captain John Hicks, R.N., of Nova Scotia, who gave $12,250. The Bank of Bombay heads the list with $22,500, and the Bank of New Zealand is third, with $6,500.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Corporal "Bill" O'Brien Writes Of His Experiences In England

In a Letter to Toronto Friends Tells Of Camp Life and the Beauties Of Old Kent—Boys Are Happy and Enjoy Many Interesting Features of Their Work

IS PETERBORO BOY

The following appended letter from Corporal W. J. O'Brien a Peterborough boy, and son of Mr and Mrs. Michael O'Brien, Reid street is delightful, descriptive of particular sections of the English countryside. It was written to members of the Newman Club, Toronto, and appeared in the latest issue of the Catholic Register. Corp. O'Brien enlisted with other Osgoode Hall students in the 25th Battery, but is now with the 31st Battery. The letter is as follows:

It is exactly six months ago that Newman Club's first draft of adventurers lost their identity as civilians by donning the khaki and spurs of His Gracious Majesty, and although we have not as yet smelled the powder of either friend or foe, we have nevertheless experienced many delightful and profitable sensations in the training period that such a war as this entails and makes necessary. I wish at the outset, to express my sincere regrets at the death of poor Kelleher. I clearly remember the great interest he took in the Club's activities, and the modest though effective methods he displayed in furthering its every move. When the call to arms was sounded, he made no display of his intentions to do his bit. Instead he drifted away quietly to the scene of the struggle, and joined the gallant band that bore the first brunt of battle. I have heard from the lips of convalescents the tale of the great retreat from Mons, and the story of the battle of Ypres, St. Julien, and Le Bassee. Somewhere in these conflicts poor Kelleher fell, and I know that he fell with his face towards the trenches of the enemy. That the representatives of the Newman Club may have more than their share in the working out of the problem of getting square with the other fellow for this brave student's death is my hope and the hope of the other Newmanites over here in England.

D'Arcy Leonard is in the trenches "Somewhere in France," and has been at the front for nearly six weeks now. I hear from him every fortnight, and his letters are full of cheer and as rich in narrative as the censor's axe will admit of. He is a fine type of soldier and has risen to the highest position —that of Quartermaster-Sergeant. That is offered to non-commissioned officers. Frank McKinley was promoted to the rank of Sergeant shortly after the training began, but at his own request went back as a driver. The exalted rank did not apparently offer as much training as he desired, and he is now in his glory handling the lead team on a gun team of six horses. He is with the 25th Battery yet, and is quartered about five minutes' walk from here. Things didn't look very promising for me as regards breakfast yesterday morning, so I dropped in on Frank's battery for a meal. I found McKinley standing outside of his tent, soap-brush in one hand, razor in the other, his face smeared over with a thick lather of soap and his mirror mounted on a gun wheel. He appeared complacent as ever, and while shaving the near side of his face he worked the off, in the attempt to keep up a conversation regarding the weather and other kindred topics. Prendergast looked as ruddy as ever when I saw him two weeks ago. He has taken up the art of signalling, and from all accounts will make a success of it, as he is an apt scholar and a rattling good soldier. I haven't seen Ray O'Donohue since he came to England with the rest of the 26th Brigade, but he is only a few minutes' walk away, and I shall in all probability see him this week. Kehoe and MacNab are still at Ross Barracks, and they expect to be re-transferred to the 25th Battery to-morrow. They are both signallers and are doing quite well in the work. Bater and I are the only two of the old crowd that are with the 31st Battery, 7th Howitzer Brigade, Otterpool, and at that we are in different sections. It is altogether probable, however, that we shall all go to the firing line together and work in the same locality during the rest of the war. I saw O'Leary a couple of months ago. He belongs to the Medical Corps, and is very enthusiastic about his work. I expect that he is across the Channel by this time, as the Second Division moved last week.

Otterpool Camp, where practically all of us are located, is beautifully situated in the southern part of Kent County, and but a couple of miles from the Channel. Although we are nearly surrounded by the Kentish Hills, famed in song and story. Our home is high and dry and swept continually by the breezes that blow from the shores of Sunny France. It is an ideal location for a military camp, and with any kind of a square deal from the weather man we would live here the year round. The roads that lead to the numerous towns and villages about here are flanked on both sides by the prettiest hedgerow in the world, and the quaint old farmhouses are invariably to be found bedecked by the roses, hyacinths and other brands (whose names I cannot at present recall), which simply run riot about them. The English people are very patriotic and quite kind to us, but the restauranteurs and storekeepers "rush" us for top prices in everything. They evidently appreciate the fact that Canadians are a "good thing." For these people war has no terrors. I am quite sure that the devout element of the store-keeping fraternity pray daily for a continuance ad infinitum of their bellicose relations with Germany if the high prices they so painlessly extract from us are to be taken as a criterion.

Our week-ends are usually featured by sea bathing at Folkestone, a very pretty and well-patronized watering place. It is a delightful sport, and we all hope that the weather keeps fine enough for more of it. Our meals are good, our living quarters comfortable and our friends numerous enough and amiable enough to make the living really pleasant. We have the opportunity of hearing Mass every Sunday, and of course we never miss.

In closing, I may state that we are happy. Who wouldn't be with the blue sky for a canopy, the green grass for a carpet, the air for a mesmeric, and the warbling of a thousand birds for an orchestra. The bugle call that shatters our dreams of home every morning at 5:30, and brings us to realize with, I must confess, a start, that another day of bumping around in the saddle is upon us, recalls to us also another more pleasant idea — the fact that we are a day nearer Berlin, a day nearer Toronto, and still a day nearer good old Newman Club, in which we have all spent such pleasant hours. Ora pro nobis.

Very sincerely and fraternally yours,

A good story comes from the home of a well-known Scottish divine. Brooding over the wanton brutalities of the Germans, one of the servants, while endeavouring to obtain the guidance of the head of the house in the matter, gravely remarked, "If ony o' thae Germans get to Heaven, it'll put a lot o' folks all hein' gund."

Eggs Touched 35c Many Geese Sold

Large Market This Morning With Poultry Quite Plentiful

This morning's market produced record prices for this season. Eggs touched 35c a dozen at the opening but shaded off to 32 cents. Butter was from 30 to 32 cents a pound. Farmers endeavoured to hold potatoes firmly at $1.25 a bag, although there appeared to be a good supply. Poultry was plentiful, but the prices were not exactly the lowest that have been recorded. Chickens sold at $1.25, $1.40 and $1.50 a pair. Ducks sold from 70c each to $1.00. Geese and turkeys registered various prices. The appearance of geese was a signal for a raid on these supplies and there was none of them carried home. A few prices were as follows:

4 lb duck, 70c.
3-4 lb. turkey for $1.00.
11 1-2 lb turkey for $2.30.

There may appear a discrepancy in the prices, but those are exactly as quoted.

"CASCARETS" BEST IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS, SICK, CONSTIPATED

Best for liver and bowels, bad breath, bad colds, sour stomach.

Sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet, breath right, complexion rosy and your liver and bowels regular for months.

SCULPTOR MAKES CASTS TO ASSIST SURGEONS

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The application of sculpture as an aid to surgery is a development which is arousing no small interest among medical men and sculptors.

Mr. Derwent Wood, the sculptor, whose studio is in Chelsea, is now a sergeant in the Third London General Hospital at Wandsworth. Since he joined the army he has employed his skill in making plaster casts of soldiers' injured limbs, so as to enable the manufacturer of surgical instruments to supply the correct splint or other kind of support necessary for the natural setting and healing of the wounded part without seeing the patient or obtaining medical guidance.

A Chelsea surgeon who is familiar with Mr. Derwent Wood's work told a correspondent who called upon him that he had a very high opinion of its advantages.

"After all," he said, "a dentist has to take a mould of a patient's mouth in order to fit false teeth properly, so why should not a mould be taken of an injured limb when splints have to be supplied or supports provided. The principal is the same. Of course the cases are comparatively few where such an aid can be employed, and for very obvious reasons. For instructional purposes, such casts must have an excellent value. The idea is excellent in many respects, and it is quite possible to expect developments. This war has imposed a great strain on the makers of surgical instruments, and any method of assisting them in their work must be welcome."

Mr. Derwent Wood's skill has been employed at Wandsworth in making plaster casts, which are being used to a great extent in place of the usual wooden ones.

Half Of Germany's Union Men At War

Shows Effect on Tuetonic Industries—Butchers Lead With 84.2 Per Cent. Enlistments

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—War's effect upon German trade and industry is indicated in statistics made public today by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, showing the number of enlistments of male members of the German Central Union up to April 15, 1915. That organization is credited with having on April 1, 1914, 2,300,295 members, representing about fifty different trades. Considering all trades, the number registered represented about 64 per cent. of the corresponding population of Germany.

Of the total membership, 958,247, or 41.7 per cent., had enlisted in the war up to April 30 last. Trades furnishing the largest number of enlistments were, in order of numerical importance, as follows: Metal workers, with 517,591 members, furnished 228,594 enlistments, builders' men, with 389,562 members, had 135,160 enlistments, transportation employees, with 218,614 members, had 98,331 enlistments, wood workers, with 184,896 members, had 74,740 enlistments, factory workers, with 181,812 members, had 71,244 enlistments, and miners, with 161,956 members, had 34,286 enlistments. Other trades furnishing the largest number of enlistments included textile workers, book printers, carpenters, municipal employees, and brewery and mill workers.

Butchers, with only 6,620 members, furnished 5,573 enlistments, or 84.2 per cent., while tobacco workers, with 15,066 members, had only 3,253 enlistments, or 21.6 per cent.

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery

Thin men and women that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rubbers. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of these a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come in tablets to a package, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

THE FUNERAL OF MISS DICKSON

The funeral of Miss Elizabeth Dickson took place yesterday afternoon from the Protestant Home, where she had been an inmate for twenty-nine years. There were present, besides the members of the Board, a large number of friends who had learned to respect and admire one whose position in life has been a very humble one. She has for years been a great sufferer, but has borne her extreme pain with fortitude that has been surprising to those who have been near her. She was unfailingly grateful to those who sought to serve her, and was always willing and anxious to be helpful to others while her strength remained. A deputation from the Board of the Protestant Home followed the remains to their last resting place in Little Lake Cemetery.

Be wise, advertise your wants in the paper that brings results. Put a result bringing want ad in to-morrow and watch the returns.

For years he taught food chemistry, dietetics, and disease of the digestive tract in one of the large medical schools of the continent. James Darling Died From Injuries In A Runaway

FUNERAL ON MONDAY

Seriously injured in a runaway accident on Wednesday, Sept. 28, Mr. James Darling of lot 4, concession 3, Smith, died at Nicholls Hospital this morning at 6 o'clock. His death removed one of the oldest and best known residents of the township. The son of the late John Darling, he was born on the old homestead seventy-five years ago and had lived his allotted round of life in Smith. The accident in which he sustained the injuries leading to his death was of a simple nature. He was sitting in a buggy at the corner of McDonnel and Aylmer street while his son was making purchases in Boorman's store. The horse suddenly taking fright, bolted and near the corner of Park and McDonnel streets, Mr. Darling was thrown from the seat and fell heavily on the ground. He never regained full consciousness from that time until his death at the hospital this morning.

The deceased is survived by his wife, who was Sarah Anne Archer, two daughters, Mrs W. J. Young, of Peterborough, and Mrs. Ross Boates of Emily, and two sons, Herbert and William of Smith. He was a member of the Lakevale Presbyterian church and in politics was a supporter of the Liberal party.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at one o'clock from the family residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

The sympathy of the many friends of the family throughout the county and city will go out to the wife and family in their bereavement.

A PECULIAR ILLNESS SAID TO EFFECT SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL CHILDREN

The Examiner has been asked to draw the attention of the proper authorities to the prevalence of a peculiar illness among children who have been attending the South Central Public School.

In a considerable number of cases that have come to the attention of the doctors, the symptoms have all been of a similar type. They are characterized by high fever, unusual nervous and mental irritability, and numbness of the legs, arms and other parts of the body. Cases that have been treated take on very aggravated and alarming conditions, and have covered a period of from three to five weeks.

At a recent consultation of two experienced physicians of the city, in one severe case, it was apparently made evident that the whole system of the child had become poisoned, and that the poison was of a nature to be referable to or have a more or less direct relations to the unsanitary conditions of lavatories.

It appears that the attention of the Public School Inspector and some members of the Board of Education has been called to this matter; and they maintain that the lavatories are not at fault. However this may be, it is time that a searching inquiry be made, and the safety of the school children's health without placed beyond any menace without delay.

If, as is claimed by some, that the floors of the lavatories are quite frequently damp with urine and the air heavy and confined; and the younger children who make a habit of playing in these lower rooms at times, would become impregnated with the poison that breeds this illness, a remedy is easily applicable.

It is also stated that more teachers have become ill and left this school from some cause than is reported from any other. It is claimed that a number of parents have declared that they will refuse to send their children back to this school again until this matter is properly cleared up.

The facts supplied are presented, not with any alarmist idea, but to direct attention to a matter, which, if the conditions reported exist, should be promptly and thoroughly dealt with.

EX-MAYOR BRADBURN'S NAME IS MENTIONED WITH OTHERS

Mayoralty Talk is Light But Aldermen Green, Duffus and Mr. Bradburn's Names Have Been Heard Recently

Municipal election gossip includes with Ald. Green and Ald. Duffus as likely candidates, the name of ex-Mayor W. H. Bradburn. It is more or less understood that Ald. Green will be a candidate, although he has on no occasion declared himself. But the rumour that has lined him up for the mayoralty race has also included Ald. Duffus. There is little doubt that both these aldermen have been "seriously considering" the outlook and their prospects. Recently, the name of Mr. Bradburn has been mentioned with a significance that [illegible] for him if he is induced to enter the field. The real facts are that the average ratepayer is regarding the result of war more seriously than at any time since the opening. The following of war maps has been followed by thoughts of the funds which the people realize need their generous support. Hence, the necessity of a capable man at the head of affairs during the next year or two will incline the ratepayers to a more serious regard than ever for their mayoralty choice this year.

Autumn Rally Of The Local Council Of Women

A general meeting of the Local Council of Women was held Thursday afternoon in the Y.W.C.A. parlours. There was a good representation of the affiliated societies and the meeting was brimful of interesting business.

The convener of the Playgrounds committee handed in her finished report, showing a splendid beginning for the movement in Peterborough, with the finances all accounted for. The full report will be published later.

Delegates for the annual meeting of the National Council to be held in Toronto Oct. 20th to 28th were appointed and instructions given for their voting.

In answer to many requests, it was decided to have members who are conversant with the work of the Local, National and International Councils, meet each of the affiliated societies at their next session, and explain the work to them.

The appeal of the British Red Cross Society for financial aid, was discussed and the President asked to attend the City Council with the other delegates from various patriotic bodies, and assure the Council of our support in their making a generous grant.

SANITARY OFFICERS AFTER HOTELMEN

Will Report to License Commission Certain Neglect Here

Sanitary Inspector Spence intimated this morning that at the approaching meeting of the License Commissioners to consider the re-issuance of license to local hotels he would report those proprietors who had neglected to live up to the regulations of the Provincial Board of Health in regard to the provision of manure boxes. Dr. Clinton, the district officer of health, had instructed him to take this step and the law declares that a license cannot be granted to hotel keepers who have failed to live up to the Provincial Health Act. It is understood that this action is the last resort on the part of the Health officials in their endeavours to have the law uniformly observed.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS WELCOMED HOME

the scale of that accorded Lieut. Ackerman could not be given, but Peterborough, he knew, honoured her private soldiers just as much as she did her officers and as for himself, he, his car, and everything belonging to him was always at the disposal of the citizens for such purposes.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., in extending a welcome to the heroes of the occasion, remarked that it was upon the steadiness and bravery of the Privates in the trenches that success depended. The real welcome home was in the hearts of the people and he was sure that Peterborough's citizens were proud of their soldiers. It was the duty of all to do what they could to assist the returned soldiers. There was laxity at times sometimes the Government needed stirring up, but they were doing the best they could. As for the soldiers who were going away they need not feel they were leaving behind an ungrateful people.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, on behalf of the Peterborough Overseas detachment added to the words of welcome. "I my men and myself get to the front," he remarked to Ptes Langley and Mesley," we will endeavour to maintain the high standard the Canadian militia has reached, thanks to the actions of yourselves and your comrades."

The soldier heroes were greeted with a round of enthusiastic cheer when they were called upon to speak.

Pte. Mesley, who advanced to the front, supported by Rev Canon Davidson, said that he was not a speaker but he wished to thank everybody concerned for the welcome they had accorded him. "I have tried to do my bit," he said modestly, in conclusion.

Lt.- Col. Walker, at the request of Pte. Langley, expressed the soldier's sincere thanks for the reception.

The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close, after which the two soldiers were motored to their homes.

The People's Chimes were rung by Mr. R. J. Dewey during the parade in honour of the returned soldiers. "Home Sweet Home." "British Grenadiers." "Rule Britannia." "O Canada" and "God Save the King" were among the selections played.

Pte. Mesley's Experiences

In an interview with the Examiner Pte Mesley spoke of the historic charge that took place at Ypres on April 23rd, and which cost the lives of many gallant Canadians. Pte. Mesley received a bullet wound in the leg just above the knee. He was able to crawl back to the lines, where he was removed to a dressing station. He was then sent to Rouen and thence to Dublin, Ireland, where he remained for upwards of eleven weeks. Later he went to Bramley, and there met Capt. A. W. McPherson, M.D., and a number of Peterborough boys, including Pte. S. Mockett, Gunner Mordie McGill and others. Pte. Mesley also met a number of Peterborough boys in the 21st Battalion, 2nd Canadian Contingent, and also in the 39th Battalion. He met Pte Arthur Phipps at the base in Shorncliffe. Pte Phipps will be invalided home shortly. Of the actual number who went down in the battle of Ypres, Pte. Mesley knows but little. His recollection of the charge which took place shortly before daylight, was the sight of a number of ghostlike forms falling to the ground and the yells made by some of the wounded. Some of the latter were unattended for a whole day as it was impossible to come them on. Pte. Mesley believes that German snipers accounted for a number of them. The bullet that struck Pte. Mesley is believed to have been one of the dumdum variety. The Germans have the habit of reversing the bullets in the shell. The effect is far more disastrous than when it is left in its original position. Pte. Mesley had nothing but words of praise for the late Major G. W. Bennett and the rest of the boys of the 2nd Battalion. He is glad that he has had an opportunity of doing his "bit." He would not have missed it for anything. He often wonders at the good fortune which enabled him to go through and escape so lightly. "It sets a fellow thinking when you see so many killed outright," he said.

Pte Mesley has to use a cane when walking.

"Let us take the phrase, 'United we stand, divided we fall,'" said the lecturer on old savings. "Notice how everything, without exception, obeys that law." "Humph!" said the small man at the back of the hall. "What about the leg o' a pair o' steps?"

"GYM" RALLY AT Y.W.C.A. WAS WELL ATTENDED

Pleasant Evening Spent Last Night to Mark the Opening of the Fall Courses

Last nights "gym" rally at the Y.W.C.A. marked the opening of the fall work and was followed this morning by a largely attended junior class. The large attendance was an indication of the interest that is being shown in the gymnasium by the Y.W.C.A. members and it is also an opportunity for many to meet Miss Littlefield the physical directress. An instructive talk on physical work was given by Mr. Roper, physical director of the Y.M.C.A. and six young men of the "Y" gave a splendid exhibition of apparatus work. Miss Gwen Smith and Miss Palmer delighted the audience with a piano and violin duet. The rest of the evening was spent in social intercourse and closed a very promising rally. Refreshments were served. Gymnasium members are reminded of the special classes in land drill that Miss Littlefield has opened.

TAKING NO RISKS.

Sandy had just placed the diamond ring on the finger of sweetheart number two. His first love had pitched him, and, worst still, had refused to send back his ring. So he did not mean to be out of pocket in this his second venture, if the worst should happen again. "Noo," he said, "wad ye min' gien' me a receipt promisin' tae return ma ring gin ye should chainge yer min' aboot marryin' me?"

Some people would rather blame a man for what he doesn't do than give him credit for what he does.

Saves Kitchen Waste

There will be no more throwing away of good food if you keep a bottle of Bovril in the kitchen. Bovril, with its fine flavour and ease of manipulation, helps you to make delightful dishes out of cold food. Better soup, better stews—less expense. But it must be Bovril.

Must Look To The U. S. For Help

mination to go to the bitter end is hardened, and is accompanied by the strong conviction that the tide has turned everywhere from Calais to Petrograd.

The Recruiting Campaign.

Meantime the chief concern here is the closing stages of the long fierce duel between the advocates of voluntary and compulsory military service. All the labour organisations are working with fierce energy on their recruiting appointment. Lord Derby, chief of the entire recruiting movement, proclaims the conversion of the War Office to the fact that civilian methods appear to give the best results.

The situation in the Balkans is not yet clearly defined, but everybody is gratified with the promptness of the action of the Allies in landing at Salonica, and proving their determination to guard Serbia against another invasion of Germans and Austrians from the north, and from the threatened attack of her neighbour, Bulgaria, on the east at the same time, which threatened to overwhelm the little state.

John Dillon's Position.

One of the strange and unexpected consequences of this war is the position into which Mr. John Dillon, the Irish Leader, has been brought — I might even say, pushed. Up to this war, he had confined himself, like most Irish members, to the affairs of his own country. Of these affairs there is not and never has been a man, in modern Irish politics, who knew so much. It is partly the result of instinct; for no man is more thoroughly and completely Irish in sentiment; and what he feels, you may take it for granted, ninety-nine out of every hundred Irish Nationalists feel. But this unequalled knowledge of Irish politics is also due to extraordinary and sleepless industry. Every day Mr. Dillon reads twelve to twenty newspapers. He might well be taken for the head of a German press bureau—so untiring, so incessant, and so widespread in his newspaper reading. And he does not read newspapers after the easy and superficial fashion of most men. With a blue pencil in his hand, he marks every passage which seems to him important; and he cuts them out afterwards; and holds for further use. He watches every telegram with regard to sentimental opinions; but he especially watches every item in the record of Irish doings. A small branch in a small village of the United Irish League, passed a resolution which may reveal sheer folly or a useful hint as to the trend of opinion or a possible peril of disintegration in sentiment or organisation. Mr. Dillon immediately notes it and takes steps to counteract it if it be folly; or to consult it, if it be wisdom. In addition he has a gigantic correspondence with all parts of Ireland; for he has friends everywhere, as no man has spoken in so many parts of Ireland; or been brought into such close contact with every section and every place in the country. He has had to adjudicate on innumerable disputes; to lead innumerable revolts against injustice; he has been the guest of most of the strongly Nationalist bishops and priests of the country; and he is so patient, so energetic, so ready to listen to every representation, so prompt in answering every letter, that people feel they can turn to him for counsel and assistance in every possible difficulty or emergency.

A Sleepless Guardian.

Thus, then, he is the sleepless guardian of the interests of Ireland, and of the fortunes of the Irish party. In recent years he has found time to take a profound interest in foreign affairs. He belongs in British politics to that stern and unbending group or Radicals which looks askance on big military or naval armaments; and on anything like aggressive or jingo international tendencies. These views he shares, of course, in common with nine out of ten of the British Radicals. The great point of difference between him and them is his extraordinary promptitude, his tireless industry and his iron courage. It often happens in the House of Commons that a big section remains unrepresented in a debate for the very small but simple reason that from shyness, from timidity, from uncertainty as to how the cat is going to jump, very often because each man is waiting to get the lead from the other man, nobody is ready to open the fight; and the battle is lost because nobody fires the first shot. It is on occasions of this kind that the extraordinary gifts of Mr. Dillon come into play. He is a modest man; in private life he is painfully shy and reserved; he could be in a big hotel for weeks without knowing a single person in it from this natural and unconquerable reserve; though when he does meet people his courtesy, his wide knowledge, his tolerance, make him a delightful companion. But when he is sitting in the House of Commons, all these things disappear. You can see him always in his seat. There is no debate so dull, no topic so remote, that can drive him from his seat there; hour after hour, when the House is emptied of everybody else except the member who is speaking or going to speak, when everybody else is in the dining-room or on the terrace, the figure of Mr. Dillon is always there, glued, as it were, to his seat; and inexhaustible in his interest in the dullest and most trivial debate. In this unconquerable and inexhaustible tenacity you see the secret of much of the strange power he exercises in political and parliamentary life.

Extraordinary Contrast.

There is this other extraordinary contrast between the man inside and the man outside the House of Commons. The silent and shy man of private life, seems to be absolutely without nerves when he is in his seat in Parliament. He is ready to jump up without a moment's notice; no embarassment, personal or political, seems to occur to him. While other men are holding back, he is already in the midst of the raging seas of political controversy; and thus it is that while without him a whole new policy might be sprung without even notice and without the least attempt at opposition, this one man, with his bold initiative has rallied all the democratic forces; and the whole situation is transformed from mute acceptance to loud and fierce hostility.

In no House of Commons and at no epoch have these qualities of Mr. Dillon found such potent opportunities as in the present Parliament since the war began. For a long time there has been, as everybody knows, a steady pressure by Lord Northcliffe and the military party, to force conscription. This project excited very violent opposition among the representatives of Liberalism and Labour, and the Irish party were as fierce against it. But there was danger that this opposition might not find ready or strong utterance. In the sittings earlier in the year, Mr. Dillon jumped in and delivered a tremendous philippic against the conscription agitation, and when the Liberal members, who had been feeling strongly and yet were saying nothing—were at once liberated from their silence with the rapid crackling of an ice-bound river when the spring comes, and burst into wild and relieved cheers; and a Welsh member gave voice to the general situation, and the Radical feeling by shouting out "Liberalism will be saved by the Irish." It was at once a declaration of gratitude and a sigh of relief; and it was due to the fact that while so many were holding back, this prompt fearless Irishman had rushed to the attack.

Situation Serious.

The same thing has happened during the present Parliamentary sittings. The situation was very serious—very menacing, even. The Conscriptionists had been organizing for some weeks; they had private dinner parties; several officers had returned from the trenches to their seats in the House of Commons; and the Conscriptionist movement had received an immense impetus from getting to its head such ardent, prompt, and inspiring personalities as Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill. Everybody who has ever been brought into intimate contact with Lloyd George is conscious that when he gets a conviction into his head he can bring to its realisation a daring versatility, and above all a Napoleon-like promptitude that makes him master of an impregnable position almost before his opponents have suspected his movement. In addition, the Times and Daily Mail, under the inspiration of Lord Northcliffe, had been thundering and using all its staff for the purpose of carrying conscription by a coup de main, and presenting the alarmed and surprised anti-conscriptionists with an accomplished fact before they had time to prepare their defences. I believe some injustice was done to Lloyd George, for though keen on conscription, he has been too busy with his new munitions department to carry on a campaign for conscription, as he might have done if he had his hands freer. But others were more active; and it was certainly a possibility—especially in view of Russia's continued tale of reverses—that the Cabinet would be rushed into conscription.

This was the situation on the first day the House of Commons met; and again Mr. Dillon, surveying the ground, saw that if the Conscriptionists were not challenged they might succeed in rushing their schemes. The House had ben sitting only for a few minutes when Mr. Dillon was on his legs, and he was not on his legs for more than a few minutes when the whole aspect of the place had changed. The Liberal benches which had been silent, expectant, perhaps even alarmed, woke up into life; the fierce tide against conscription began to roll; in short, the situation was saved, and it became clear that whether conscription were to be defeated or not, it could not be rushed; and the anti-conscriptionists forces were given the time to rally to organize and to resist.

Mr. Dillon Acclaimed.

Again all the Liberal journals of the country acclaimed Mr. Dillon, and thus this strange thing came to pass that a man, who in the earlier years of his career, was hated as the most dangerous type of Irish revolutionary — whom Government after Government sent again and again to gaol, became a popular English idol among all the democratic forces that are now up in arms against the militarist and conscriptionist sections.

It seems unnecessary to say anything about the personality of a man so well known; but a few words are necessary because there is such a contrast between the public and the private man. This fearless and powerful political leader has all his life been a man of delicate health. At an early age he was stricken by that torturing malady dyspepsia; and had to run the course of all the waters of Europe from Vichy to Carlsbad. In addition, he was threatened by consumption, of which a member of his family had died. All his life he has been like a line length without breadth; for though he is about six feet one or two in height, he does not weigh more than one hundred and fifty pounds. He was startlingly handsome and striking in his appearance when he was a young man. Smooth, glossy, raven black hair, and a coal black beard surrended a face, oval in shape and olive in complexion; and he had and has strikingly large, soft coal black eyes with very perfect and delicate features. He looked indeed more Italian than Irish, more of a mystic than realist, more of an artist than a politician; you might have taken him for some young Mazzina, aflame with the revolutionary ardour that unified and liberated Italy. The hair has been brought to political life, interspersed with periodical imprisonments. But the eyes still remain the startling and beautiful feature of his face. The intense seriousness of the expression and his well-known delicacy of his health, as well as the shyness of the manner, have given the impression that he is a very sad man. He is nothing of the kind. I have never met a man so equable in dark hours; he never loses hope; in triumphant hours he never knows an undue exultation. He takes life as he finds it; is never bored, never impatient; is temperate by health and by temperament; absolutely self controlled; moderate in principle and in practice. He intended, originally to be a doctor, and took his surgeon's degree at an early age; and he has always had a modest fortune, which was increased in recent years by inheriting the business in Ballaghdereen, a small town in County Mayo, which has been in the family for generations. But his heart and his thoughts are in politics, and he is one of the few men in political life who say, after all its fatigues, all its disillusions, after imprisonment, after factionists, that he never regrets having adopted it as a career; hated, still more feared by landlords, by factionists, by lunatics, he is the most loved man by all the genuine Irish people, and the most respected by the British Democrats of any man in the Irish movement.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR, DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair fine and downy at first—yes but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN!

We were capping each other's "ifs" at a lunch party a day or two ago, and I think the winner was the little lady who reminded us that if Queen Victoria had died without sons, or if her male issue had been without offspring, then the Kaiser—this awful mad Potsdam William—would have been King of England. Makes you gasp a bit, doesn't it.—London Opinion.

ITCHING ECZEMA SPREAD OVER WRIST

Would Burn. Suffered Great Pain. Grandchild Also Afflicted. Used Cuticura. Now Perfectly Well.

Pentagoet, N. S.—"I had eczema on my right wrist for over a year. It broke out like a rash. It would itch and burn and I had to scratch. The skin was broken and the blood came through. Sometimes it spread all over my hands and I suffered great pain when I put them in water. I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they gave me quick relief, healing my wrist and hand in a few months.

"My grandchild was also afflicted with that trouble. He had it on his head, face and hands. We began to treat him with Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he began to improve. So we continued the treatment for a few months and he is perfectly well." (Signed) Mrs. Joseph Fougere, May 29, '15.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir.—It would seem evident that the Council in granting $500 towards the British Red Cross appeal, have only intended to give a "starter" to private generosity.

Our citizens will surely not allow such a sum to be Peterborough's answer to the call of the Motherland.

The message of Lord Lansdowne, suggesting street and other collections, on Oct. 21st, indicates the intention to have this fund the glad gift of a multitude of contributors.

Let us not criticize the Councillors who felt they could not rightly spend more of the people's money.

If they had passed an adequate amount we would have had no privileged part until we were forced to struggle with our tax bills.

As it is now, however, it is clearly necessary for the body of our citizens to add together all our contributions and do something which may in some measure, represent our city in this cause of the Homeland and Humanity.

In spite, then, of all the other demands for all the other worthy causes (such as the Children's Aid Society, which is so near to us, and important) let each citizen set aside an extra contribution to help Britain in her necessity.

It will be for our civic leaders to consider how these can best be collected on Trafalgar Day.

Perhaps there might be a large Promenade Band concert with patriotic addresses in the evening, or some other means to give expression to the glad loyalty and fellowship with which our united gift is offered.

Yours, etc.,
J. C. Davidson.

NEW PICTURES OF MAJOR BENNETT MONDAY NIGHT

Wheeler, another showing the boys sharpening their knives in the trenches. Also thirty slides of the British navy, showing the construction of a battle-ship from the laying of the keel to the finished product. A musical programme will also be presented.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Jack Green And Hubert Martin Likely Champions Of Collegiate Athletes

Several new records were established by the Collegiate boys in their annual field day of sports at Riverside Park yesterday. Jack Green, son of Alderman G. Walter Green, and a very promising all-round athlete, set up a mark of 42 ft. 10½ in. in the senior shot put as against the previous record of 31 ft. 7 in.

The honour of making the other record went to Herbert Young, who romped through the half-mile run without turning a hair. His time was 2.41 2-5 as compared with 2.50, the old record. Young was pressed at no stage, simply walking away from the field. With keener competition he might have clipped a few more seconds off the mark.

In addition to these very creditable performances, the whole list of events, with few exceptions, produced results that were close to the records, thereby indicating the abilities of the present youth at the Collegiate. With more diligent training the boys would doubtless make even a better showing, although it is remembered that the present records were established by the fleetest and most athletic boys that have passed through the Collegiate from year to year.

Mr. Roper, of the Y.M.C.A., who acted as starter, adopted a system of awarding points with the object of giving the boys as much of the "palmam" as they earned. The totals were not available to-day, and as a result the winners of the cups are not yet known. It is almost assured, however, that Jack Green takes the senior championship, and his work disclosed him as one of the best athletes who have contested for this honour.

The results were as follows:

Shot Put, Sr.—1, Jack Green, 42 ft. 10½ in.; 2, Harold Long, 37 ft. 4 in.; 3, Chas. Elliott, 37 ft. 1¼ in. Previous record, 31 ft. 7 in.

880 Yards, Sr.—1, W. Read, 2.25; 2, Hugh Austin, 2.29 4-5; 3, Jack Green, 2.35.

Senior Jumps

Standing Broad—1, Alex. Thomson, 8 ft. 9 in.; 2, Hal Crane; 3, Gerald McClelland.

Running Broad—1, J. Green, 17 ft. ½ in.; 2, Hal Crane; 3, F. Jobbitt.

Running High—1, Elliott, 4 ft. 10 in.; 2, J. Green; 3, Jobbitt.

Running Hop, Step and Jump—1, Elliott, 34 ft. 3 in.; 2, Crane; 3, McClelland.

100 Yards, Jr.—1, Hubert Martin, 12 1-5; 2, Herbert Young (won from Meserve on a toss); 3, Ralph Meserve.

220 Yards, Jr.—1, Hubert Martin, 29 1-5; 2, Otto Glidden, 29 3-5; 3, Ralph Meserve, 29 1-5.

880 Yards, Jr.—1, Herbert Young, 2.41 2-5; 2, Hubert Martin, 2.43; 3, Ralph Meserve and Glidden, 2.44. Previous record, 2 min. 50 sec.

Junior Jumps.

Running Broad—1, Martin, 14 ft.; 2, Young; 3, Angus McLeod.

Running Hop, Step and Jump—1, McLeod, 29 ft. 6 in.; 2, Karl Kirn; 3, Flowers.

Football Weather For To-Day's Game

Special to The Examiner:

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9—The weather man was pinch hitting like a fiend for feverish fandom to-day. What the poets would describe as "an azure sky" floated over sun-splotched Philadelphia for the second spasm of that all popular ditty, the world's series.

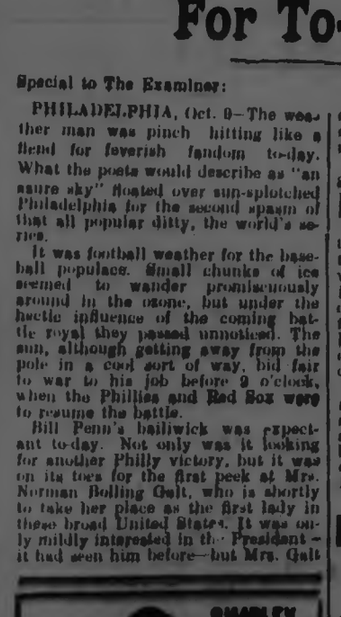
It was football weather for the baseball populace. Small chunks of ice seemed to wander promiscuously around in the ozone, but under the hectic influence of the coming battle royal they passed unnoticed. The sun, although getting away from the pole in a cool sort of way, bid fair to war to his job before 2 o'clock, when the Phillies and Red Sox were to resume the battle.

Bill Penn's bailiwick was expectant to-day. Not only was it looking for another Philly victory, but it was on its toes for the first peek at Mrs. Norman Bolling Galt, who is shortly to take her place as the first lady in these broad United States. It was only mildly interested in the President—it had seen him before—but Mrs. Galt even reached out and snatched some of Grover Cleveland Alexander's popularity.

And when Philadelphians can forget G. C. for somebody who can't play baseball, that somebody has to be somebody.

Next to Mrs. Galt, the Quaker interest centred largely in who's going to pitch to-day. There was not a whole lot of interest in that phase of it yesterday, as Pat Moran had but one ace. Pat had to lead his king to-day, and whichever way he started Bill Carrigan had a fair sized jump on him. Bill has several aces and quite a passel of kings.

It looked like Leonard for Boston and Chalmers for Philadelphia. Leonard is a bear. He has been proving it all season. Ball players say he is the best southpaw in the game since the demise of the late lamented Rube Marquard.



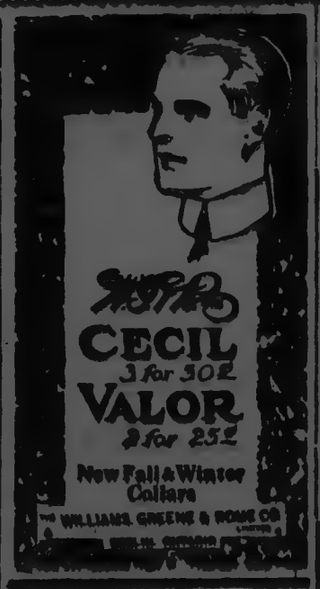
Pte. Charles Stenson Invalided Home

Another of the First Contingent Lads is Reported Nearing Home

Another of Peterborough's first contingent boys, Private Charles Stenson, is returning home, and although nothing definite has been received as to when he arrives, it was learned to-day that it is likely to be soon. He was with Company A, practically all Peterborough men. He was recently discharged as medically unfit and a friend reported that he was recently in Ottawa, returning home by easy stages.

ST. PAUL'S WOMEN'S OFFERING WAS $783.55

At their annual thanksgiving meeting of the St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society held yesterday afternoon, the total contribution was $783.55. A feature of the meeting was an address by Mrs. Horne of Cobourg, who dealt at some length upon the conditions arising out of the war.



COMMENT ON MARKET SITUATION

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Office of Publication, Toronto, October 7, 1915.

From all over Canada come reports that the potato situation this winter will be very serious. At present supplies are short. It is advanced that farmers are busy ploughing and threshing and do not have time to dig or sell, and that of course, is a condition which time will alter. But it is questioned very much by men who are in a position to know whether or not the potatoes are there, when farmers shall get down to digging and selling. There is no doubt, now, that the changeable and wet weather we have known all summer has played havoc with the potato crop and rot has set in all over Ontario and New Brunswick. Therefore, although prices will be slightly easier when threshing is over and supplies are a little more get-at-able, still, the rot which prevails will mean limited crops even at the best. Prices are away up. This week $1.10 to $1.15 is the price from wholesaler to retailer on Ontario stuff, and New Brunswick crop is a nickel higher. These prices, as opening quotations, have rarely been exceeded and it looks as though people are going to pay more for potatoes this winter.

The colder weather has stirred up quite a demand for cereals again, and rolled oats are feeling the benefit of this. It appears now that fall weather has definitely come to stay—although this year the weather man has been anything but infallible — and heavy breakfast foods will be in demand. Quite a call for cereals is reported by wholesalers this last few days.

Currants advanced again in Greece last week, and goodness knows they were high enough before. The situation over there at this writing is critical in the extreme, and if it develops into making Greece a belligerent nation — on whichever side — freights will be few and far between and so will men to pack and ship the products. With current prices where they are now, extremely high levels must be asked this winter, and if the war-cat jumps in Greece they may be away out of sigh. Coupled with this is the continued firmness in raisins. California has got to supply almost everybody with raisins this year, for the Valencia crop is cleaned up already. Both seeded and seedless are abnormally high. Peels are firm too, and altogether the dried fruit situation does not hint at easy levels. This indicates stiffer prices on cakes, Christmas puddings and the like.

The Madness of Hamlet.

The late John B. Herreshoff, the famous blind builder of yachts, once said at Bristol:

"It is hard to explain how I, being blind, can design yachts—hard because the average man is so ignorant of yacht construction.

"When I talk yacht construction to the average man I'm in the position of the critic to whom a chap said:

"'I went to see Hamlet last night.'

"'H'm, indeed!' said the critic, wrinkling his high brow. 'And now tell me, my good fellow, do you think Hamlet was mad?'

"I know darn well he was," said the other. There wern't three dozen people in the house.' "—Washington Star.

239.41 COLLECTED FOR BAND FUND

Drums Presented.

An interesting feature was the presentation by Lt.-Col. Johnston on behalf of the officers and men of the Peterborough Battalion, of the splendid set of drums, cymbals and music stands to the band. On making the presented, Lt.-Col. Johnston expressed the wish that the band would some day bear the drums in the streets of Berlin, a sentiment that was loudly applauded. Lt.-Col. Johnston announced that if the fortunes of war brought them safely home again, it was the intention to hand the drums over to the Speakers' Patriotic League and the citizens of Peterborough as a token of thanks for the many favours that had been accorded the men of the battalion.

Bandmaster Hughes, who got a great reception when he arose to speak, acknowledged the gift in a neat speech. On behalf of the band he wished to express their sincere thanks to the officers and men of the battalion. He hoped that Col. Johnston's wish would come true and that they would have a chance to use the drums in Berlin's streets. Bandmaster Hughes also expressed the hearty thanks of the band and himself to Adj. McElhiney, the originator of last night's concert, for the great assistance he had given and was giving the band in regard to the new instruments.

Made a Hit.

The Drill Squad of the Battalion, under the direction of Sergt. Oxley, made a big hit with their exhibition of physical drill with and without arms, and in their bayonet exercise. They were seen under much better conditions than at the Peterborough Exhibition, and the clockwork precision with which the men went through the different movements delighted the crowd. The squad was enthusiastically applauded as they marched off to the strains of "Bonnie Dundee" after completing their exhibition.

Master Percy Luther contributed two enjoyable recitations, "What Will You Do?" and "Come on Lads and Do Your Bit" in his usual appealing and effective style.

Pte. Frank Traynor, of the Peterborough Battalion, who performed behind the footlights before he decided to join the Canadian forces, sang "Dublin Bay" in good style, and then showed his versatility by reciting with fine dramatic effect "A Fight to a Finish."

Chief Howard, who made a most successful chairman, informed the audience that the Chief of Police and his men were unanimous in their praises of the splendid behaviour at all times of the men of the Peterborough Battalion.

"God Save the King" and three cheers for His Majesty brought the concert to a close at 9.40 o'clock.

No. 1 Platoon badly defeated No. 3 in a soccer game on the parade ground yesterday afternoon, Sergt. Calladine's bunch winning easily by 4 goals to nil. Sergt. Calladine played goal for the winners. Ptes. Bob Willshaw and Geo. Melton did the scoring, the former getting three of the counters. Sergt. Hartshorn was a satisfactory referee. No. 2 Platoon is after the scalp of the winners.

The local battalion will attend divine service at All Saints' Church to-morrow, parading at the Armouries at 10.30 o'clock.

PETERBOROUGH BOYS ELSEWHERE.

A private letter from Mrs. Wm. Vanevery gives the information that two of her sons are doing their bit. Walter Hodgson (a veteran of South Africa) has joined the 68th Battalion, Edmonton. He was a member of the 57th Band and now plays first clarionet in the band of the 68th. Another son, "Alf." Hodgson, late of Calgary, has been appointed Inspector of Munitions for the Russian Government, and was about a month ago sent to Dayton, Ohio, where the ammunition for Russia is being manufactured.

Most of the out-of-town men belonging to the Peterborough Battalion will be away on leave over the holiday.

Nearly all the new recruits have been fitted out with uniforms. Quartermaster-Sergt. Jack Williams had a busy afternoon yesterday handing out the kits.

Lieut. G. M. Huycke of the 33rd Battery, Barriefield Camp, is home for the week end.

Bandmaster Hughes and Band Sergt. Naples were the military representatives at the station this morning when Pte. Mesley arrived home. They were there merely by accident.

Our want ads outshine them all as result bringers in every want. Positions, tenants, lessons, homes, bargains, pets, stores, money investments.

CORNISH PRIDE.

The lil' grey Port climbs upwards.
A hundred houses or so,
An' watches across the harbour
Where gulls wheel to and fro.
But few be the boats to moorin's,
An' few the fishermen be,
For we've sent a hundred an' fifty
To fight on land an' sea.

Some be to Bodmin Barracks,
An' some to Maker Fort,
But mostly they'm in the Nevy
That 'listed in the Port.
So some in the North Sea watches,
An' some in the mine-fields sweep,
An' some be gone in the "Monmouth"
To the last long quiet sleep.

The men on the lost "Majestic"
Still live to thank the Lord,
But them on the old "Goliath"
Took Cap'n Death aboard.
'Tis just the luck o' the fightin',
Glory or Kingdom come,
So we lifts our prayers for the livin'
An' wishes them safe to home.

We'm not such a place as London
With millions o' men to send,
But we'm givin' our best for the country,
An' bravely bidin' the end;
We know that the toll be heavy,
'An' Peace at a price be bought,
But we'm proud of our hundred an' fifty
In the lil' grey Cornish Port.

ADVANCES FOR RUSSIA.

$10,000,000 a Month to be Furnished by British Banks.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The plan to rectify the decline in the Petrograd exchange rate, which has depreciated the value of the ruble something like 50 per cent., will, it is understood, take the form of acceptances by various joint stock banks and some financial institutions. The Russian State bank will place with the Bank of England Russian Treasury bills as a cover for acceptances and various banks will be asked to give three months' acceptances against that security.

Up to £3,000,000 ($10,000,000) monthly is the amount likely to be advanced by this method, and the bills will be renewable until the end of the war. The negotiations have not yet been quite completed and the amount of commission to be paid has not been divulged, but the release of this money for the benefit of Russian trade is expected to have an immediate effect.

THE BULGARS STRIKE AT SERBIA

8000 GERMANS DEAD AT LOOS

Enemy Is Crushed On The Uzonzo

ROME, Oct 10.—The following official communication was issued today by the War Office:

"The enemy is displaying great activity in constructing defensive works and establishing his communications. His exertions, however, are being seriously impeded by our artillery and by bold raids by small detachments of our troops.

"Along the Isonzo during the day of the 9th and the following night, after intense artillery preparation and volleys of hand grenades, a strong enemy force attempted attacks against our positions on the right of Slatefik, in the Plezzo basin, on Mrzlivrh, in the Monte Nero zone, at Doltje, in the Tolmino section, and at Plava and at Zagora, on the lower Isonzo. The enemy everywhere was repulsed with heavy losses, even leaving prisoners in our hands.

"One of our air squadrons, composed of fourteen aeroplanes, [illegible] day bombarded the office of the Austrian high command at Costanjvica, enemy camps at Opparchiasolla and the railway station at Nabresina. In spite of a heavy aerial bombardment, our aircraft returned undamaged. An Austrian aeroplane dropped arrows on one of our camps, but no damage was done."

A CHILD'S TONGUE SHOWS IF LIVER OR BOWELS ARE ACTIVE

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile, and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of Mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Co." Refuse any other kind with contempt. A Single Application will prove its merits.

Bulgarians Have Crossed Frontier

Despatches State That They Are Striking at Lish the Temporary Capitol of Serbia and Also at the Railway Line the Allied Troops Moving From Salonika Must Travel

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The Bulgarian attack on Serbia has begun. The Bulgarians crossed the frontier, said the London Times' message, at Garibogbaz near the Serbian City of Kniashevatz. Kniashevatz is about thirty miles from Nish, Serbia's temporary capital, which is on the railway the Allies must traverse from Salonika. Thus the Bulgarians are striking both at the Serbian governmental headquarters and at the Allies' lines of communication.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—It is officially announced that Von Mackensen is in command of the drive through Serbia with Von Koewesh and Von Gallwitz under him.

TERRIFIC FIGHTING.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—Despatches from the Western front indicate terrific fighting at several points. Allies have gained more ground near Souches.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Sir Gen. French in official statement says: "Since October 1st enemy has constantly shelled our new trenches south of La Bassee, we have pushed trenches forward steadily northeast of Loos, gaining ground varying from 500 to 1,000 yards between Hill No. 70 and Hulluch.

LULL ON EASTERN FRONT.

10,000,000 Are Effected By The New Laws

Anti-Treating Regulations Went Into Force Yesterday

LONDON, Oct 11.—The new anti-treating regulation in connection with the use and sale of alcoholic drinks goes into effect in London and the surrounding district to day.

It is the most radical and far-reaching effort for the curtailment of drinking yet tried, for it affects nearly 10,000,000 persons, and violations of the regulation are punishable by a fine of $500 and six months in prison. The authorities have given notice that these penalties will be inflicted without mercy on offenders.

The law will curtail the consumption of alcohol liquors by fifty per cent., and unless it is effective it will be followed by an order curtailing the hours of sale. The report of a few days ago that an order already has been drafted for a curtailment of hours was "prenature," according to officials, and there will be no such curtailment until the Board of Control has time to observe the effects of anti-treating.

All cafes, hotels, clubs and liquor dealers are compelled to exhibit prominently in their places a copy of the anti-treating ordinance, which says plainly that "each person must give his order and pay for his own drink." The only exception to the rule is that drinks ordered with a full meal may be paid for by a host.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

They reported that their vessel had been torpedoed three hours previously, but was still floating at 5 o'clock. The crew of 22 men were given time to enter the boats. One of the boats proceeded in the direction of a steamer coming from the west, which probably rescued the occupants.

A Pointer.

If you want to sell something, it is easier to have the buyers come to you. If you want to buy something you save time and energy if the sellers come to you. It is quite possible to have your head save your heels, to have others come to you instead of you going after them.

An advertisement in the paper will accomplish the result. Give adequate particulars of just what your needs are, or what you have to offer and some person who wants what you have, either cash or goods, will look you up.

Forty Per Cent. Are Paupers

Amongst every 1000 men who reach the age of 65, there are 400 who depend on public or private charity. Of the remaining 600, the great majority live on the border between poverty and decent comfort. Think what a blessing to every one of these a regular monthly income would be.

From this working of the law of averages you have no escape unless it be by early death or by providing yourself with some unfailing source of regular pecuniary income for your latter days.

You can do that to-day by means of a Canada Life Monthly Pension policy. It will guarantee you a monthly income for life, beginning at age 60, and from the day your first premium is paid it will be straight insurance, protecting your life in favor of your dependents.

Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Swarthmore, Penn. — "For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles."—Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Pa.

Canadian Woman's Experience:

Fort William, Ont.—"I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was weak and tired and I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it."—Mrs. WM. A. BUFFY, 631 South Vickar Street, Fort Williams, Ontario.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

The man who learns many languages does not always enlarge his mind. A porter in a Swiss hotel who spoke many languages with equal fluency and inaccuracy was once asked what was his native tongue. He replied that he did not know, but that he spoke all languages.

"But in what language do you think?" asked the persistent questioner.

"I never tink," was the prompt reply.—Youth's Companion.

Lacked Tact.

"A fellow told me today," confided Mr. D'Ippie, "that I didn't know enough to pound sand. He said that I was the blamedest idiot he ever saw. Now, what do you think of that?"

"I think it was dreadfully tactless of him," exclaimed Miss Keene indignantly.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Considerate.

"And would you marry me if I were a poor girl, working for a living?" asked the heiress.

"Darling," responded the accepted suitor, "it wouldn't be fair. You'd be doing enough in supporting yourself."—Philadelphia Ledger.

I went up to have a parting romp with Rosemary on the last night of her stay with me. The countess paid but little attention to us. She sat over in the window and stared out into the dusky shadows of the falling night. My heart was sore. I was miserable. The last romp!

Blake finally snatched Rosemary off to bed. It was then that the countess aroused herself and came over to me with a sad little smile on her lips.

"Good night," she said rather wistfully, holding out her hand to me.

I deliberately glanced at my watch. "It's only ten minutes past 8," I said reproachfully.

"I know," she said quietly. "Good night."

CHAPTER XXIII.

I Speed the Parting Guest.

FOUR o'clock in the morning is a graceless hour. Graveyards may yawn at 12, but even they are content to slumber at 4. I don't believe there is anything so desolate in this world as the mental perspective one obtains at 4 o'clock. Tombstones are bright beacons of cheer as compared to the monumental regret one experiences on getting up to greet the alleged and rustly overrated glories of a budding day. The sunrise is a pill. It is a deadly, dour thing. It may be pink and red and golden and full of all the splendors of the east, but it is a resurrection, and you can't make anything else out of it. Staying up till 4 and then going to bed gives one an idea of the sunrise that is not supported by the facts. There is but one way to appreciate the real nature of the hateful thing called dawn, and that is to get up with it instead of taking it to bed with you.

Still, I suppose the sun has to come up, and perhaps it is just as well that it does so at an hour when people are least likely to suspect it of anything so shabby.

Four o'clock is more than a graceless, sodden hour when it ushers in a day that you know is to be the unhappiest in your life; when you know that you are to say farewell forever to the hopes begot and nurtured in other days; when the one you love smiles and goes away to smile again, but not for you. And that is just what 4 o'clock on the morning of the 14th of September meant to me.

Britton and I set forth in the automobile just at the break of dawn, crossing the river a few miles below the castle and running back to a point on the right hand bank where we were to await the arrival of the boat conveying the countess and her escort. Her luggage, carefully disguised as crated merchandise, had gone to Trieste by fast express a couple of days before, sent in my name and consigned to a gentleman whose name I do not now recall, but who in reality served as a sort of middleman in transferring the shipment to the custody of a certain yacht's commander.

It was required of me—and of my machine, which is more to the point—that the distance of 120 miles through the foothills of the Austrian Alps should be covered and the passengers delivered at a certain railway station fifty miles or more south of Vienna before 10 o'clock that night. There they were to catch a train for the little seaport on the upper Adriatic, the name of which I was sworn never to reveal, and, as I have not considered it worth while to be released from that oath, I am of necessity compelled to omit the mention of it here.

Mr. Bangs went on to Vienna the night before our departure, taking with him Helene Marie Louise Antoinette, a rather shocking arrangement, you would say, unless you had come to know the British lawyer as well as we knew him. They were to proceed by the early morning train to this obscure seaport. Collingraft Titus elected to accompany his sister the entire length of the journey, with the faithful Blake and Rosemary.

Billy Smith was to meet us a few miles outside the town for which we were bound, with a word of warning if there was anything sinister in the wind.

I heard afterward from Poopendyke that the departure of the countess and Rosemary from the castle in the gray, forlorn dawn of that historic 14th was attended by a demonstration of grief on the part of the four Schmicks that was far beyond his powers of description, and he possesses a wonderful ability to describe lachrymose situations, rather running to that style of incident, I may say. The elder Schmicks wailed and bookoed and proclaimed to the topmost turrets that the sun would never shine again for either of them, and to prove that she was quite in earnest about the matter Gretel fell off the dock into the river and was nearly drowned before Jasper junior could dive in and get her. Their sons, both of whom cherished amorous feelings for Blake, sighed so prodigiously all the way down the river that the boat rocked. Incidentally during the excitement Jinko, who was to remain behind and journey westward later on with Mrs. Titus and Jasper junior, succeeded after weeks of vain endeavor in smartly nipping the calf of Hawkes' left leg, a feat of which he no doubt was proud, but which sentenced my impressive butler to an everlasting dread of hydrophobia and a temporary limp.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the boat slipped into view around the tree covered point of land and headed straight for our hiding place on the bank.

I shall not stop here to describe the first stage of our journey through the narrow, rocky byroads, that ended eventually in the broad alpine highway south and west of Vienna. Let it be sufficient to say that we jostled along for twelve or fifteen miles without special incident, although we were nervously anxious and apprehensive. Our guidebook pointed, or rather twiddled, a route from the river flats into the hills, where we came up with the main road about 8 o'clock.

We were wrapped and goggled to the verge of ludicrousness. It would have been quite impossible to penetrate our motor masks and armor even for one possessed of a keen and practiced eye. The countess was heavily veiled. Great goggles bulged beneath the green, gauzy thing that protected her lovely face from sun, wind and man. A motor coat two or three sizes too large enveloped her slender, graceful figure, and gauntlets covered her hands. Even Rosemary's tiny face was wrapped in a silken veil of white. As for the rest of us, we could not have been mistaken for anything on earth but American automobilists ruthlessly inspired to see Europe with the sole view to comparing her roads with our own at home. You would have said on seeing us that we knew a great deal about roads and very little about home.

Collingraft and Britton, the latter at the wheel, sat in the front seat, while I shared the broad cushions of the tonneau with the countess, part of the time holding Rosemary, who was clamoring for food, and the rest of the time holding my breath in the fear that we might slip over a precipice. I am always nervous when not driving the car myself.

We stopped for breakfast at a small mountain inn fifteen miles from our starting place. The countess, a faint red spot in each cheek and a curiously bright, feverish glow in her dark eyes, revealed a tendency to monopolize the conversation, a condition properly attributed to nervous excitement. I could see that she was vastly thrilled by the experiences of the hour. Her quick, alert brain was keeping pace with the rush of blood that stimulated every fiber in her body to new activities. She talked almost incessantly and chiefly about matters entirely foreign to the enterprise in hand. The more I see of women the less I know about them. Why she should have spent the whole half hour devoted to breakfast to a surprisingly innocuous dissertation on Schopenhauer and Nietzsche is, or was, beyond me.

How was I to know that tears lay close to the surface of those shimmering, vivacious eyes? How was I to know that sobs took refuge behind a simulated interest in philosophy?

We had luncheon packed ready to take with us and ate part of it on the way to our journey's end, diverging from the main road to find a secluded spot where we could spread our cloth and open our hampers without fear of interruption or, to use a more sinister word, detection. It was rather a jolly affair, that first and last al fresco banquet of ours under the spreading branches of mighty trees and beside the trickling waters of a gay little mountain brook that hurried like mad down to the broad channel of the Danube, now many miles away. The strain of the first few hours had slackened. Success seemed assured. We had encountered no difficulties, no dangers in town or country. No one appeared to be interested in us except through idle curiosity; villagers and peasants stared at us and grinned; policemen and soldiers stood aside to let us pass or gave directions politely when requested to do so. There were no signs of pursuit, no indications of trouble ahead. And so we could afford to be gay and confident at our midday meal in the hills bordering the broad highway.

We even went so far as to arrange for a jolly reunion in New York city at no distant day! I remember distinctly that we were to dine at Sherry's. To me the day seemed a long way off.

I suppose, being a writer of fiction, I should be able to supply at this point in the narrative a series of thrilling, perhaps hair raising, encounters with the enemy in the form of spies, cutthroats, imperial mercenaries or whatever came handiest to the imagination. It would be a very simple matter to transform this veracious history into the most lurid of melodramas by the introduction of the false and bizarre, but it is not my purpose to do so. I mean to adhere strictly to the truth and stand by the consequences. Were I inclined to sensationalism it would be no trouble at all for me to have Tarnowsy's agents shooting at our tires or gasoline tank from every crag and cranny or to have Rosemary kidnaped by aeroplanists supplied with drag hooks or to have the countess lodged in a village prison, from which I should be obliged to liberate her with battleax and six shooter, my compensation being a joyous rest in a hospital with the fair Aline nursing me back to health and strength and cooing fond words in my capacious ear the while I reflected on the noble endowments of a nature that heretofore had been commonplace and meek. But no! None of these things happened, and I decline to perjure myself for the privilege of getting into the list of "six best sellers."

So far as I am able to judge there was absolutely no heroism displayed during our flight through the hills and valleys unless you are willing to accept as such a single dash of sixty miles an hour which Britton made in order to avoid a rain shower that threatened to flank us if we observed the speed laws.

But wait! There was an example of bravado on my part that shall not go unrecorded. I hesitated at first to put it down in writing, but my sense of honor urges me to confess everything. It happened just after that memorable picnic luncheon in the shady dell. The countess, I maintain, was somewhat to blame for the incident. She suggested that we—that is to say, the two of us—explore the upper recesses of this picturesque spot, while the others were making ready for the resumption of our journey.

Shame, contrition, humiliation or whatever you may elect to call it, forbids a lengthy or even apologetic explanation of what followed her unfortunate suggestion. I shall get over with it in as few words as possible.

A PLEDGE BY PADEREWSKI.

His Fortune and Life's Work for His Native Land. He Tells Reto.

SCHENECTADY, Oct. 8—Ignace Jan Paderewski addressed the 800 delegates attending the Polish National Convention here recently. His appearance was followed by an ovation, and a great demonstration followed his eloquent plea for Poland's cause. The pianist pledged his fortune and his life's work to his native land.

"We alone are the only ones of the oppressed peoples that are unprepared to take up our task after the war is over," he said. "The reason for this is that we have no funds. You have given freely, and I expect you to keep up your good work.

"I come from people who left me no inheritance. All I have, or rather had, is what I made myself and for which I have worked hard. Some days I have worked as much as eighteen hours. All I have is my country's, and I will always work for it."

A SUCCESSFUL SCARECROW.

An American tourist had been boasting again in the village inn.

"Talking of scarecrows," he said, with a drawl, "why, my father once put one up, and it frightened the crows so much that not one entered the field again for a year."

He looked triumphantly around his audience. Surely that had settled those country bumpkins.

"That's nothing," retorted one farmer. "A neighbour o' mine once put a scarecrow into his potato patch, and it terrified the birds so much that one rascal of a crow who had stolen some potatoes came next day and put them back."—Pearson's Weekly.

SELF AND SIN SOWING REAPING CORRUPTION

Man's Present Experiences Are to be Overruled For Good.

The Fathers Ate a Sour Grape—Children's Teeth on Edge—Mankind in General Live Largely in Gratification of Lower Propensities—Man Should Live Far Above Mere Animal Plane—As Originally Created He Would Love and Seek God—Defilement of Sin—Blinded by Satan—God, Foreseeing All, Has Purposed Man's Deliverance—Happy Surprise Awaiting Awakened World Under Messiah's Kingdom.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publiction.]

Cleveland, O., Oct. 10. — Our city enjoyed today the privilege of a most instructive discourse from Pastor Russell. His text was from Galatians 6:7 — "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The Pastor said in part:

There is a very important lesson for all centering in these words of the Apostle. In our lives and characters there are certain things with which we have had nothing to do. You have nothing to do with sowing in your character that which you received from your ancestors. You had nothing to do with Adam's sin. You have to do only with what you yourself sow.

Those things which have come to us by heredity, not by our own volition—conditions over which we had no control—are all arranged for in our great Creator's Plan. In Christ God has made provision for the covering of all the imperfections that have come to us through the fall, so that we are not responsible for anything but what we sow. God will attend to what Adam sowed. He has provided a just Sacrifice for the unjust sinner; for as by man (Adam) came sin and death, so also by the Man Christ Jesus will come deliverance from those imperfections which result from Father Adam's fall.

This is applicable not only to the Church now, but will be applicable to the whole world during the Millennial Age. The world of mankind will not be held responsible for what their fathers sowed, though now all suffer for those things. "The fathers ate the sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge." (Ezekiel 18:2; Jeremiah 31:29, 30.) In this present life we shall suffer from these disabilities. But this is true only of this life. The seed of sinful sowing brings a certain harvest, the same as sowing wheat brings wheat.

What are the seeds that mankind have been sowing for six thousand years? We see the world in general sowing to selfishness, to self-gratification. Nearly all have thus been sowing, trying to serve their tastes, their preferences for food, clothing, everything under the sun. Man tries to satisfy his desires; and most of the fallen man's desires are for sinful things, that work to his injury. He still has in his brain some capacity for good things; but from the Adamic fall he has received a selfish bent. Thus the selfish impulses are more active than are the higher powers of his mind.

In the top of the brain lie the nobler powers of the mind; such as the sense of right and wrong, reverence, benevolence—good qualities, which bring man's highest blessing. Whoever can live in the top of his brain instead of down in the cellar, the base of the brain, will have the nobler life. There are organs that belong merely to the flesh. Some people live for food and drink only. Others do not care so much for these things, but have other morbid cravings. If we had none of the quality of aliment iveness in our brain, we would not enjoy eating, which would then be a mere matter of form and might be neglected. But if we are in good health we relish our daily meals. This should lead to thankfulness to the Lord, from whom all our blessings come.

If, however, the organ of alimentiveness is in control, is served particularly and continually, the person will live only to eat and drink. He will live down in the basement of his brain. He will not have the highest joys. Such a condition would be an over-balance of that part of the brain.

Man became unbalanced away back in Eden; and we have had six thousand years of development in that direction; so that by this time the heads of a good portion of mankind are largely empty as regards the nobler sentiments, or at best these organs are largely dormant. Men have been too much occupied with eating, planting, and building, with running after the gratification of the pleasures of sense, living more like animals than like beings created in the image of God.

Gratification of legitimate cravings is all right to a certain degree with mankind. There is nothing wrong in a man's enjoying his food and other bodily comforts. But it is the making of these the chief aim of life —the sitting or lolling around to kill time, and the doing of this, that, and the other thing just as they happen to come along—that snows the empty head. Some very good people, as the world goes, spend considerable time in dancing and card-playing. To me it seems that those who have time to burn, to kill, those who spend their time in thinking merely about things which are on the same level with the horse and the dog, are living on a very low, animal plane. They do just what a good breed of animal would do.

Man's Aspirations if Perfect.

God has given man a brain very different from all the lower animals. We have the quality of brain and the powers of mind to reason along abstract lines. We can study mathematics, dynamics, astronomy, geology, political economy. We can discern between right and wrong. We can know God's will and study His Word. Animals cannot do these things.

But the average man does not care to think about God or about anything beyond the interests of the present life. He does not wish to think about dying. He ought to think, "There is a great God; He has a sympathy and love for me, and I would be glad to know what He has to say to me." It would be natural to a noble mind to ask what God has for us, and to reason that it must be something good, because God is good. God is wise, just, and loving, and has a deep interest in His creatures.

If things were as they should be, man would be feeling after God. He would desire to know about the Divine Plan of the Ages—how sin came into the world; how God has sympathy, and sent His Son to be our Redeemer, to make satisfaction for sin; how in due time He will make satisfaction for the sins of the whole world. Man would be interested to learn how it is that some know of all this beforehand, in order that they may be associated with the Lord Jesus in blessing the world. Why do they not care to know these things? It is because Satan has blinded men's minds, and because they are so fallen that to a large degree they have lost the image of God, in which man was originally created. Moreover, false doctrines have come in, also from Satan and the other fallen angels.

Present Experiences a Lesson to Angels.

The Apostle Paul says that "the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) They do not believe because their eyes are holden; for Satan does not wish them to see the light of the glorious goodness of God shining in the face of Jesus Christ. If men could only get a glimpse of God's goodness in Christ, the entire world would be converted. Why, then, does not God reveal His glory to them? For the reason that He purposes to do so in the Millennial Kingdom. Through Christ He will then open the blind eyes, unstop the deaf ears, and cause all men to know the Lord.—Isaiah 35:5; Jeremiah 31:34.

For a wise purpose God has permitted Satan to take his course. But in due time the Almighty will take control—in the very near future. He told our first parents that they should die because of their sin. It was Satan who said that they should not die. If they chose to believe Satan, the responsibility was their own. God permitted them to take that course.

Why should God do this? Because He wished to teach a great lesson; first to the angels, then to men. The angels are learning every day. They desire to look into these things, as the Apostle Peter assures us. (1 Peter 1: 10-13.) Throughout the six thousand years during which God has permitted evil on earth, the angels have been looking on. The introduction of evil was a great test to them at first. When they saw the power of Lucifer, Satan, and observed that God did not correct him at the beginning of his career of rebellion, some of them concluded that God could not stop him. So many of them decided to follow Lucifer.

Did God wish this? Yes; if their hearts were disloyal, He did not desire to have them associated in the Kingdom regulations. So He let them have the test. He let them take their own course. Now that they are over in Satan's ranks, they are finding that God has the power; but they have demonstrated that they have not been in harmony with Him. For a time the other angels were bewildered; nevertheless, they trusted God. They have now seen the wisdom of His course.

All the while God had the power, but simply did not exercise it. The holy angels see now how foolish it would have been for them to choose sin. They can see that doing right is better than doing wrong. All the holy angels perceive that they were wise to trust God, even though for a while it looked as though He was powerless to stop Satan or to save the fallen race that Satan had led astray.

Man's Present Condition Temporary.

The world of mankind have been going down into death, but the world is not eternally lost. God has known all the time what would be the outcome and all the time He has had a Plan for their recovery. They have been only asleep in death; for God, before He revealed His Plan of Redemption, had it in mind for man. In fact, He had it in mind before the foundation of the world. The Lord Jesus was the very Essence in that Plan, the very Center. He was to be the great Ransom-sacrifice for all, and later the great King of Glory to lift mankind out of death. All this was known to the Father. Jesus was the Lamb slain (in Jehovah's Purpose) from before the world was.

It is a good thing to find out how great a God we have; to learn that He is not only all-wise, all-powerful, and all-just, but—still more precious —that the very essence of His character is Love. This great Plan which God is varrying out has a still further purpose in developing sympathy and other noble traits in mankind. He is letting the world go down to the tomb; but no one suffers very long.

This condition has lasted for more than six thousand years, although no one person has suffered more than a small fraction of that time. Many have been taken away very suddenly; many have died in infancy; some have died of consumption or of fever; others have been killed with bullets; still others with poisonous gases. But it was only a brief experience. It is not like roasting in torture throughout all eternity. For a person to suffer for a few days, to have a toothache, a head-ache, a heart-ache, may do him good.

Brevity of Life Now a Blessing.

Man's experiences may develop patience and give the sufferer sympathy for others. All of our aches and pains should make us sympathetic. If you never had any pain, you could not imagine what was the matter with people when they talked about their aches and pains. But since we all have aches and pains, bruises and heartaches, we know what they are and can sympathize with others who have them. Then, besides, these experiences are only for a moment, so to speak—"light afflictions," in comparison to the blessings in store for humanity.

These things are giving the world a great lesson. Mankind are not bound for eternal torment. They are simply falling asleep in death for a time. It is better that they fall asleep than that they should stay awake long—better under present conditions. If they are inclined to do right, it is better that they fall asleep, for the reason that their experiences are not prolonged and are not so much of a conflict. It is better also in the case of those who do evil, who know how to make bombs and all kinds of deadly instruments for injuring and destroying their fellow-creatures, or who rob the widow and the orphan. If such were not cut off in death, we do not know what wickedness they would learn to do in a thousand years. Some in their selfishness would get all the money in the world. It is a good thing that they are dying off, dear friends. We are glad, however, that they are merely falling asleep and not dying like a beast, to live no more.

LUNG TROUBLE

Was never cured by dosing the stomach. The two organs are not connected. If they were, food swallowed would choke you. For lung and bronchial troubles you must breathe the cure: and you can't breathe cough syrups, tonics and syrupy compounds! Peps provide the rational treatment for coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung troubles. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes —not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing.

On the face of it, now, does this not sound more reasonable than drugging the stomach? Try one box of Peps. A trial will cost you only 50c., and the good you will reap—well, health cannot be expressed in money terms. Be sure of the article when ordering from druggist or store. Just four letters

Peps

God has a future of glorious opportunity for all. We are glad that our God has so wonderful a Plan. There are some things that we do not yet fully understand, but we are sure that our great Creator knows what He is about. There is no need to worry about the final outcome. We see enough to convince us fully and to satisfy us; and we rest it there. If you are not trying to do right, not trying to please the Lord, then you have something about which to be concerned.

Experiences on Awakening From Death.

All these present conditions will be so overruled as to have a beneficial effect upon the world. Mankind fall asleep in death with certain knowledge and certain experiences. Even those errors which God has permitted to come in will work out good. How could they ever work out good? In this way:

Imagine some of the poor people awakening in the Resurrection Day and taking up the same thought with which they fell asleep. They will wake up saying, "Where am I? Where is the Devil? Where is the fire? and the torment?" "There is neither Devil nor fire around here," they will be told; "Those things that were told you when you were alive before were simply scare-crows which the Devil used to drive men away from God! They were the very things that made you hate God. But we have found that the Bible tells about the Love of God, and says nothing whatever about those dreadful things we used to be taught. They were doctrines of devils. Cheer up, Brother; you are just entering upon the best time of your life."

"Are you deceiving me?" he will ask in bewilderment. "Oh, no!" will be the reply. "Satan is bound for a thousand years, that he may deceive the people no more. You are going to have a grand time, coming into harmony with God, learning to know Him, whom to know is life everlasting. We shall all get everlasting life if we do right." "Shall I become an angel?" he will ask. "No; you are too late for that. You knew some saintly people when alive before, did you not?" "Oh, yes; my parents were devout Christians." "They are in the Kingdom now, joint-heirs with our Lord Jesus Christ, reigning with Him. During the Gospel Age whoever would walk in Jesus' footsteps might have a change of nature and a special resurrection to become spirit beings—like Christ."

"What can I get?" "Restitution—restoration to what Adam was when created. We are told that all our infirmities will gradually disappear, until by the close of Christ's Reign we shall be absolutely perfect, if we keep in the right way. Then, if we remain in harmony with God, we shall receive everlasting life. Now is your opportunity. Be one of those who will live only for God. In the past you sowed to the flesh. You wasted your time. You used your whole body improperly. You have learned a lesson; put it to good use. Hereafter, try to live in harmony with God's will. This will be sowing properly; and by and by you will have a good crop."

Thus those living when the Kingdom is set up can enlighten others who come up from the tomb; and these in turn can assist others. The incorrigible alone will suffer the Second Death—destruction.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime.
Hark, the rumbling in the nations,
Iron crumbling with the clay:
Hark, what soundeth? 'Tis creation
Groaning for a better day."

For His Own Use.

A small boy who was sitting next to a very haughty lady in a crowded omnibus kept on sniffing in a most annoying manner. At last the lady could bear it no longer and turned to the lad

"Boy, have you got a handkerchief?" she demanded

The small boy looked at her for a few seconds, and then, in a dignified tone, gave the answer:

"Yes, I have, but I don't lend it to strangers."—London Mail.

NO "SLUMS" IN NEW YORK.

I have made an amazing discovery. It is the result of three days and nights of going to and fro in New York—sometimes alone and sometimes with a wise but not cynical detective. And the amazing and disconcerting discovery is this: There are no slums in New York.

You can find crime and criminals; you can find vice, poverty, drunkenness, disease, but you cannot find a slum—such slums as blacken and fester in Antwerp, Genoa, Naples, Paris, London and many another old world city. The reason is that you cannot have a slum without filth, and New York is a clean city. Neither crime nor poverty nor crowds make a slum. You must have filth as well, and that is what New York hasn't got. I looked for it east and west and north, from river front to river front. Everywhere, anywhere, were crime, vice, mean poverty. Everywhere thieves, rogues, outcasts, men and women isolated from their kind by sin or mere suffering, but no slums.

Dirt, of course, is relative, but the tenements—even the old nests of low houses lined with fire escapes—were habitable human dwelling places. And the night going detective declared he could show me nothing worse. I wanted to see the fetid caves where wretchedness lay moaning on garbage heaps, the windy garrets where it starved, and there were no fetid caves.

In the old streets and the dingy courts of Paris you can still find hundreds of them; you have but to walk peeringly through the street of the Three Gates or the street of the Iron Pot; you have but to go into the suburbs that lie outside the fortifications—for year by year the centrifugal force that stirs in every great agglomeration of human atoms has thrown Parisian beggardom into that dreary circumference.

But in the washed and lighted underworld of New York there are no slums. There is not one slum that half deserves the name. Wretchedness all you please; hunger in the streets and on the housetops, it may be, but none of those gangrened holes of filth without which no real slum can exist.

I speak almost with the decision of an expert, for I spent many years prowlingly investigating the slums that rot and blacken the surface of Europe from Moscow to Lisbon.—Vance Thompson in New York Sun.

A Single Application Banishes Every Hair

(The Model Beauty)

Here is how any woman can easily and quickly remove objectionable, hairy growths without possible injury to the skin: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and, excepting where the growth is unusually thick, a single application is enough. You should, however, be careful to get genuine delatone.

By the Author.

Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian poet, who gained the $40,000 Nobel prize for literature, is a well known figure in London society, and to a London correspondent he said recently:

"In India the little children babble verse at the age of five or six. We are not like you. With you, if a full grown man or woman suddenly manages to write a few rimes the thing is deemed almost a miracle.

"I sat in a magazine office the other morning while the editor opened his mail. He tossed a letter to me.

"'That's the sort of thing I'm continually receiving,' he said.

"The letter ran:

"Dear Editor—The poem inclosed is original in me, and I had no help in thinking out same. It is a true poem. I wrote it myself, and there is more where it came from if I had any inducement to think same out. You may say 'Original' at the top of same, for every word is by

When Soldiers Were Flogged.

It would have needed a very alluring form of advertisement indeed to attract men to the English army a hundred years ago. Writing of that period a writer says: "Flogging was almost universal. The maximum number of lashes were gradually reduced from 1,500 to 300, but the notion that discipline could not be maintained without summary punishment continued to be believed, and Wellington himself dealt with flagrant cases by hanging the culprits upon trees in the public roads. One result was that only men belonging to the lowest classes would join the army." In 1771 a sentinel in the guards was flogged in St. James' park so severely that he subsequently died raving mad. His offense consisted of saying that "there was no more encouragement for a good soldier than for a bad one."

Too Much Cavity.

One afternoon an esteemed citizen went into a barber shop to have his priest reaped, but no sooner had he taken a seat in one of the chairs than he dropped off into heavy slumber. Apparently the shave artist was having his own troubles in manipulating the customer, and after making several attempts he thoughtfully paused.

"Excuse me, sir," said he, gently shaking the man in the chair, "but would you mind waking up? I can't shave you while you are asleep."

"Can't shave me while I'm asleep," exclaimed the victim, with a wondering expression. "Why not?"

"Because," explained the barber as softly as possible, "when you fall into slumber your mouth opens so wide that I can't find your face."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

THEY PLAYED MARBLES.

An elderly gentleman now residing in Washington tells this story about Abraham Lincoln:

"I was about ten years of age and given violently to the game of marbles. One cold March day my companions and I were playing on the sidewalk before my father's shop when I slipped on a piece of ice and fell, cutting my chin. The other boys seized as many of my marbles as they could and made off. Wild with anger, I started after them, calling them names and threatening to annihilate them, and so on. Suddenly a hand on my collar stopped me, and a deep voice said:

"'We've got enough ill feeling going on in this country these days without you boys catching it!'

"A big men swung me around and wiped my wounded chin and then went on:

"'I saw what they did, son. Have you any agates left? Good! I'll put up three chiny alleys, and we'll see who'll win.'

"He drew from his pocket three marbles.

"'I got them from my boy Tad,' he explained, and then I knew who he was.

"There on the street I played marbles with the president for five minutes, and he let me win. Here are the marbles — a precious possession!" — Exchange.

Reading Music.

The literary man, writes a correspondent, may very well, when he is lying on his back, console himself with literature. But what is the scientific man, with no particular interest in literature, to do? A certain professor of my acquaintance once got through a month of painful convalescence by the aid of another kind of reading. He read through the scores of his favorite composers. He had no ear for the rhythms of literature, but a fine ear for the rhythms of music, and he assured me that he heard the music as he read the scores. He said that during that month he really came to understand Beethoven and that no performance of his work ever satisfied him afterward.—London Spectator.

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own case. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers of Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SOLDIERS ON THE BATTLE-FIELD.

"There is no greater patriot—not even the soldier on the battlefield—than the man who battles with the stubborn soil and makes it yield for the support of the nations." We have in Canada a power of dominion in our resources that will make the power that comes with strategy, brute force and armament, insignificant. If we know what we have and use it wisely, we will make others dependent upon us.

The stomach is the center of the body from which radiates our vitality, strenuosity, our fighting strength. A healthy stomach turns the food we eat into nourishment for the blood stream and the nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery refreshes and tones up the stomach walls. It removes the poisonous gases from the system.

The first day you start to take this reliable medicine, impure germs and accumulations begin to separate in the blood and are then expelled through the liver, bowels and kidneys.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day from any medicine dealer; it is a powerful blood purifier and tonic.

Depend upon this grand remedy to give you the kind of blood that makes the skin clear, the mind alert, the vision keener and puts ambition and energy into the entire body. Contains neither alcohol nor narcotics. Its ingredients are made public and printed on wrapper. It's a pure alterative extract made with glycerine from native roots and herbs.

NORWAY'S PLIGHT AS RESULT OF WAR IS PERPLEXING

CHRISTIANA, Norway, Oct. 1.—Something very close to a panic is spreading over both Norway and Sweden as the result of the alarming scarcity of food and the unprecedented prices which are demanded for the simplest kind of food.

Norway is now on the point of following Sweden's lead in prohibiting the export of fall provisions of which there is a present shortage, in order that prices may be brought down within reach of the poorer classes.

The advance in prices in Norway is approximately the same as in Sweden, but in some cases it has been even more marked. Herring, which is one of the main articles of diet among the peasant population, have risen from two cents to four and one-half and five cents apiece, and the present price of oatmeal is 250 per cent higher than it was before the war.

The meat shortage was temporarily relieved some time ago, as it was in Sweden, by the slaughter of a large number of cattle, which there was not enough grain to feed, but prices have now advanced again, reaching the highest level ever known in Norway.

Country is Richer.

It is a curious paradox, however, that as a nation Norway's economic and financial condition is better than before the war. Norway's tremendous exports, at the same time that they have drained the country of its necessary provisions for home consumption and carried masses of the people to the verge of starvation, have brought a tremendous amount of money into the country, enabled the country to pay for all its imports, and left a large surplus to be used for industrial purposes and public loans.

The Bank of Norway, the Government's banks, had a year ago $20,000,000 of gold in its vaults. To-day it has $40,000,000. A year ago it had issued paper money to the extent of $5,500,000 beyond its deposits, while to-day, with the same amount of paper currency in circulation, it has a reserve of $35,000,000.

Deposits in private banks are at present $30,000,000 greater than a year ago on the same date. These banks had to their credit in foreign banks $700,000 last year. This year they have $10,000,000. The war has thus brought Norway a flood tide of prosperity, and if Government action is taken to reduce present prices and provide the poorer people with food, Norway will have little to lose and a great deal to gain from a long war.

Norway's friendship for England and the fact that she has had less to complain of in the restriction of imports than Sweden have made her trade question a much less serious one that in her sister country. Her chief grievance against England remains the English censorship of her mail and cable messages to America and other neutral countries. Norway is still trying to devise a more direct and speedier communication with America.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts of Bladder Bothers You Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

PLENTY OF MEN FOR WAR

[illegible] Daily Mail.

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth a register was taken, apparently with satisfactory results, as regards men and munitions. William Harrison, in his "Survey of England," a work compiled during that period, writes: "There is almost no village so poor in England (be it ever so small) that hath not sufficient furniture in a readiness to set forth three or four soldiers, as one archer, one gunner, one pike and a billman at the least. As for able men for service—thanked be God!—we are not without good store, for by the musters taken in 1574 and 1575 our number amounted to 1,172,674.

THIS CHILD (BADLY BURNED) WAS SAVED BY ZAM-BUK

Mrs. A. Bruhm lives at Northfield, N.S., and her little daughter, while playing at a bon-fire, was set ablaze. She was burned so seriously that her life was despaired of. Zam-Buk was applied to the burns, and not only did it give relief, but it healed the burns and saved the child's life. "You may rest assured," writes the grateful mother, "that our home will never be without Zam-Buk!"

You need no harrowing details, no high-flown language to gather this lesson:—For burns—sustained while ironing, opening the oven door, striking a match, handling a stove lid—just as soon as any burn is sustained put on Zam-Buk. In from ten to thirty minutes, according to the severity of the burn, you will have ease!

Just as good for scalds, cuts, etc., and a positive specific for eczema, ulcers, skin diseases and for piles. 50 cents, all druggists and stores, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Why not try it?

ANCIENT SURGERY.

Instruments of Two Thousand Years Ago Are Exhibited in London.

A set of 37 very remarkable ancient Greek surgical instruments has been discovered near the site of Kolophon, in Ionia, and has been brought to England. The instruments (says a correspondent of The London Times) show a type of workmanship unequalled in any other extant specimens, and generally reveal the very great progress in surgery which the ancients achieved. The date, though somewhat uncertain, is probably the first or second century A. D. With two exceptions, all the instruments are of bronze. The blades of the knives were originally of steel, but in each case this metal has been almost completely destroyed by oxidisation (rust).

It is an interesting fact that in ancient times knives were made either of stone or bronze. The custom was followed, not because iron was unknown, but because that metal was held in superstitious fear. Amongst the five pairs of forceps or grippers in the find is a large and beautifully made instrument, the handles of which are shaped to represent two dolphins. This is probably a pair of "polypus" forceps, used for removing growths. The "bite" of the teeth is strong and close. Another interesting pair of forceps is that used for extracting arrow and lance-heads from wounds. An elevator for raising depressed bone is another interesting exhibit. Its presence in the collection would seem to prove that after battle, efforts must have been made to treat surgically even the most serious wounds of the skull. Modern surgeons are apt to imagine that brain surgery is a recent discovery, and that operations for the elevation of pieces of depressed bone were invented within living memory.

Another and still more remarkable brain instrument is the "drill-bow" for operating a skull trephine. This instrument proved a very great puzzle at first, and was supposed to represent some sort of measuring appliance. Research, however, has shown that it is a bow which, when fitted in a string, was used to rotate a bone drill or skull trephine very much as drills and trephines are still occasionally rotated. Far from being a triumph of modern surgery, skull trephining or trepanning is a very ancient manoeuvre. Skulls have been discovered again and again showing trephine openings, and the natives of the South Sea Islands are actually known to practice the operation.

In classic times this was not undertaken, as at present, to relieve the pressure from an abscess or an effusion of blood, but to allow exit to the evil spirit supposed to be troubling an insane or epileptic patient. That the Greek and Roman surgeons achieved good results is certain. Probably the purity of the atmosphere in which they worked made them to some extent independent of antiseptics. They used mandragora juice or atropin as anaesthetics.

Ancestral Pride.

"Do you still want this genealogy?" asked the man who digs up such things.

"Sure, I do. Why not?"

"Well, I've found that your great-great-grandfather was hanged for murder, your great-grandfather was imprisoned for robbery, and your grandfather was tarred and feathered for beating his wife. That's not a very proud record, is it?"

"I should say it is. Shows how my family is getting better each generation. I'm an improvement on the whole bunch. Never been in jail yet. Let me have those records. I'm proud of 'em!"

Willing To Tell.

Sometimes it is a pleasure to answer questions, even if the questioner may put them in an unpleasant way.

"What do you do for a living?" asked a lawyer, frowning horribly at a hatchet faced young man who was undergoing cross-examination.

"I, sir," answered the witness hastily diving into his side pocket, "am the agent for Dr. Korker's celebrated corn and bunion destroyer, greatest remedy of the age, used by all the crowned heads of Europe, never known to fail to remove the most obdurate corns in less than twenty-four hours or money cheerfully refund"— Here the court interfered.

Whales.

The largest of all mammals are not the elephants, but the whales. A large elephant weighs about six tons, but the largest whale reaches the immense weight of 150 tons and would furnish four carloads of flesh and blubber. About forty different kinds of whales and dolphins are known, and, although they live in the open sea and look like fish, they are not fish at all, but are true mammals breathing air and feeding their young on milk, like cows and horses.

REED'S WITTY THRUST.

There are many stories of the caustic wit of Thomas B. Reed, the famous speaker of the house of representatives. One of his most amusing thrusts was delivered at William S. Holman, a member of congress from Indiana. It was perhaps the keenest witticism ever uttered in debate on the floor of the house.

Holman was a constant objector to the expenditure of money by congress and had honestly earned the title of "Watchdog of the Treasury." One day, when the committee was perfunctorily putting through a number of bills for the erection of government buildings in various cities, Holman was constantly on his feet, objecting to their consideration. But when Indiana was reached and the committee began to propose appropriations for buildings in the towns of that state Holman's objections came with much less spirit and finally ceased altogether. When at length a bill was offered that carried a generous appropriation for a building in Holman's own town, he rose and expressed hearty approval. Hardly had he taken his seat when Mr. Reed was on his feet. "Mr. Speaker!" he shouted; and then, in gently sentimental tones, he recited Byron's familiar lines:

'Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark
Bay deep mouthed welcome as we draw near home!

And the "great objector" forgot to object any more that day!—Youth's Companion.

Woes of an Old Time Writer.

High among unconventional writers stands William Prynne, a London journalist in the days when there were no journals, days when a bulky pamphlet took the place of a letter to one's favorite newspaper. Prynne published about 200 of such pamphlets and is said to have averaged a sheet of print a day throughout his life. And he worked in a quilt cap coming over his eyes to shield them from the light, and stuck at his table all day, being served with a roll and a pot of beer every three hours. And he reaped the reward of his literary efforts in the branding and pillory and ear cropping that every political writer risked in that age.

Honesty Is Golf.

The sooner a boy, or a man for that matter, learns to live up to the motto "Honesty is the best policy" in golf, as in other things, the better for him. There is no game which gives a competitor a better opportunity to cheat. But for that very reason there is no game in which the cheat, when discovered, as it usually is sooner or later, is looked upon with greater contempt. —Francis Ouimet in St. Nicholas.

Complicated.

"You must stop worrying and take a holiday," said the suave practitioner.

"My dear doctor," replied the irritable patient, "if I could get my affairs into a shape that would permit me to take a holiday I'd be so relieved that I wouldn't need one."—London Opinion.

In Good Company.

A contemporary wants to know what's become of the old fashioned man who used to say, "I says, says I."

When last seen he was standing on a street corner in close conversation with the old fashioned man who says, "Seyes to me, sezee."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THREE EMPIRES.

Monarchies That Practically Sprang Into Being Overnight.

Prior to Jan. 18, 1871, the German empire, as we know it today, had no existence. Instead it was a jumble of kingdoms, states, duchies, grand duchies and principalities, all joined together by a like language and common political aspirations, it is true, but otherwise quite separate and distinct.

Then came the historic ceremony in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles. Paris had just been captured by King William of Prussia, and it was held to be a fitting time and place to proclaim him the first German emperor. Never since the dawn of history was an empire born more dramatically.

By a strange irony of fate, too, its birth took place amid the ruins of the French empire, itself the creation of a day, or, rather, to be strictly accurate, of a night. France went to bed on the evening of Dec. 1, 1851, a republic. When it awoke next morning it was an empire. During the hours of darkness Paris had been occupied by troops, and the prince-president had become Napoleon III.

Equally sudden and almost as sensational in its way was the birth of the modern Greek empire. After the yoke of the Turks had been thrown off in the war of independence the country became a republic. But the people soon tired of that democratic form of government and promptly proceeded to assassinate their first and only president. Then they met together, elected a king and settled themselves down to be ruled by him in a quite orderly and contented fashion.

Romance of Few Words.

"Why are you so pensive?" he asked.

"I'm not pensive," she replied.

"But you haven't said a word for twenty minutes."

"Well, I didn't have anything to say."

"Don't you ever say anything when you have nothing to say?"

"No."

"Will you be my wife?"

A Scheme That Failed.

Mother—What are you doing, Harry?

Harry—I'm countin'. You told me when I got mad to count a hundred.

Mother—Yes; so I did.

Harry—Well, I've counted 227, and I'm madder'n when I started.

Unspeakable.

Anxious Author—What do you think of this play?

Manager—You had better send it to a movie concern.

Anxious Author—Why?

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. Two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16 ounce bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE SERBIANS HURL THE INVADERS BACK

Don't Forget To-Night's Meeting In Armouries

SERBIANS HOLDING THEIR OWN RUSSIANS BREAK FOE'S FRONT

Along The Danube Serbs Have Repulsed All Attacks and in Counter Offensive Drove Enemy's Forces Back Across The River Capturing Howitzer and Maxime---Russians Break Through at Strypa Capturing 2000 Men and 60 Officers.

FRENCH HOLD ALL THE GROUND THEY WON

NISH, Serbia, Via London, Oct. 12.—Hurled back at many points along the Danube, Save and Drina Rivers, the Austro-German forces are making no progress to-day with their attempted Serbian invasion, except in Belgrade and the immediate vicinity.

Along the Danube the Serbians repulsed all attacks between the town of Flawa and the Rorava River mouth. In this section, assuming a violent counter offensive, the Serbian troops drove the enemy's forces what had already crossed the Danube back to the Hungarian side and captured four howitzers and four Maxim guns. Another attempted crossing between Smederevo and Godomins was repulsed except for a small Austro-German detachment which reached Smederevo, only to be annihilated or chased back in such haste that the men threw themselves into the Danube in their flight. Dedionte, which the invaders captured, was retaken by the Serbians with heavy losses to the enemy.

All Austro-German attacks along the Save and Drina Rivers were repulsed. Even in Belgrade's neighbourhood the invaders were meeting with a hot resistance, especially in the suburb of Great Vatchar.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 12.—The Russians have broken the enemy's front at Strypa, captured two thousand men, sixty officers, four cannon and ten Maxims, and are following up their success, it was announced to-day.

The advantage won by the Russians is in Eastern Galicia, where a fresh offensive has been started against the Austrians.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—That the Germans in the Dvinsk, Russia, region have ceased the offensive and are trying only to hold their own, is indicated by the reports from the Eastern war theatre to-day. Troop withdrawals for the Serbian invasion caused this inactivity. The Roumanian army is mobilizing rapidly, according to reliable information from Bucharest. Advices to-day described the people as almost unanimous for joining the Allies. Many leading men were said to be urging the step, and strong hopes were felt here that the Government, though unwilling, will be forced to comply.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—(Official). Hard fighting continued throughout Monday night before the trenches taken by the French earlier in the day north-east of Souchez and on La Folie heights, to-day's official communique announced. There was also violent bombardment in the Reillon-Ancerviller region. The French held all they had gained.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 12.—All German hangars and their contents on the Ghent Aviation Grounds have been destroyed by the Allied aeroplane raid.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—Roumania has given the Italian Government to understand that Roumanian co-operation on the side of the Entente may be considered certain, says a special despatch from Rome.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—The War Office announces officially that Semendria, in Serbia, has been taken.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The British Government's intention to declare cotton piece goods and other cotton products contraband was announced by Foreign Secretary Grey in the House of Commons to-day.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The British steamship Halizones, 5,050 tons, in the South American trade, was sunk by a German submarine to-day. The crew's fate is unknown.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Steady Allied gains in the Artois and Champagne regions and near La Bassee were reported from Paris to-day.

North of Tahure they were described as forging slowly in the direction of the railway supply line, which the Germans are defending desperately. The Kaiser's artillery was pounding new positions furiously with no effect, beyond eliciting a heavy return fire.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—Our Balkan advance is making good progress, announced the German War Office to-day of the Serbian campaign. No details are offered.

ATHENS, Oct. 12.—When the Serbian Minister formally notified Premier Zamis to-day that Bulgaria had attacked Serbia, Zamis replied that Greece would nevertheless remain neutral.

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—It is understood that the Imperial Government will provide separation allowances to the wives and families of Canadian mechanics who have gone from the Dominion to work in British munition factories. The number totals 1,710, of which 1,600 are married men. The separation allowance contemplated is about $4.20 per week. It is stated the Labour Department will administer the allowances from Ottawa.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Secretary of State Lansing to-day announced the receipt from the British Embassy of a memo outlining evidence upon which the British Prize Court confiscated American meat cargoes valued at fifteen millions.

The State Department officials are convinced that the British Government had good cause for confiscating the cargo, but intends to aid packers in securing the release of twenty-nine other vessels now detained.

Will Meet The Hon. Geo. P. Graham

The Peterborough Overseas Band and Battalion will at the request of the Speakers' Patriotic League, welcome Hon. Geo. P. Graham on his arrival at 5:30 o'clock this evening. He will be escorted up town by the band and active service men.

600 SOLDIERS WILL BE QUARTERED IN THE LOCAL ARMOURIES

Major Burritt of Kingston Here To-day Mapping Out Quarters For The Active Service Men Who Will Spend The Winter in Peterboro---Men Will Sleep and Eat at The Armories---To-day's Military News.

Six hundred soldiers are to be quartered in the Peterborough armouries this winter.

Major Burritt of Kingston, the Chief Engineer for the Division, was in the city this morning inspecting the armouries and deciding upon the alterations that will have to be made in order to provide sleeping and eating accommodation for the half battalion which will spend the winter here. The different rooms in the armouries will likely all be utilized, the band room, company room, sergeants' mess, artillery quarters and other departments are being required to accommodate the soldiers who will sleep and be fed at the armouries. All the soldiers will be in barracks, it is evident now, instead of in billets, as was the first plan mentioned. A number of shower baths are to be installed and other improvements made in the arrangement of the local armouries.

It is likely that the work of changing the drill hall into a barracks will be commenced at once.

Kingston Standard: Major Alan Stroud, who has command of the local squadron of the new C.M.R. regiment, has been ordered to bring all the recruits he has secured for the new unit into Barriefield camp, where they will remain until the squadron is recruited up to strength, and until the camp closes, when they will go to Toronto. This will be an addition to the camp population, and no doubt before many day- Colonel Hemming will begin to accept recruits for the new battalion which will be commanded by Lt.-Col. Mills of Peterborough, now on his way back from the front in France.

Barriefield War Camp, Oct. 9.—Yesterday morning the 8th C.M.R. broke camp at Barriefield, after spending five months in training here for overseas service. At last their turn had come to leave the camp and start on the journey that will end somewhere at the front, in either Europe or Asia. Although the regiment had contributed about 600 men in the form of drafts, it left the camp yesterday and at the train there was not a man reported absent. Promptly at 8 o'clock the regiment marched out of camp to the music of its own pipers' band and the trumpet band, and as they swung into the main road leading to the city they found it lined by the 59th battalion and the 80th. The men left in camp cheered their marching comrades until the hills of Barriefield rang with the voices of men who meant every feature of the demonstration they were making. The three batteries of artillery under Major Massie, Major Sears and Major Mackenzie came up behind the 8th and blended their cheers with the infantrymen. The band of the 59th fell into the line of march with the bugle band of the 80th, and to the sound of pipes, trumpets, bugles and cheers the Mounted Rifles went over the crest of the hill, across the Cataraqui, and on to the hay market, where their train was in waiting. Every member of the camp staff was on hand to say good-bye to the best unit that has ever left Canada for the front. Place d'Armes was crowded with citizens although no notice had been published of the leaving of the regiment. Many a handkerchief was pressed to the face of mothers, wives, daughters, and sweethearts the boys of the 8th were leaving behind. The regiment entrained quickly and smoothly and then the crowd broke out in wild cheers as the 8th C.M.R. and the boys sent back their answers from every window of the long train. The last to get on board was Lt.-Col. Munro. The train steamed out promptly at 9 o'clock, and everybody regretted to see such a splendid lot of soldiers, and wherever it will be their lot to fight, their movements will be watched by the City of Kingston with the greatest possible interest.

Although yesterday was a holiday for the Peterborough Battalion, it was not a holiday in the recruiting sense, and during the day five more recruits for the local battalion were added. On Saturday seven more were accepted, making twelve over the week-end. The local strength is now 245 men, with the recruits coming fairly steadily. The latest additions to the ranks are as follows:

Ernest Cook, R.R. No. 1, Ida. Born in England.

A. J. Lusch, 872 Water Street. Born in Canada. One year in the 57th Regiment.

F. J. Parker, 15 Oxford Street. Born in Canada.

Robert Meeks, Port Hope. Born in Canada. One year in the 46th Regiment.

Harry Clappison, Western Avenue. Born in England.

George Sidney, North Monaghan. Born in Canada.

J. J. Shadgett, 291 King Street. Born in England.

A local man who deserted from 8th C.M.R. some months ago, was sent to Kingston this afternoon and his case will be dealt with by the authorities there. Sergt. Jack Knowles of the local battalion took the prisoner to Barriefield.

The Physical Drill Squad and Band of the local Battalion will visit the Norwood Fair to-morrow, leaving on the noon (C.P.R.) train.

Corp. Jay was in charge of the Guard at the Armouries Sunday, Corp. Laing on Monday, and Corp. Theobald to-day.

Among the recruits who joined yesterday was Pte. Ben Martin a brother of Pte. Sid Martin of the local battalion. This makes the tenth pair of brothers in the Peterborough Company. The Marten brothers have four other brothers in the British Army a record of six sons serving the colours. Their father was also a soldier.

In addition to the men who passed yesterday, three other men who had passed some time ago reported for duty this morning. They were Pte. Bruce Doupe, J. J. Smith and Robt. Emery.

By permission of Lt.-Col. Johnston, the physical drill squad of the Peterborough Battalion will give their drill on Thursday morning in front of the Fire Hall for the benefit of the firemen who have been unable to see them give the exhibition.

ALMOST BLIND BUT REGAINS HER SIGHT

A very complicated case of disease of the retina has just been successfully treated by W. H. Lacey, B.O. Optometrist of the Peterborough Optical Parlours. According to the history of this local case, Mr. Redmond, a lady living at 26 McDonnell Street, who had been suffering from eye troubles for the past 35 years, called upon Dr. Lacey a short time ago, for consultation regarding her eyes. When she came into his office she could hardly see, so much was her eyesight and she had to walk with caution. She stated that she had suffered from her eyes for over 35 years, and during that time had consulted specialists in Canada and the United States and spent hundreds of dollars without obtaining any relief. Dr. Lacey, after examining the eyes and realizing the difficult nature of the case. The result of examination however, was that he prescribed a combination of lenses with excellent effect, and Mr. Redmond is now able to see quite plainly. The lady declares that she is so glad to be able to see right that she wants everyone to know of her case.

115 BARRELS OF FRUIT PACKED FOR THE SOLDIERS

THANKS ARE EXTENDED

The Red Cross Society desire to express their thanks for the many kindnesses received, and for the promises material and labour, in connection with the receiving, packing and shipment of fruit intended for our soldiers in the hospitals in Great Britain and elsewhere.

After the fruit had been received at the store of Richard Hall & Son through the efforts of all of the churches of the city, and the Salvation Army, it was removed to the store next to the Bank of Montreal by the kind permission of the Manager, Mr. Travers, and there sorted by the ladies. It was found that some of the fruit was too thin for packing, and it was decided to take all such out and divide it equally among the Protestant Home, House of Providence, Children's Aid Society and the Catholic Orphanage.

After consultation with the Red Cross authorities in Toronto it was decided to pack this fruit, maple syrup, jelly, marmalade, etc., in barrels, with as near as possible an equal assortment in each barrel, and the ladies of the Red Cross desire to express their most hearty appreciation of the assistance given by firms and individuals, in material and labour.

The supervision of the packing was undertaken by Mr. W. H. Hamilton, who devoted a great deal of time and attention to the work. He was ably assisted by Mr. T. D. Mulholland. The following is a list of those who freely gave their time to the work:

Messrs. Alex Webber, R. Carr, R. Carson, C. Lackenbauer, H. Ede, C. H. Cook, W. Lundie, H. Guttratz, H. Rose, A. Robins, J. Colquhoun, R. Blanchard, J. Nicholson, B. Taylor, J. McDonald, Cecil Hughes, L. Clarkson, G. Sanderson, R. J. Marquis, Walter W. Anderson, Gerald Coffee, H. Beasley, W. Brien, Wm. Hall, Beasley, W. O'Brien, L. Pegg, A. Gerrie.

It is understood that the Imperial Government will provide separation allowances to the wives and families of Canadian mechanics who have gone from the Dominion to work in British munition factories. The number totals 1,710, of which 1,000 are married men. The separation allowance contemplated is about $4.20 per week. It is stated the Labour Department will administer the allowances from Ottawa.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Secretary of State Lansing to-day announced the receipt from the British Embassy of a memo outlining evidence upon which the British Prize Court confiscated American meat cargoes valued at fifteen millions.

The State Department officials are convinced that the British Government had good cause for confiscating the cargo, but intends to aid packers in securing the release of twenty-nine other vessels now detained.

Will Meet The Hon. Geo. P. Graham

The Peterborough Overseas Band and Battalion will at the request of the Speakers' Patriotic League, welcome Hon Geo P Graham on his arrival at 5:30 o'clock this evening. He will be escorted up town by the band and active service men.

600 SOLDIERS WILL BE QUARTERED IN THE LOCAL ARMOURIES

Major Burritt of Kingston Here To-day Mapping Out Quarters For The Active Service Men Who Will Spend The Winter in Peterboro---Men Will Sleep and Eat at The Armories---To-day's Military News.

Six hundred soldiers are to be quartered in the Peterborough armouries this winter.

Major Burritt of Kingston, the Chief Engineer for the Division, was in the city this morning inspecting the armouries and deciding upon the alterations that will have to be made in order to provide sleeping and eating accommodation for the half battalion which will spend the winter here. The different rooms in the armouries will likely all be utilized, the band room, company room, sergeants' mess, artillery quarters and other departments are being required to accommodate the soldiers who will sleep and be fed at the armouries. All the soldiers will be in barracks, it is evident now, instead of in billets, as was the first plan mentioned. A number of shower baths are to be installed and other improvements made in the arrangement of the local armouries.

It is likely that the work of changing the drill hall into a barracks will be commenced at once.

Kingston Standard: Major Alan Stroud, who has command of the local squadron of the new C.M.R. regiment, has been ordered to bring all the recruits he has secured for the new unit into Barriefield camp, where they will remain until the squadron is recruited up to strength, and until the camp closes, when they will go to Toronto. This will be an addition to the camp population, and no doubt before many days Colonel Hemming will begin to accept recruits for the new battalion which will be commanded by Lt.-Col. Mills of Peterborough, now on his way back from the front in France.

Barriefield War Camp, Oct. 9.—Yesterday morning the 8th C.M.R. broke camp at Barriefield, after spending five months in training here for overseas service. At last their turn had come to leave the camp and start on the journey that will end somewhere at the front, in either Europe or Asia. Although the regiment had contributed about 600 men in the form of drafts, it left the camp yesterday and at the train there was not a man reported absent. Promptly at 8 o'clock the regiment marched out of camp to the music of its own pipers' band and the trumpet band, and as they swung into the main road leading to the city they found it lined by the 59th battalion and the 80th. The men left in camp cheered their marching comrades until the hills of Barriefield rang with the voices of men who meant every feature of the demonstration they were making. The three batteries of artillery under Major Massie, Major Sears and Major Mackenzie came up behind the 8th and blended their cheers with the infantrymen. The band of the 59th fell into the line of march with the bugle band of the 80th, and to the sound of pipes, trumpets, bugles and cheers the Mounted Rifles went over the crest of the hill, across the Cataraqui, and on to the hay market, where their train was in waiting. Every member of the camp staff was on hand to say good-bye to the best unit that has ever left Canada for the front. Place d'Armes was crowded with citizens, although no notice had been published of the leaving of the regiment. Many a handkerchief was pressed to the face of mothers, wives, daughters, and sweethearts the boys of the 8th were leaving behind. The regiment entrained quickly and smoothly and then the crowd broke out in wild cheers for the 8th C.M.R., and the boys sent back their answers from every window of the long train. The last to get on board was Lt.-Col. Munro. The train steamed out promptly at 9 o'clock, and everybody regretted losing such a splendid lot of soldiers, and wherever it will be their lot to fight, their movements will be watched by the City of Kingston with the greatest possible interest.

Although yesterday was a holiday for the Peterborough Battalion, it was not a holiday in the recruiting sense, and during the day five more recruits for the local battalion were added. On Saturday seven more were accepted, making twelve over the week-end. The local strength is now 245 men, with the recruits coming fairly steadily. The latest additions to the ranks are as follows:

Ernest Cook, R R No 1, Ida Born in England.

A. J. Losey, 873 Water Street Born in Canada. One year in the 57th Regiment.

E. J. Parker, 15 Oxford Street. Born in Canada.

Robert Meeks, Port Hope. Born in Canada. One year in the 46th Regiment.

Harry Clappison, Western Avenue Born in England.

George Sidney, North Monaghan Born in Canada.

J. J. Shadgett, 231 King Street Born in England.

Ben. F. Martin, 308 Pearl Avenue Born in England.

A local man who deserted from 8th C.M.R. some months ago, was sent to Kingston this afternoon and his case will be dealt with by the authorities there. Sergt. Jack Knowles of the local battalion took the prisoner to Barriefield.

The Physical Drill Squad and Band of the local Battalion will visit the Norwood Fair to-morrow, leaving on the noon (C.P.R.) train.

Corp. Jay was in charge of the Guard at the Armouries Sunday. Corp. Lainz on Monday, and Corp. Theobald to-day.

Among the recruits who joined yesterday was Pte. Ben Martin, a brother of Pte. Sid Martin of the local battalion. This makes the tenth pair of brothers in the Peterborough Company. The Martin brothers have four other brothers in the British Army, a record of six sons serving the colours. Their father was also a soldier.

In addition to the men who passed yesterday, three other men who had passed some time ago reported for duty this morning. They were Ptes. Bruce Doupe, J. J. Smith and Robt. Emery.

By permission of Lt.-Col. Johnston, the physical drill squad of the Peterborough Battalion will give their drill on Thursday morning in front of the Fire Hall for the benefit of the firemen who have been unable to see them give the exhibition.

ALMOST BLIND BUT REGAINS HER SIGHT

A very complicated case of disease of the retina has just been successfully treated by W. H. Lacey B.O., Optometrist of the Peterborough Optical Parlours. According to the history of this local case, Mrs. Redmond, a lady living at 295 McDonell Street, who had been suffering from eye troubles for the past 35 years, called upon Dr. Lacey, a short time ago, for consultation regarding her eyes. When she came into his office she could hardly see, so imperfect was her eyesight, and she had to walk with caution. She stated that she had suffered from her eyes for over 35 years, and during that time had consulted with specialists in both Canada and the United States, and spent hundreds of dollars without obtaining any relief. Dr. Lacey diagnosed the eyes and realized the difficult nature of the case. The result of his examination, however, was that he prescribed a continuation lense, with excellent effect, and Mrs. Redmond now able to see quite plainly. The lady declares that she is so glad to regain her sight that she wishes others to know of her case.

115 BARRELS OF FRUIT PACKED FOR THE SOLDIERS

THANKS ARE EXTENDED

The Red Cross Society desire to express their thanks for the many kindnesses received, and for the premises, material and labour, in connection with the receiving, packing and shipment of fruit intended for our soldiers in the hospitals in Great Britain and elsewhere.

After the fruit had been received at the store of Richard Hall & Son, through the efforts of all of the churches of the city, and the Salvation Army, it was removed to the store next to the Bank of Montreal by the kind permission of the Manager, Mr. Travers, and there sorted by the ladies. It was found that some of the fruit was too thin for packing, and it was decided to take all such out and divide it equally among the Protestant Home, House of Providence, Children's Aid Society and the Catholic Orphanage.

After consultation with the Red Cross authorities in Toronto it was decided to pack this fruit, maple syrup, jelly, marmalade, etc., in barrels, with as near as possible an equal assortment in each barrel, and the ladies of the Red Cross desire to express their most hearty appreciation of the assistance given by firms and individuals, in material and labour.

The supervision of the packing was undertaken by Mr. W. H. Hamilton, who devoted a great deal of time and attention to the work. He was ably assisted by Mr. T. D. Mulholland. The following is a list of those who freely gave their time to the work.

Messrs. Alex Webber, B. Carr, R. S. Cotton, J. Packenham, H. Ely, C. Cox, H. Corn, W. Louden, H. Outram, H. Rishea, A. Rishea, J. Colquhoun, R. Blanchard, I. Abraham, B. Taylor, J. McDonald, Gordon Henry, L. Chambers, G. Anderson, R. J. Marton, L. Vallery, Wm. Anderson, Geo. Young, C. Gilbert, J. Bradley, Wm. Irlan, Wm. Heine, I. Begley, Wm. O'Brien, J. Ryan, A. Goodfellow, I. Gerrard.

The thanks of the ladies are also due to Messrs. O. L. Kinsey, W. H. Hamilton, Mathews-Blackwell, Peterborough and Rubber for supply of barrels, and to the Quaker Oats Company for a large quantity of English straw for packing, and they desire to acknowledge the time so cheerfully given, without charge, by individuals and companies in connection with the handling, packing, and shipping of a full carload of 115 barrels, valued at more than $3,000. It was a huge undertaking and carried through absolutely without expense. During the time the fruit was in store here the fire insurance on it was carried by Messrs. Davis-Thomson Co., through the kindness of Mr. W. J. Thomson. The ladies also wish to acknowledge the very nice coffee which Mr. T. H. Hooper provided in the evening for the men engaged in the packing.

Finally, these barrels will be teamed to-morrow from the Bank of Montreal premises to the C.P.R. siding, and loaded, without charge, by Messrs. White Bros. The Peterborough Red Cross Transfer Co., J. E. A. Fitzgerald, R. Deane, R. Hoar and Matthews-Blackwell.

Single Taxers in Next Elections

Will Contest The Aldermanic and Mayoralty Vacancies According To a Report on The Street.

Advocates of the Single Tax system will be entered in the municipal race in every ward next January, and there is a possibility that they will be represented even in the mayoralty. This was the statement of a prominent member to the Examiner to-day. There is quite a following of Single Taxers in this city and the most of them are eager to spread their favoured gospel among the electors who are unfamiliar with the idea and the extent to which it is at present applied. Meetings will likely be held from time to time during the next few months. Mr. H. B. Cowan, Mr. F. E. Ellis, Mr. George Ball and many others are all deeply interested in this movement.

A LUNCHEON FOR PROMINENT M.P.P. FROM WINNIPEG

The Peterborough Board of Trade is co-operating in the arrangements being made to welcome Mr. E. J. Dixon, M.L.A., of Winnipeg, to the city to-morrow. It has been decided to tender a luncheon in his honor in Hooper's palm room which will be held at 6.15. As Mr. Dixon's subject, "Taxation Reform—What It Is and Why We Need It," is one in which members of the City Council are particularly interested, an effort is being made to have as many members of the Council attend as possible. The Board of Trade is helping to interest the business men of the city.

As Mr. Dixon represents centre Winnipeg as an Independent Progressive, in the Manitoba legislature, he having been elected to that position twice with a majority of over 4,000 on each occasion, it is evident that he must be a strong man. He is a noted public speaker and an authority on the subject with which he will deal.

Just to remind you that the tinsmithing department of Messrs. F. R. J. MacPhesson & Co. can put your heating system in good running order for the winter. Book your order now.

TUESDAY, OCT. 12, 1915

TRIED BY FIRE.

The Examiner sympathizes with the St. Thomas Journal in its visitation of fire. We can speak from experience of the serious interruption to business which even a comparatively small blaze can produce. Even with ample insurance there is bound to be great loss. We are sure the Journal, if one judges from its past enterprise, will soon be again filling the large and important place it has occupied in journalism. Its contemporary, the Times, coming to the rescue to permit of continuous publication, is in accord with the best traditions of journalism, and evidence that the fraternal spirit is stronger than rivalry.

PITY THE PRISONERS.

There seems to be no end to the responsibility for action the war and its consequences impose upon us. We must provide socks and other comforts for our soldiers; we must help provide hospital dressings for the wounded. We must supply tobacco and other comforts for the soldiers in the trenches. There is virtually no end to the demands that are made upon us, and to which we are in duty bound to respond. Of course there is a limit to our means; but in partial compensation we must make the means available go as far as possible. Those who go to fight for the cause in which their King and country send them, are making the greatest of sacrifices, and we who cannot fight, but can help otherwise, must be prepared for our share of sacrifice. Our means may be limited; but we can make them go further by expending less upon ourselves; by denying ourselves; by eschewing luxuries for the sake of those to whom even the barest necessities of subsistence may, relatively, be luxuries. We must ourselves answer our prayer in the Litany, "have pity upon all prisoners and captives." In an article on another page of this issue, the statement is made that at one place in Germany, where there are 5,000 prisoners, two thousand of these are without money to purchase food; and are thus thrown upon the mercy of their German captors, and we know what their tender mercy is. While we are feeding in plenty we should not forget those of our own who are in a starving condition and would welcome even the crumbs that fall from our well laden tables. Pray, think of it.

CHILDREN'S AID TAG DAY.

With all our giving, and all our remembering, we must still give to and remember the interest most closely connected with our social and national welfare, the care and protection of the young. The war has made heavy drafts upon the flower of our country's manhood; many of whom, sad to say, will not return. We must, therefore, provide for the oncoming generation and protect it in the beginnings from the deterioration, that vice and poverty will, if not guarded against, produce. It is necessary to maintain in effective administrative efficiency, the one great organization equipped to protect neglected children and keep up the quality of child life, and, in sequence, the high character of our youth and manhood.

The Children's Aid Society is equipped for this work as to organization; but a necessary and indispensable additional equipment in the way of means must be provided. We know that the calls upon us are great and unprecedented. But there never was a war like this war; nor an occasion such as it creates, when sacrifice was so insistently demanded. We must keep all the machinery of society in motion, and none is more important than that ministering to the work of the Children's Aid Society.

We have provided a shelter for the children rescued by the officials of the society where the work of rescue must be continued. There is constant need for funds to maintain the neglected and otherwise unprotected and unprovided for children; to prevent, not only actual physical suffering from hunger and nakedness, but to help provide the moral protection that will save the children, that are otherwise exposed to the danger of becoming victims of vice or criminality.

In this connection the public will kindly remember that next Saturday, Oct. 16th, is set apart as Children's Aid annual Tag Day. That day has precedence in order of priority as well as in the superior importance of the appeal it involves.

TWO SIDES TO THE QUESTION

In another part of this page is printed an article dealing with the relations of manufacturing interests to journalistic interests and enterprise. It shows that there are to this, as to every other question, two sides; and that to secure the best all round results there must be that indespensable thing, cooperation. Newspapers may help the made-in-Canada propaganda, but the manufacturers must reciprocate, not altogether in the interests of the newspapers, but in their own. We cannot expect that the people will apply the made-in-Canada spirit to the products of Canadian manufacturers to the fullest extent, without the fullest knowledge. The manufacturers may produce abundance, but, to adapt without irreverence a passage of the Scripture, "how shall they believe in what they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher?"—the press, through the medium of advertising. To secure the best results there must be cooperation. The newspapers cannot help the manufacturers, without print, more than the latter can produce things without profit. The newspapers are manufacturers as the others. The newspapers manufacture business—through advertising. The manufacturers cannot expect to get all and give little. To insure the success of the made-in-Canada propaganda, they must not only make known what they have to sell, but must meet rivalry; they must insure that their products shall be equal in value according to price, to those of their foreign rivals. That is a part of the other side of the appeal to patriotism, in favouring home products. This idea applies also to the buy-at-home policy that our business men very properly want the people to adopt. Business is business, and neither manufacturers nor home merchants can expect favours in purchasing unless they are prepared to give equal, or closely approximate equal value with their outside business rivals, and to practice what they preach in giving preference to home products themselves, always providing that equal value is provided, for the price involved.

DOUBLE HANGING.

By taking up arms against the Allies Bulgaria has signed her own death warrant. Sir Edward Grey made clear to Sofia that would be the result of Bulgarian treachery to Russia. As Turkey has also signed away her right to exist, there will be a double hanging some of these days.—London Advertiser.

GEOGRAPHY PROVES GERMAN CHARACTER.

The real character of Germany and Austria could not be better demonstrated than by a glance at the boundaries of these countries, Mr. Madox Hueffer points out in his new book, "St. Denis and St. George" in which he compares Germany with England and France. With the exception of one point on the German boundary, the central empires are surrounded by a ring of subject states, states populated by peoples brought under the German and the Austrian yoke, mainly through war and conquest. The author says:

"If you will look at the map of Central Europe you will perceive one uniform, one sinister set of phenomena. On every boundary of the United Empires there is subject territory—on every boundary with one sinister exception. East and West Prussia are populated by subject Poles, the borders of Denmark by subject Danes, the borders of France by subject French, the borders of Southern Austria by subject Italians, of Eastern Austria by subject Serbs, the northern borders of Austria by subject Croats, Ruthenians and Galicians."

The one missing link in the ring of conquered states is that on the border of Belgium. "And," says the author, "significantly and horribly, the inhabitants of that border land can tell you what it is to have Germany for a neighbour and German public opinion for sole protector." He does not think anything else is needed to prove that, from the earliest historic times the German peoples have been predatory and that "German public opinion has, at the worst, supported, and at the best, connived at the spoilation of other races."

Contrasting Germany with Britain in conduct at sea, Mr. Hueffer says:

"I do not think any one will deny that, for long centuries, the peace administration of the great waters by Great Britain has been efficient and honorable. It has been a record of free harbours and of seas free to the peaceful fleets of the world, of lighthouses set up on dangerous promontories of rocks removed from dangerous tideways, of the compilation of charts for use in dangerous seas. Of these traditions Germany has of necessity none at all. When it has come to a matter of shipwrecks and drownings, between English and French, between Genoese and Venetian, between Castilian and North American there has always extended that nationality which extinguished all terrestrial boundaries, whether in peace or in war. The German has given you great subsidized lines; and he has given you boats which, rising from the depths of the waters, carry upon them cinematograph machines so that the actual struggles of drowning humanity may be spread and witnessed in the furthest confines and the smallest villages of Pomerania. That is the future that Germany offers to humanity upon the waters." — Ottawa Free Press.

THE TIN CAN EPISODE.

Henry Ford, Detroit, has made a bad break and does not seem to have had time to apologise. According to New York dispathes, Mr. Ford said: "If I find any of the banks in which my company or myself have deposits taking part in the proposed loan to the Allies I will immediately close our accounts. I will not have any part of my personal funds or the Ford Company funds, directly or indirectly, aiding the flotation of this loan.

"If I had my way, I would tie a tin can to this joint Anglo-French Commission and chase it back to Europe."

Mr. Ford, in subsequent statements, would neither deny nor affirm the above. In the meantime, therefore, his utterances must be taken as being correctly reported. Mr. Ford would give his entire fortune to end this war. If he is sincere in that expression, therefore, and if he can see clearly through the mists of pacific theories, he should subscribe $10,000,000 to the Allies' war loan. That act would help in the most practical way to accomplish the end, the theoretical aspects of which Mr. Ford seems to cherish devoutly.—Monetary Times.

THE KAISER'S CROCODILE TEARS.

The Kaiser shedding tears over France, decadent and doomed because guilty of atrocities in war, ought to be commemorated in art. A German sculptor could make a touching statue of him in that attitude, the Imperial tears being rendered as realistic as Bismarck's spurs. The affecting monument should be set up in Liege, or before the portals—if they could be found—of the University of Louvain. Or the successor of Wildenbrugh might write an historical drama bringing in the Emperor over the decay of chivalry in France. Burke's famous lament could be worked in, and extracts piously made from the "pure French" in which Wilhelm told the correspondent of his sadness beeaufe the France of which he had cherished such high hopes had fallen like Lucifer. And then either drama or statue would be to posterity a standing refutation of the charge that the Hohenzollerns are destitute of humour.—New York Evening Post.

"THE UNDENIABLE FACT"..

The undeniable fact is that Belgium in 1914 was tortured by Germany for doing exactly what in 1907 the Government of the United States urged her to do, and the Government of the United States has lacked either the courage or the moral sense or responsibility to make a protest. This failure of our Government is one of the shameful events of the war. It has done as much as any other one thing to convince the German Government and people that we are afraid to make a protest even in defence of our own right.—New York Outlook.

THE RELATION OF MANUFACTURERS TO JOURNALISTIC ADVERTISING

Industrial Canada, the organ of the Manufacturers' Association, discussing the Made-in-Canada campaign in its relation to the publishers, says:

"The members of the Canadian Press Association deserve and have received the thanks of Canadian manufacturers for the whole-hearted and very effective support which they gave and are still giving to the Made-in-Canada policy. When the newspapers, with splendid unanimity, took up the Made-in-Canada cry, supported it vigorously, and put it into practice, they performed a distinct national service, and in addition benefited themselves, and according to the degree which they continue their support will the welfare of the country and their own interest be assured. After this war the United States will perhaps be the richest country in the world. That means that Canada will have along the 4,000-mile boundary a number of competing industrial centres, which will have immense supplies of money, huge organizations and great numbers of skilled employees. At the present time the chemists and technical experts of the United States are using their utmost ingenuity to perfect devices and processes which they hope will make their country the leading manufacturing nation of the world, and it is with this powerful neighbour that we must compete. In the coming industrial battle Canadian manufacturers will have to fight geography, they will be handicapped by lack of capital, and in almost every way they will be placed at a disadvantage with manufacturing firms of the United States. Consequently, is it not of supreme importance that the Made-in-Canada campaign should be supported vigorously?"

The daily and weekly papers of Canada would like to be able to reciprocate the compliments of the manufacturers, but it would be stretching the truth to the breaking point to say that the thanks of the Canadian Press are due to Canadian manufacturers for the whole-hearted and very effective support, apart from last season's special campaign, which they give through the Press to the Made-in-Canada policy. Were the newspapers of this country to depend on the advertising by manufacturers of their products the journalistic graveyard would speedily become overcrowded. There are a few splendid exceptions—great manufacturing industries that have been built up by the free use of printer's ink—but for the most part Canadian manufacturers think their work is done when they produce goods. Creating a demand for their products, advertising their trade marks, making the public acquainted with the special merits of their brands as compared with those of their rivals at home and abroad, are things that seldom have a place in their calculations.

The inevitable result is a continually increasing importation of American goods that are sold largely through newspaper advertising. The chief disadvantage of the Canadian manufacturer is not lack of capital or unfavourable geographical location, but the fact that he expects the newspapers of Canada to advertise his goods free of cost from motives of patriotism, while the American manufacturer advertises his goods in the regular way as a matter of business.

The Made-in-Canada campaign was well worth while, but if Canadian manufacturers would profit from the sentiment in favour of Canadian-made goods created by it they will have to do what their competitors from the United States are continually doing—make the people acquainted with their brands and trade marks through steady and persistent avertising. Free publicity on patriotic grounds may be profitable to the manufacturer, but it does no. pay printers' wages.—The Globe.

ANARCHISM IN WAR.

The Germans might have remembered that no political cause has ever been advanced hy means of bombs. When anarchists throw bombs among a civilian crowd the only result is a determination to suppress the anarchists. And that is the only result of the German practice of anarchism in war. They are to the English people now an anarchist nation that must be suppressed.—London Times.

GROWING STRONGER.

Things are far better than the grey-sky pessimists would have us believe. Decisive victory for Germany is impossible. Stalemate becomes, day by day, more unlikely. The enemy has passed its maximum strength. He is gradually growing weaker. We are quickly growing stronger. That lusty infant, "the contemptible British Army," will soon be a mighty full-grown man then—clear the way for victory.—London Daily Express.

GERMANY ECONOMICALLY BEATEN.

A Dutch publicist calls attention to the fact that while Great Britain's expenditure of twenty million dollars a day is only half of the British nation's income, the German expenditure of twenty-five millions a day is nine-tenths of her yearly income. He shows the effect of this contrast by pointing out that Germany has remaining only fifteen dollars per head to sustain seventy million people, while Great Britain has a hundred and fifty dollars a head for her forty-five millions. On the strength of these statistics he predicts that "Germany will be beaten economically and financially in the not distant future."—The Globe.

THE GREAT LOAN AS AN OMEN.

The New York Times has called attention to a phase of the great war loan in the United States which many have overlooked, namely, that it is the most tangible indirect evidence which could be given of America's belief in power of the Allies to bring Germany to terms. It says:

This transaction, entirely non-political as it is, is based on confidence that the borrowing government will, in the course of the next five years, be able to fund this short-term loan in longer-term bonds at par, which is equivalent to confidence that, if they are not victors in the war they are waging, they at least will meet with no crushing defeat. Every dollar of the loan is a concrete evidence of that confidence. Every investor who puts his money into the loan avows that belief and backs it.

We may quite legitimately go beyond this statement of the Times, and say that the triumphant success of the loan is also an evidence of the overwhelming sense of Americans in the justice of the fight which Britain and France are waging for the whole world. President Wilson took the correct diplomatic stand when he urged the people to be neutral in thought and deed. But Germany soon made such neutrality impossible, and opened the eyes of the United States, as of all the rest of the world, to the real significance of the war. The loan has a deeper significance than the mere rehabitation of exchanges and trade relations dislocated by the war.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

The Connecting Link.

The connecting link between the merchant and his customer is the newspaper advertisement. In it the merchant may make plain to the housewife or the husband, the advantages of his store and the commodities he has to offer, in a way that would be impossible otherwise, because of the limited time, and the interruptions when the customer visits the store.

When people go out to shop, they want to get what they need, and go home again. They want the business news, but they want it when they have time at their disposal. You can give it to them through the advertising columns.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Keeper and Convict

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Tommy Ruggles and Eddie Fletcher were schoolmates. Not only were they schoolmates, but little chums. They left the grammar school and entered the high school at the same time. From the high school they went out into the world to fight the battle of life. Ruggles drifted into the political arena and after an election, during which he had done good work for his party, received the appointment of head of the state penitentiary.

Barnes became a merchant in a small way. He finally formed a partnership with a man who swindled him out of all he possessed. A quarrel ensued that ended in a scuffle, during which Barnes threw his opponent, whose head struck some hard substance, and his skull was fractured. He died, and Barnes was sent to the penitentiary to serve a term of ten years.

When Ruggles and Barnes met, after not having seen each other for several years—the one as keeper, the other as convict—both shed tears.

"Tom," said Barnes, "I'm sorry you are my jailer. I cannot serve out my term, and I am bound to try to escape. And I wish to say to you now that I expect you to do your duty by the state like an honorable man. You may kill me while trying to capture me when I try to escape."

"Don't try the escape game, Ed. It seldom, if ever, pays. And in this case it would be hard on us both. I should certainly do my duty, and you know where that duty would lie. To me you are only one of hundreds of prisoners for whom I am responsible."

Barnes made an effort to serve out his sentence without any attempt to escape. But one day an excellent opportunity offered itself. He was in the yard of the prison near a gateway, which was opened to admit a cart. A storm came up, and the gatekeeper was blinded by a cloud of dust and lightning. Barnes slipped out and ran like a deer.

He ran into a house not far from the prison, where he found a woman. It is difficult to express sympathy with one hounded for his life or his liberty, and the woman furnished him with a suit of her husband's clothes, and Barnes persuaded her to give him a revolver. But Ruggles at the head of a force was after him, and the convict was seen leaving the house. He had a good start, and when they reached him he was on rising ground behind a stone wall ready to defend himself. Ruggles ordered his men to keep back, telling them that he would go forward and endeavor to persuade the prisoner to surrender. He walked forward till he heard Barnes call out

"Don't come any farther, Tom. I'm desperate!"

"Give yourself up, Ed. I've got a dozen men down on the road. It will be suicide for you to resist, and to hurt you would be an awful thing for me."

There was a grim silence between them for a few moments; then Barnes added:

"Go back and send your men to take me. I don't want to hurt you, and I'm going to use up the six shots in my revolver."

"I wouldn't send my men where I can do all there is to be done. If any one is to be killed in your recapture I prefer that it should be myself."

"That's not right. I've got to die; you haven't. Don't shoot your old chum or compel him to shoot you. You'll give me a better chance for my life by sending one of your men, or all of them for that matter."

"You know I couldn't do that. I might as well resign my post and lose myself in another country. But it isn't my position that I'm thinking of; it's my honor. The state trusts me to carry out the will of the people, and I'm bound to do so. If you were my own brother or my own father I would be obliged to take you all the same."

"I see how it is, Tom. We're forced by fate into this position. If you'll agree to kill me I'll step out and give you a shot."

"No; you'll have to defend yourself. I must do my duty to the state, but I'm not the state executioner."

"Well, I won't be captured, and you won't accept my life. I don't see that there's anything to be done but for us to say 'Goodby.'"

"You'd better surrender, Ed. With time off for good behavior you'll only have about six years to serve."

"Six years of such life is far worse than death."

"If you won't surrender promise me that you'll defend yourself to the best of your ability; that you won't spare me. If you let me kill you you'll force me to live a life of regret that would be worse than your six years of imprisonment."

"I wish I could stand it to do the

A PAIR OF SLIPPERS.

Story of an Eccentric Man and a Curious Monument.

There stands in a church in Amsterdam an ancient and curious monument of white marble which always attracts the attention of visitors, and their curiosity is usually heightened by its inscription. On the monument are engraved two slippers of a singular shape, with the inscription "Effen Nyt," which in English would be "even nothing," or, more colloquially put, "nothing else." The story that is told of this strange device is as follows:

A certain rich man who was very extravagant in his tastes became possessed of the idea that he had just so many years to live and no more, and he calculated that if he spent a stated portion of his principal every year his life and his property would expire together.

He was lavishly generous to others as well as indulgent of his own whims, and it so happened that he died the very year he had prophesied would be his last. He had furthermore brought his fortune to such a low ebb that after his few debts were paid nothing remained of all his possessions aside from the clothes in which he was to be buried but a pair of curious old slippers.

Motor Laundries in the War.

One of the most progressive things in the war is the motor laundry for field hospital corps. It consists of four cars, the leading one being a powerful motor truck which carries the movable steam mangle. The second car has the complete steam outfit—boiler, machinery—also a drying cabinet and a disinfecting tank. The third car contains the washing machine, the drying drums, pumps for hot and cold water, and a condenser for steam in case the only available water is too hard for washing. The fourth car or truck brings along all the washing necessaries—soap, soda, coal, gasoline, and tools. When stationary the trucks are formed in a horseshoe and covered by a tent. The motor when free of the mangle runs to and fro to gather up the soiled linen. Most of the things are wrung almost dry in the mangle, but the "woollies" want gentler treatment, so they are put in the drying cabinet which is heated by the motor.

REDMEN VERY LOYAL

Give Money and Work and Lives Freely in Cause

The excellent patriotic work of the File Indians at Balcarres, Sask., continues. In October, 1914, thirty-three of these colonists subscribed $562.10 to the Patriotic Fund, each farmer giving a certain number of bushels of grain. During the winter that followed, the now famous File Indian Brass Band gave concerts thereby raising another $212 which went to the Belgian Relief Fund, and the Red Cross Branch of this Colony raised $500 and endowed a bed in Cliveden Hospital. The young Indian women have done a great deal of knitting and sewing. The branch has a membership of 36 while there are only one hundred and sixty souls—thirty-eight men, twenty-six women and ninety-six children—in the Colony.

The patriotism of these Indians does not stop here. Two young men went to the front with the second contingent and six more with the next. The File Indians lay claim to having the oldest Red Cross Society member in the British Empire in the person of Pointed Cap. This celebrated character says that he is the ripe old age of 107. He is now an "associate member" of the Red Cross and proudly wears on his heart the little red cross, the emblem of the Society. Older members of the Colony threaten to enlist. One man who is the father of nine children has expressed his intention of so doing, and his wife says, "I will not stop him." Despite the fact that hailstorms destroyed all the crops in the Colony in 1915, the File Indians were not downhearted, but made arrangements to continue their good work during the winter to aid the boys across the sea.

GERMANY SELF-ISOLATED

Invites Nation to Help Honor Martin Luther

The "Kreuz-seitung" published with the Kaiser's express sanction, the revised German plan for the Reformation festival of October 31, 1917. Under normal circumstances the event would have been celebrated throughout the whole Protestant world. Already, in North America and Europe, ideas had been mooted and monographs proposed. The United States, with its large German population, would have led the way in honoring Luther. The Nonconformist Churches of England and the Scottish Presbyterians would not have been far behind. A great body of Lutherans in the vast Russian Empire, in Canada, and in South Africa, would have thankfully acknowledged a debt to the monk of Wittenberg. Miserable Germany now sees herself cut off from all Lutherans outside her own territory. She announces officially that the Quarter-Centenary of the Reformation will be observed only on German soil.

Germany, in other words, recognizes that for years to come she will be solitary among the nations of the world. Why otherwise should she exclude the men and women of her own race in America from their birthright in the legacy of Luther? Is she afraid that if American professors and preachers flocked to Berlin in the autumn of 1917 the ghosts of the "Lusitania" would accompany them? The United States are shut out, and neutrals in Europe are bidden to stand aloof. They have had many proofs already of the horrors that await the smaller free nations if the Central Empires triumph. The obsequious flattery of Sven Hedin has not procured an invitation for Sweden. On Holland the War Lord casts his venomous eyes. Norway's ships have been torpedoed by submarines. Any feast to which the Kaiser could invite the smaller Protestant peoples would be like a Borgia banquet. The name of Martin Luther would be quoted as the guarantee of piety and goodwill. But the footsteps of the men who harried Belgium would be heard at the doors. Germany recognizes that her invitations, for many years to come, will not be sought after.

"When my wife starts talking on an embarrassing subject I always change it." "I've tried that with my wife, but it was no go. She simply exhausted the new subject, and then took up the old one where she left off."

EVOLUTION OF DANCING.

To take notice of that outcry against the dance that have fascinated men and women of to-day would be to suppose that the world had suddenly become dancing mad. And yet the sculptor and the painter have for centuries caught and imprisoned for later generations to admire the haunting beauty of the fair attitudes and rhythmic grace, and the spirited action of dancing figures. According to a contributor to a contemporary the present ebullition of the dancing spirit marks one of those high tides that, in an eternal action and reaction, are noticeable at intervals of greater or less length.

Dancing, always suggestive of youth, is one of the oldest arts. Traces have been found of its existence in Egypt more than 3,500 years before Christ. Like many of the arts, it found its highest expression in the golden days of Greece. Friezes and urns, fragments of temples and other edifices, bear witness to the wonderful beauty of the dance of those days, and have served to teach the painters, poets, and sculptors of succeedings ages. The world has never entirely forgotten that language which so divinely governed all bodily movements, regulating them by rhythm. Still men are stirred even by the painted presentation of the radiant choir of Muses led by Terpsichore, the chaste graces mingling with forest nymphs in rounds under the pale light of the moon, and bands of maidens crowned with oak leaves and garlanded with flowers dancing in honor of Pan, Apollo, and Diana.

Corrupted by its interpretation by the Romans, it never really came into its own again until the days of chivalry aroused it in France. With the other arts it flourished under Louis XIV., especially during the early days of his reign, when the Academy of Dancing was founded. Under Louis XV. and Louis XVI. the minuet and gavotte were introduced, and the dainty grace and elegance of the 18th century developed. Then came the dire days of the Revolution, and dancing as an expression of gaiety fell by the wayside again until about 1830, when there was a great revival of its popularity.

When the polka came in 14 years later there was another revival. The new dance invaded dancing saloons, drawing-rooms, shops, and even the streets. Markowski brought in the mazurka, created the schottische, Bicillienne, and Quadrille of a Hundred Guards, and dancing went on from dark until dawn. At the magnificent court balls persons braved suffocation for the sake of the dance. One need not think, however, that it was only in glad, blithe, careless times that the populace was given over to madness in dancing. The horrors of the French Revolution was hardly at an end when 23 theatres and 1,800 dancing saloons were opened every evening. Mercier tells of "Victim Balls," to which were admitted only those who had lost a member of the immediate family, and they were crowded.

Dancing was universal at the Carmelites between massacres, in ruined churches, and on the stones of tombs not yet destroyed. They danced in every tavern on the Boulevard or along the Champs-Elysees and along the quays. These horrors, indulged in for forgetfulness, were not the kind of dancing that Watteau, Boucher, Lancret, Latour, and Debrecourt had portrayed—the dancing of lords and ladies, of gay peasants, and all the poetry of the dance. That is an epoch by itself.

Truth That Hurt.

Miss Singwell had been a member of the choral society ever since it had been in existence, and it was undoubtedly true that her first youth had waned. But the choirmaster was astounded recently by the news that she had resigned her membership.

"Resigned!" he gasped. "But whatever for?"

"Well, I don't know exactly," said the secretary, "but it strikes me that it may have something to do with the solo we picked for her at the next performance."

"Why? What is it?"

"Don't you remember? It begins, I once was young, but now am old."

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good result worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel, or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman, we believe, can easily add from 5 to 8 pounds in the first 14 days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put. Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with food it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood prepares it in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. Leading druggists in Peterboro and vicinity sell it in large boxes forty tablets to a package on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

If Tea and Coffee Come in Capsules
as their drug, caffeine, is frequently sold, tea and coffee drinkers would wake up to the fact that tea and coffee are not foods but drugs.
Yet in spite of the warnings of reputable physicians, many persons fail to realize the harmful effects of caffeine, the subtle, habit-forming drug in tea and coffee. Taken regularly this drug—the frequent cause of nervousness, heart-flutter, headache and other ailments—sooner or later gets its hold.
Look tea and coffee in the face—read what physicians and health experts say: (Names on application)
"Some people get the craving for alcohol by first taking tea or coffee."
"Coffee is a dope and narcotic almost equal to opium. Slowly but surely it gets control of its victim and holds him in its grasp a pitiful, helpless victim."
"Coffee is a drug. Those addicted to its use are drug addicts."
"They (the tea and coffee drugs) are comparable to opium in that they induce a habit and should be avoided."
Right now is the time to find out whether or not tea or coffee has a hold on you. It's simple and easy—quit both for ten days and use

Belgium's Destroyed Cities Will Not Be Staged As Show Places For Tourists

Historic Ruins Will Be Guarded From Public Gaze---Only Forsaken Corpse of City Remains---Many Graves Of Canadian Soldiers Are Nearby

LONDON Sept. 13—Do the spirits of the dead ever return to earthly scenes wherein they sojourned? Our soldiers tell us stories of visions of angels having appeared to them at Mons. To many of us, no doubt, they appear as idle tales, and we believe them not.

Four hundred years ago there lived a learned Flemish father of the Church, Jansen by name. He was famous as the founder of a school of doctrine. A few congregations of Jansenists still survive in Holland. With the teachings of the learned Jansen we are not here concerned. We would have it noted, though, that the Flemish divine was a student and subsequently a professor at Louvain, and his life devoted to stormy controversy upon doctrine ended quietly at Ypres, of which city he had become bishop, and in the cathedral of which he was buried. It may be that Bishop Jansen's spirit, restless and troubled upon earth, is permitted to revisit the places from which it gave forth its message. Louvain and Ypres, even in his own time, four centuries ago, were among the venerable cities. The spirit of Jansen, if it should come from its rest, will find the city in which he studied and in which he later taught, utterly despoiled. It will find that in Ypres, of which he was bishop and wherein his bones were laid, "the stones of the sanctuary are poured out in the top of every street."

The sun is high when our cars set out towards Ypres. We start from a place a score of more miles behind where the millioned armies keep guard one upon the other, yet in not one single stretch of the road, long or short, are we without some vivid arresting reminder of the grim work going on in the country towards which we are moving. Pity is we are unable to walk the distance, and gather it all into the mind slowly, instead of snatching it in flickers and flashes, as though some crazy cinema film was playing tricks all round us. It is a mad sort of "going to the fair" in this motor drive. Stout signboards on the roads and in the fields bearing directions for the moving host. Trains of motor transport, ammunition wagons, ambulances, light motor cars carrying officers of the higher command, some speeding in the same directions as ourselves, others going the opposite way. In the fields at the roadside infantry camps, artillery parks, veterinary stations, British soldiers lounging about the estaminets. Every third house or so it seems, is an estaminet. British soldiers leaning out of the windows of the cottages. The cottager himself going about his work utterly oblivious, seemingly, of the racket and noise and dust created by the armed thousands and hundreds of thousands. It is said that the Belgian or French peasant of the countryside occupied by the British has never before had such a flow of money as during the last twelve months. The British army pays for everything it takes from the inhabitant, and the British soldier is generous towards him also when he seeks to satisfy his special personal wants. The British army is mending his roads; we passed more than one battalion sweating, shovelling and pick-axeing. "He gave us decent main roads and saved our country. Should the dweller in the war zone adopt this inscription for a memorial of the British occupation it will display the crystal of truth in more than one facet.

War Pattern Churches.

An hour or more of this travel and we then become aware of drawing away from the more severe rush of the stream. Less transport is on the road, and our troops are not as numerous. We have lately seen so many houses, farms, churches knocked to bits by artillery fire that the spectacle has become tame. We have now arrived at a Flemish village. The church was a big place. It has been reduced to the regulation war pattern—the four walls of the tower still standing, walls of the body of the church mostly standing, interior pillars remaining to a variety of height, mounds of loose rubble with stray bits of lead and ironwork as the only relics of roof and windows. Houses in the vicinity deserted and in like plight. A chapel close by gutted in the same fashion. One or two English soldiers, going nonchalantly about their tasks. Occasionally the sound of roaring guns and the sight of soaring aircraft.

Corpse of Ypres.

Right in front of us the pallid corpse of Ypres stands clear in the sunlight. We leave the car some distance before the city and advance on foot. The guns in the distance are silent for the present. So are the approaches to Ypres, silent as a desert. Not a solitary inhabitant; not a stray cur or chicken. We walk half a mile along a road with small houses on both sides, the whole of them battered to bits. A little further on we encounter the military force. They are lazily sunning themselves. They examine our passes to Ypres. "I suppose you still get shells," our guide asks the sergeant. "Every day, sir," he replies.

"We'd better not walk in a cluster now," says our guide. "If we go about one or less singly it will make it less easy for an aeroplane to spot us." Accordingly we proceeded up the street singly or in couples. It is well-nigh impossible to describe how utterly and completely forsaken is Ypres. In other places upon which the fury of the German howitzers has wreaked itself we have seen odd houses or groups of houses still tenanted. Not one single solitary soul remains in this city, however. I believed the military authorities cleared off those who would have remained. Had they been suffered to stop there would not have been one roof under which they could have taken shelter. Cathedral, Cloth Hall, chateau, cottage—all are open to the sky. But the bare stumps of walls remain of what were rows of small dwellings. In other buildings the upper floors are still there, with great holes in them, and with bricks, stones, slates scattered amongst what is left of the furniture. You can enter most of such houses either by the doorway of the window, according to your choice. The doorway has utterly disappeared; so has the window, and before what was the window, is a heap of what used to be the roof, which makes entry through the window gap quite easy. We went into one such place. The clock (broken) was on the table (broken). Part of a wooden bedstead was sticking up through the ceiling and threatening to come down on us. Photographs scattered about and peeping through the rubble underfoot. A bookcase torn from the wall with a goodly portion of the wall sticking to it. An English soldier's water bottle also noticeable among the litter. A few English cartridges lying about both here and in the street. And while we are ruminating about in this house of desolation there is a scramble of footsteps at the back of the premises, and an English soldier makes his appearance. Heaven only knows what he is doing here. As far as we can see he is by himself. He gives our companion the salute and passes out into the street through a hole in the wall.

A Taube Overhead.

We had not gone much farther up the street when there came the sound of a whistle from the military police. A German aeroplane was passing, and we were to get under cover. We dived into an archway on the instant. Looking out we espied the scout of the clouds high overhead. There was not much, I imagine, for him to observe in Ypres that morning, unless he was wishful to take stock of how many more stretches of masonry had fallen to his howitzers since the day previous. Two minutes or so and the whistle went again, signifying that he had passed.

We pushed on until we reached the Cloth Hall and the cathedral. A very little more daily German practice and the beholder will be forced to guess at what these remains stand for. When we were there the magnificent tower of the Cloth Hall was but a mere stump, and the Tower of St. Martin was in a like state. They make a good mark even now, though for the German gunners. Every shot can be carefully registered, and the business of causing these seven-century old landmarks gradually to melt away affords welcome diversion for German artillerymen.

No Sight-Seeing After War.

I doubt if Ypres will be one of the "show" places after the war, where tourists will rush to "see the ruins." Parenthetically it may be added that there is even now some doubt whether there will be any rushing to see ruins after the war, except to a very limited extent. I have reason to believe that severe restrictions will be placed upon this form of sight-seeing for a long time after the peace. In the case of Ypres it would be a profitless journey. Even now there is scarcely a vestige left of the architecture of its noble buildings. And the Germans are still shelling them every day without ceasing.

Such is the state of the city which stands upon the salient of the British line, the salient which in March last was defended by the Canadians at one of the most critical periods of the fight. Many sons of Canada who fell then are buried in and around the ruined city. We passed small graveyards on the outskirts of the place, each grave with its neat wooden cross above it. The men fell in the prime of their strength. The city with a thousand years of history behind it is now a corpse, and its mangled remains are even yet outraged by the enemy in their wanton lust of destruction.

THE RED CROSS AND THE PRISONERS OF WAR

The appeal of prisoners of war has supplied a crucial test to Red Cross ideals. The prisoner of war is in the hands of the enemy and therefore of no military value. In the grim work of war public attention is directed to the combatants. The soldier who is fighting and assisting in the attainment of the main military objective—the annihilation of the enemy, has primarily a superior claim on public generosity. It would not indeed be surprising if the prisoners of war were forgotten.

Such is far from the case. To the undying honour of the population of the allied countries, the prisoner of war has been a special object of Red Cross solicitude. The work of the Prisoners of War Bureau is enlarging every day. The following is the procedure of the bureau.

The committee in charge write to the commandants of the various camps and hospitals in Germany and ask for the names of all Canadian prisoners. They write to them and ask them about their pressing needs. To those who ask for bread—these are by far the greater number — a weekly parcel of two 2-lb. loaves is sent — in addition to standardized parcels containing, tobacco, tea, cocoa, jam and biscuits. In whatever part of Germany the prisoner is interned, the bread reaches him in five or six days.

All over Canada Prisoner of War Funds have been started. The Vancouver and Ottawa Branches of the Red Cross have been successful in this enterprise. Thanks to these contributions the Canadian Prisoners of War Bureau in London is now in possession of funds to forward to the penniless Canadians in Germany. The Central Red Cross at Geneva has verified the fact that the German authorities distributes these funds in accordance with international regulations. No one need scruple to give to this fund for fear that the contribution will not reach its destination.

The Red Cross Bureau is in possession of a fairly complete list of Canadians interned in Germany. There may be delays but eventually every Canadian prisoner of war is entered on the Red Cross list. Additional information comes through the Bureau kept up at Berne in Switzerland by the British Red Cross.

The Red Cross is in this way lessening considerably the horrors of war. It removes anxiety and mental distress from innumerable Canadian homes by supplying authentic information of imprisoned relatives. It mitigates the inevitable discomforts of the prisoners' life. It keeps him from fear of starvation, and by its vigilance, it deters German gaolers from any tendency to brutality. The prisoners of War Bureau is well worthy of generous support from every Canadian.

THE PETERBOROUGH PROGRESSIVE CLUB IN WORK IT HAS DONE

On Sept. 15th a meeting of the Peterborough Progressive Club was held and the reports from the officers and various branches of the society were presented, which showed the Club was doing an excellent work and gave an idea of what had been accomplished since work was begun on Jan. 6th.

Another meeting was held on Sept. 21st, at which the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. They resulted as follows: President, Miss Peck; Vice-President, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson; Treasurer, Mrs. W. R. Morris; Secretary, Mrs. G. Stewart Cameron.

The society is again hard at work for the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shornciffe, where our boys are being well looked after. Work has gone on all summer, but with the return of people to the city after the summer holidays, it is being vigorously pushed forward. Every one of us feels that feverish anxiety to work, work, work that our own sons, husbands and brothers may not be the ones to suffer.

There is work for every woman and girl, and if you feel that push of anxiety, that desire to help some poor fellow laid low in your defence, come to the Armouries on Wednesday afternoons and you will not be idle many minutes.

The following facts and figures may give the reader some idea of the work accomplished by this society since Jan 1st: 276 night shirts, 152 day shirts, 202 pairs sox, 30 scarfs, 20 pairs wristlets, 15 pairs knee caps, 11 Balaclava caps, 23 pairs felt slippers, 5 pairs bed sox, 15 nightingales, 9 quilts, 9 scrap-books, 18 packages tobacco, $10 chocolate, 12,423 swabs, 6,770 pads, 5,252 compresses, 3,800 bandages, 6,088 sponges, 131 tape sponges, 2,046 handkerchiefs, 326 towels, 101 property bags, 134 face cloths, 30 hot water bottle covers, and other miscellaneous donations sent in.

There is now a bale of 112 pairs of sox ready to be sent to the men of the 21st now in France.

Mr. Robinson has kindly offered us the use of the Empire Theatre for Tuesday evening, the 19th Oct., on which night there will be some excellent limelight views shown and a lecture by the Rev. Mr. Ketterson on "The Great War."

It is a journey full of interest and at Winnipeg the Grand Trunk Pacific Lines stretch out across the prairies and through the Rockies which are seen at their very best on this route to the Pacific Coast.

The Children And Red Cross

What the Youngsters are Doing to Help it Along

One of the policies that the war is destroying is, the myth that German children have a keener sense of patriotism and national sacrifice than the children of other nations. When statistics are gathered of the patriotic activities of Canadian children it will be found that the youth of our country have long ago, voluntarily and enthusiastically given practical effect to the principles of National Service.

Innumerable Red Cross contributions have come from children. The ingenuity of Young Canadians has been unfailing in devising unique sources of income. The report just issued of the year's work of the Children's Branch of the Quebec Red Cross Society of a persistence and unflagging energy not usually expected from children. The Society has 35 members of the age of five and upwards.

Weekly sewing meetings were held and 2,000 garments and linen articles were made. Fifty Christmas parcels and sixty-eight Easter gifts were sent to the men at the front, in addition to a large amount of field comforts such a tobacco, papers and magazines and chocolate. Parcels were given to sailors in the Royal Navy and crews of submarines touching at Quebec. Fifty dollars was sent to the Queen of Belgium, thirty dollars was given towards the expenses of a Red Cross nurse, and fifty dollars for a bed in Cliveden hospital.

This youthful club showed a many sided appreciation of the needs of the allies, for it gave $25 to a fund for respirators, $75 to the fund for Canadian prisoners of war, $20 each to the Servian, Polish and Montenegrins Red Cross societies, and $25 to the Home for Blinded Soldiers and Sailors at St. Dunstans in England.

These funds were gathered by means of entertainments. For instance $800 was secured by means of a play which the children presented at Murray Bays, and $180 was the result of a fete at Cacouna.

This record of activity would certainly put to shame the year's results of many adults Red Cross Societies, and yet it is merely typical of the spirit of children throughout the whole country. That spirit is one of practical and effective effort free from unhealthy hysteria.

Pictures From Front Shock To Mother

Son of Mrs. Thos. Blunt in Trenches With Canadians Shown at Army Temple Last Night

NEW GUNS ARE USED AGAINST THE CANADIANS

OTTAWA, Oct. 10—The Minister of Militia has received the following communique from the Canadian general representative at the front with the Canadian troops:

Canadian General Quarters in France, Oct. 10.—There has been no material change in the situation along the front of the Canadian corps during the period October 1 to 7. The German artillery has been slightly more aggressive than usual, but effected little damage. A six-inch shell struck one of the dugouts of the 1st Brigade, but only one casualty resulted.

The enemy displayed considerable activity with machine guns and trench mortars. A new type of trench mortar shell was used against the right of our 2nd Division. It was larger than the average of this class of missle, but the aim for the most part was inaccurate. An unexploded shell of this type has been recovered by our 4th Brigade from in front of our parapets.

Every effort has been made to identify the enemy on our front. Our patrolling has been particularly active, but the enemy has remained closely to his trenches. All reports indicate that he is sending out few scouting parties, but that his trenches are as strongly held as ever.

Much useful information has been gained by our patrols regarding the enemy's wire entanglements and the general topography of the ground between the lines. Two samples of German iron screw posts for wire entanglements and samples of wire were brought in.

Our 2nd Division brigade mining sections have been organized and are now in working order. Our working parties have been busily employed improving the draining of our trenches and complete communicating trenches, gun emplacements and field works.

An unknown type of enemy aeroplane flew over our lines on October 5. It appeared to have two engines and to be exceptionally fast.

An enemy mine was exploded in front of our line on the morning of October 8, while Generals were inspecting the trenches. No damage was done.

Survey Reveals 10,000,000 Cubic Yards of Earth in Motion That Must be Dredged

PANAMA, Oct. 12—A careful survey of the slide area in the Gaillard Cut reveals the fact that there probably are 10,000,000 cubic yards of earth in motion which must be taken out by dredging operations before a permanent channel through the cut is possible. This is the conclusion reached by the canal engineers, who concede there is now little hope of opening the waterway, even for the temporary use of shipping, much before the first of the year.

The present rate of wet excavation is a million yards a month, and at this rate it would require not less than ten months to remove the mass which is now sliding into the canal considerably faster than the dredges can take it out. It is said that often the canal bottom bulges up to a height of fifteen feet above the surface of the water, due to the tremendous weight of the hillsides.

The area of motion is estimated to be about 175 acres, which constitute the greatest slide area in the history of the canal. It extends 2,000 feet along both banks of the waterway, with probably an average of 1,500 feet back of the centre line of the canal prism.

Major-General George W. Goethals, Governor of the Canal Zone, has not yet made an official announcement concerning the probability of opening a temporary channel, but it is believed shipping interests have been given to understand the nature of the situation, and it is probable that most of the one hundred ships now here awaiting passage through the canal, will be ordered to their destinations by other routes.

Two Soldiers Were Released

Their Cases Dealt With by The Military Authorities—To-day's Police Court

Two members of the 80th Battalion appeared in the Police Court this morning on a charge of drunkenness. They seemed none the worse for their week's incarceration in the County Gaol. Both pleaded guilty. These are the two who broke the good record of the company a week ago.

Capt. R. P. Watt, of the 80th Battalion, and Hon. Major Davidson, of the 57th Regiment, appeared in Court on behalf of the prisoners. Capt. Watt asked the Court to turn them over to the military authorities, who would deal with the case as they saw fit.

"We don't relegate our duties to any other Court," remarked His Worship.

Major Davidson said he had visited the men while in gaol, and had their assurance that they would abstain from further indulgence. He felt sure that they would better appreciate the importance of their position and would endeavour to be an example to their fellow-men rather than a disgrace to the cause they represented. Major Davidson requested the court to turn the men over to the military authorities and thereby have them removed from the eyes of the public.

The Court assented, remarking that the men had received sufficient punishment in that they had served one week in the County Gaol.

The men were turned over to a military guard that waited outside of the Court-Room.

Case Withdrawn.

The case against Tony Longo, who was charged with maltreating Harry Darion, was withdrawn by mutual consent. Darion accused defendant of trying to hang him by means of a

Robert Anderson was fined ten dollars for being drunk while on the prohibited list. The source from which Anderson secured his supply of liquor will form the subject of further investigation. The police claim to be in possession of the desired information.

An Appeal To Help Prisoners in Germany

It may not be generally known that at Ruhleben, Germany, there are included with the 5,000 prisoners confined there, at least 2,000 men who have no friends or money to purchase food, and they are in a sad plight. They need food badly.

There is a "Prisoners' Need Fund" in England, under the charge of Lady Drummond, 17 Cockspur street, London, and Mrs. Rivers Bulkley. A dollar provides a parcel of the most nutritious food which can be sent to a prisoner one knows or to one unknown.

Having heard of the deplorable state of these men from a direct source, viz., Davidson Ketchum, a nephew of Canon Davidson of Peterborough, who is himself a prisoner at Ruhleben, it is earnestly hoped as many as can will contribute to their necessity.

Contributions may be sent direct to Lady Drummond, 17 Cockspur street, London, England, or to Mrs. George A. Smith, 734 Water street, Peterborough, who has undertaken to forward any sums received.

FOUND DYNAMITE BOMB ON G.T.R. SEVERAL MILES OUT OF CITY

Police Are Investigating Story Told by George Sidey Who Resides in The Vicinity of The Old Kincaid Farm—Apparently Engine Had Displaced It, But Fortunately Dynamite Did Not Explode.

That an attempt was made to dynamite a G. T. R. train on the line between Peterborough and Port Hope two weeks ago to-day, is the inference from a story told to the local police by Mr. George Sidey, who resides in North Monaghan, two miles south west of the city.

Mr. Sidey was walking along the railroad at an early hour that morning when he found, leaning against one of the rails, an object that was new to his experience. Examination disclosed the fact that it was a stick of dynamite heavily wrapped in clay and other materials. Apparently it had been set at an acute angle with the top turned toward an expected train. When Mr. Sidney discovered it he concluded that it had been displaced by a train, and, of course, had failed to explode. He related the incident to neighbours and gradually it leaked through to Mr. A. McNab, the local G.T.R. station agent, and to the police.

Found the Stick.

Yesterday evening Mr. McNab provided a light engine for Detectives Newhall and Meagher, who went out to the Sidey home to investigate the story. They found the dynamite, a stick over a foot long, in Sidey's garden, at a safe distance from the house. They brought it back with them and are now working on the case. It may be remembered that about two weeks ago there was a mysterious accident on the International road along the Lake Shore.

Appeal To Individuals

Misapprehensions Regarding Red Cross Collection Corrected

Mr. A. H. Abbott, secretary of the organization for raising Ontario's contribution to the Empire-wide collection which will be taken up on Trafalgar Day, Oct 21, for the benefit of the British Red Cross Society, says that there has been in some sections of the province a misapprehension of the nature of the appeal. Some people have regarded it as being addressed to the Municipal Councils. This is a misunderstanding of the case. Grants from Municipal Councils will, of course, be gratefully received. The appeal, however, is to the individual to donate something to the service which is caring for the wounded soldiers and sailors of the Empire.

The question has been asked Why is the collection not being made through the Canadian Red Cross Society? The Central Red Cross executive points out that the movement is beyond the scope of the branches and members of the Canadian society, that the appeal is to the Canadian society, that the appeal is to the Canadian people as a whole, and that, therefore, the proper method of operation is through the Lieutenant-Governor and the public machinery of the provinces. It is the duty of every member of the Canadian Red Cross Society to give assistance to the movement, but anything they may do or give will be contributed as private individuals and not as members of branches of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

FINE OCTOBER STRAWBERRIES

Mr. Samuel Edwards, of Louro, near the city, has left with The Examiner, beautiful evidence of the extraordinary conditions of growth this year. We are accustomed almost every year to a second crop of raspberries and of roses, but strawberries are usually not as enterprising. Mr. Edwards' bunch of strawberries consists of a cluster of about a dozen in all stages of development, from the fully ripe to the smallest green one. The largest has a circumference of 4½ inches. The berries are of the Clyde variety, and the name maintains the reputation of the Clyde for super-large productions, strawberries and dreadnoughts.

A Meeting on Thursday Evening

Council Will Meet To Deal With Appeal of British Red Cross Society

On Thursday evening next the City Council will meet in special session to deal with the appeal that has been sent broadcast by Lord Lansdowne on behalf of the British Red Cross Society and the French Order of St. John. It is hoped to raise at least $500,000 in Ontario. The Peterborough City Council has headed the local subscription list with $500. The citizens of Peterborough will have an opportunity of supplementing this amount and thereby aiding in the work of alleviating the sufferings of sick and wounded soldiers and sailors. Canadian troops will share in the benefits.

The meeting, which is called by Mayor Buller, in compliance with the request of Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will be open to the public.

Pte. Carveth Is Now With The 8th C.M.R.

Writes of Life in England With the Mounted Rifles

Mrs. Wm. Carveth, who is at present in Claydon, Saskatchewan, and whose son enlisted here with the 8th C.M.R., has received the following letter from him:

Shorncliffe, Eng., Sept. 3, 1915.

Dear Mother,—I received your letter and was pleased to hear from home once more. It is the first word I have heard from home since I came here, and this is the fourth time I have written to you. It is raining here this afternoon, so we are not drilling. They use us pretty good here. They don't keep us out in much rain. Our colonel has been taken away from us and sent back to Canada. We all were sorry to see him go, for every one liked him well.

We had an inspection by the King yesterday, the first time I have seen him. I was near enough to him to reach him with my rifle. I thought he was a very old man. He looked to me to be about sixty. There was a lot of big people with him. I am not sure but I think Lord Kitchener was there too. They were all on horseback.

When we left Peterborough we were in the Third Contingent, but we are in the Second now, so I guess we will get to the front sooner, but it will be some time yet I expect.

I was up to London last Sunday. It is about eighty miles from here. The fare is 5s 6d ($1.32) return, and I saw some great sights. Was all through the Tower of London, Westminster Abbey, the Parliament Buildings, saw Buckingham Palace and a lot of other buildings you have heard about. I saw where kings have been beheaded years ago; the block and axe. Saw the chair the King was crowned in and so many other things, it would take too long to tell you them all. A man showed us through and explained everything as we went along. I also saw the Crown the King wore at his Coronation, and the largest diamond in the world. It was about the size of your fist. This would all have been very interesting to Archie if he had seen it.

I suppose you will be in Edmonton before this letter gets there. I am glad you have decided to go west this fall. It will be a change for you. You can tell them all there that I am still living and well.

I am sorry I didn't see Stanley before I left Barriefield. I went over to the hospital one night to see him, but I couldn't get in. Well I must close. From your loving son, Gordon.

Anthrax Victim Believed Dying

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—George F. Stackpole, seventy-nine years old, an attorney of Riverhead, L. I., was reported to be dying in Bellevue Hospital of anthrax, a disease very rare in humans and even rare among cattle and horses in this latitude. John Miller died of the same disease last Wednesday, and a Brooklyn girl is believed to have died of it several days ago.

Mr. Stackpole was bothered by a small sore on his neck last week and consulted Dr. H. M. Silver, of No. 276 Madison Avenue. Dr. Silver sent him to the French Hospital. There the physicians believed it was anthrax and called Dr. Henry Dwyer, of Bellevue, and Dr. W. C. Cramp, of No. 340 West End Avenue, who are familiar with that disease. They decided it was anthrax and sent Mr. Stackpole to Bellevue.

He was informed that he probably would not live twenty-four hours, as the disease was spreading very rapidly and could not be checked. His wife and daughter were with him at the hospital and to his daughter Mr. Stackpole dictated a letter to his friends, in which he stated he knew he was dying and was prepared to go some of the more susceptible mem

Easy Divorce Is New Church's Code

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Preaching the doctrine of "The Church of the Social Revolution," the Rev. Bouck White, from the platform of Bryant Hall, Forty-Second Street and Sixth Avenue, outlined the marriage law as the "social revolution" devotees would have it. Instead of the marriage tie enduring as long as life shall last, he said, it should endure just so long as love shall last. Yet divorce, he said, is sometimes an evil and should be frowned upon.

The speaker explained that in the matter of the social revolution marriage service the pledges made by the bridal couple are such that in the event of mutual agreement that love no longer exists each is entitled to seek freedom through the courts. He is married with the new ceremony Miss Daisy Leonore Johnson, of No. 179 Winfield Avenue, and Victor Arthur Kilian, of No. 162 Griffith Street, Jersey City.

Hope Sashes Used In Toronto "Tech"

The magazine devoted to Technical Education in Ontario, in describing the new Central Technical School in Toronto, refers as follows to the output of a Peterborough factory:

"The steel sashes throughout the building, nearly 2,000 in all, were supplied by Henry Hope & Sons of Canada, Limited. The Hope Company of Birmingham stand as pioneers in steel sash making. The three-point contact and sections of solid mill-rolled steel, with superior finish of their casement sash—a special feature of the Hope sash—make it impossible for dust or rain to penetrate. All the casements as well as sash are made to insure the maximum of ventilation. (The types of sash made by Hope's are of a very wide range, including casements of all patterns suitable for anything from a cottage to an office building.

The gun-metal hardware supplied is also a special feature of the Hope sash, and includes a range large enough to suit any requirements. The factory sashes in the two light courts (six hundred and fifty in all) were made in Hope's new factory in Peterborough, Ont., and are acknowledged to be the best steel sash on the market."

Mystery In Death Of Francis P. Motley

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 12. Announcement was made by the family of Francis P. Motley, of Boston and Pride's Crossing, that he had died at sea on October 4. All information as to when and how the death occurred was refused tonight by members of the family. Charles P. Curtis, the Motley family lawyer, said:

"I can say nothing. I doubt if the family desire any publicity."

Mr. Motley on October 4 was in the Salem court on a charge of recklessly driving an automobile and was sentenced to thirty days in the House of Correction. He appealed and the case was to have come up again to-morrow.

Mr. Motley was a son of Mrs. E. Preble Motley, of Pride's Crossing and Beacon street, Boston, and was twenty-four years old. He was a student at Harvard in 1910 but was not graduated.

Christian Convention In The Assembly Hall

The local assembly of Christains gathered unto the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, held their annual convention in the Assembly Hall over the Grand Trunk Ticket Office on George street on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Many of the Lord's people from different parts took advantage of the holiday season and came together to hear the word of God, so that the assemblies similarly gathered were represented from Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Orillia, Deseronto, Campbellford, Glenarm, Waverley, Gardenville and Lang, and possibly other centres. Conventions in different parts are covered on most of the holidays, Brantford, Forest and Collingwood having them at the same time as Peterborough. The largest of these conventions in Ontario is held in Toronto at Easter time, some 800 or 900 from Canada and the States gathering there. The meetings were left entirely to the guiding of the Spirit of God, there being no chairman or minister. A noticeable feature was that all, with perhaps a few exceptions, brought a Bible to follow with the speakers the portions of scripture read, and a "Believer Hymn Book," the collection of hymns used at these conventions. The choice of the hymns, like the preaching, being left to the guidance of the Spirit of God, and the words being sung with the "understanding" and from the heart, was in perfect harmony, so that no choir or musical instrument was used at any of the meetings, and as a servant of the Lord remarked after leading a hymn sung at the last Toronto conference, "went up to heaven." Another feature was that no woman's voice was heard in any form of public ministry throughout the conference, except in the dining room and kitchen where some 400 or 450 meals were served during the three days, her sphere as taught in the scriptures, being the home and not the church.

A preliminary meeting was held on Friday evening at 7.30. The greater part of the time was occupied in prayer for the coming meetings and praise, and Mr. W. H. Hunter of Fairhaven, Mass., and Mr. John McCartney, of Toronto, filled the remaining time with suitable ministry. On Saturday morning at 10.30 the Christians came together for the first meeting, several visiting servants of the Lord leading in prayer and praise. Rev. W. F. Douglas, an evangelist residing in the city, was the speaker at this meeting.

In the afternoon at 2.30 Mr. Robert McCrory, late of the north of Ireland, now of Hamilton, and Mr. Hunter, were the speakers.

In the evening at 7 o'clock an open air Gospel meeting was held at the corner of Simcoe and George before the meeting in the hall at 7.30, which was addressed after much time spent waiting upon God, by Mr. J. McCartney.

On Sunday morning some 80 of the Lord's people "showed forth" the Lord's death in the "breaking of bread" and "drinking of wine," according to 1 Cor., 11:2c.

In the afternoon Mr. James Goodfellow, of Guelph, Mr. Joseph Pearson of Deseronto, and Mr. Hunter, spoke from several portions of scripture to the appreciation and profit of all present. The evening meeting at 7 o'clock was for the preaching of the Gospel. Mr. McCrory and Mr. McCartney were the two witnesses who testified to the realties of eternity and the saving power of the Gospel. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." Quite a number of strangers were present at this meeting, so that the number comprised over 100, and the prayer of God's people present was that sinners might be reached by the word. This was preceded by an open-air meeting at Simcoe and George. Mr. Douglas left on the morning train for Galt, being called to attend the funeral of an old friend in the assembly in that city, He returned by the late evening train and was present at the meeting on Monday morning, which was addressed by Mr. Harold Crone of Toronto. Mr. Douglas followed with a few touching remarks about the sister in Christ who had been called home from Galt, who was also known to some of the older ones in the meeting, which was then closed with a hymn and prayer.

In the afternoon Messrs. Goodfellow, McCrory and McCartney addressed the meeting. Mr. McCrory made reference to the present war in Europe, stating that lasting peace would never be returned to the earth until the Son of God who had been murdered and cast out by the world at large, had the reins of government in hand. (Read Ezekiel 2:27).

Some of the visitors leaving for their respective homes on the afternoon trains, the evening meeting was not so large. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Hunter were the speakers The Gospel was chiefly the theme of the meeting.

Most of the evangelists and others will be leaving the city by to-day's trains. Mr. Hunter leaves on Wednesday for a few meetings in Campbellford and then goes on to Madoc for an effort in the Gospel. While the war did not occupy much part in the platform ministry, it was laid considerably upon the hearts of those who led in prayer.

The local company of Christians one and all, with those coming from a distance, heartily appreciated the conference meeting.

Mr. S. Sykes of Toronto was at the meeting with a supply of Bibles, hymn books and Gospel literature which he had for sale.—Com.

How Do You Buy Roofing?

If you are in the habit of asking your dealer simply for some "Ready" Roofing or "Rubber" Roofing, you will probably get a roofing that is not guaranteed, or one made by an unknown manufacturer, or one which will begin to leak a few years after it is put on your roof. You avoid all these risks, save money in the long run, and get a guarantee of from 5, 10 or 15 years, according to thickness, backed by the largest responsible roofing concern in the world.

Certain-teed
Roofing

Why be satisfied with an unknown or poor quality roofing when you get Certain-teed for only a few cents more per square? By reason of the enormous out-put of our big mills—the largest Roofing and Building Paper industry in the world—we can sell this guaranteed Roofing through our dealers at a reasonable price basis.

It is simply a question as to whether you will insist on the best or take what you get. A man never sees anything unless he looks for it, and so long as you look merely for a roll of Roofing, you are running a chance of not getting your money's worth.

GRUESOME STORY OF ARMENIAN MASSACRE

Authentic Report of Committee of Prominent Americans---Women and Girls Are Brutally Murdered or Sold Into Slavery---Unspeakable Outrages Condoned by Germans.

ONE OF WORST CRIMES OF THE CENTURIES

Revealing a reign of systematized barbarity which has for its only purpose the extinction of Christianity within the domain of the Turk, and more terrible than any contained in the worst pages of mediaeval history, the Committee on Armenian Atrocities made public in this city yesterday its long awaited report on the outrages being penetrated against Christain Armenians in Turkish Armenia and Asia Minor.

The report constitutes an unqualified indictment of the German government as being directly responsible for permitting the continuance of the outrages, which have swept hundreds of villages, towns and cities bare of the Christain population, strewn the roads for hundreds of miles with rotting human bodies, and brought death privation and suffering to more than half of the 2,000,000 Armenians who dwelt within Turkish borders when the infuriated hordes of the Sultan entered the war at the side of the Teutonic allies. The atrocities are unreservedly asserted to be at the order of the central government of Turkey.

Clearly and in unmistakable terms the report foreshadows the complete annihilation of all non-Moslems everywhere within Turkish dominion unless civilization immediately intervenes to put a stop to the most ruthless policy of extermination ever contemplated for the persecution of Christians.

Although now ostensibly directed entirely against Armenians who have displayed revolutionary tendencies or been guilty of other political crimes the policy admittedly sponsored by the Turkish government officials has divested American colleges and mission stations of professors, teachers and missionaries; priests and bishops have been wantonly slain; women and girls have been brutally murdered, sold into slavery or worse by the thousands, and ruin and desolation, torture and unspeakable horrors are everywhere the rule rather than the exception.

Every previous effort of Turk and Christain, neutral and belligerent alike, to effect a curbing of the outrages so far has proved entirely futile.

"The situation," declares the report, "Is becoming more critical daily, as there is no telling where this thing will end. The Germans are being blamed on every hand, for if they have not directly ordered this wholesale slaughter (for it is nothing less than the extermination of the Armenian race) they at least condone it.

"The Greek and Armenian Patriarchs have been refused audiences with the Ministers of the Turkish governments Foreign Ambassadors, have been rebuffed and told that what the imperial government wishes to do with its subjects is none of their business."

Coincident with the issuance of the report the committee announced also the starting of a fund for the relief of the persecuted Armenians.

"In response to the urgent appeal of the Ambassador, Mr Henry Morgenthau," this appeal stated, "the Committee on Armenian Atrocities, in co-operation with the Committee of Mercy, has decided to make a wide appeal for funds.

"The crimes now being perpetrated upon the Armenian people surpass in their horror and cruelty anything that history has recorded during the last thousand years. The educated and the ignorant, the rich and the poor, are all being subjected to every form of brutality and outrage. It is understood, however, that very many Turks are opposed to this policy of persecution. It is hoped that prompt action will make it possible to save a great many lives and repatriate some at least of those who have been driven from their homes. Funds will be forwarded to the Ambassador as fast as received. Donations should be sent to the treasurer, Mr. Charles R. Crane, No. 70 Fifth avenue, New York city."

Work of the Committee.

The detailed report of the committee which contains a resume of the sworn statements of eyewitnesses of the terrible tragedies being inflicted upon all who refuse to embrace the faith of Mahomet, follows a preliminary report by the same body of investigators issued a week ago, in which it was estimated that already not less than 600,000 Christain Armenians are either dead or dying as a result of Turkish barbarity. Now it is estimated that this number must be increased to between 600,000 and 700,000, with the prospect that ultimately the entire Armenian population either will be destroyed or forced into Islamism.

The committee which made the investigation in response to widespread popular demand for the truth about the atrocities was composed exclusively of Americans. The report is based upon the testimony not only of Americans but of Germans, Greeks, Turks, Bulgarians and Englishmen, and upon information derived from unquestionable sources and sifted and proved until there can be, in the opinion of the committee members, no possibility of doubt regarding its authenticity. The committee had among its members Mr. Charles R. Crane, Professor Samuel T. Dutton, Mr. Oscar S. Straus, once Ambassador to Turkey; Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge, Mr. Arthur Curtiss James, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Mr. Frank Mason North, Mr. John R. Mott, Mr. Stanley White, Mr. James L. Barton, Mr. William Sloane, Mr. William J. Haven, Mr. [illegible] Plimpton, Mr. Karl Davis [illegible], Mr. Frederick Lynch, Mr. Norman Hapgood, Mr. Edward Lincoln Smith, Bishop David H. Greer and Mr. William W. Rockwell. In explanation of the anonymity of the report, the committee made this statement.

"For reasons that will be obvious to all, the names and positions of the various writers cannot be given at this time. These are known to the committee, who vouch for them and for their statements. In most cases it was necessary to conceal the place from which the statements were written, and even the names of the cities and towns referred to in order that the writer or his interests may not suffer irreparable harm."

In its narration of the terrible cruelties being inflicted upon a submissive and readily controllable population, the report reveals a condition more terrible than that forced upon the Belgians at the beginning of the European conflict. The statements contained in the report date back to the beginning of April, and from then on form a chronological narrative of tragedy, pain, suffering and death that is all but unbelievable.

"The movement against Armenians forms part of a concerted movement against all non-Turkish and minorities and progress elements including Zionist," was the declaration contained in the first authenticated report received from the terror stricken region.

From that time reports of the exile of whole cities, towns and villages followed each other rapidly, but it was not until about the middle of July that it became positively known that the barbarities had reached an extent unparalleled in Christain history and had brought with them the return of the bastinado and other means of cruelty little used since the days of the Roman persecutions.

"The following," says the report, "is the text of the government order covering the case:—Article 2—The commander of the army, of independent army corps and of divisions may, in case of military necessity, and in case they suspect espionage or treason send away, either individually or in mass, the inhabitants of village or towns, to install them in other places."

"The orders of commanders may have been reasonably humane, but the execution of them has been for the most part unnecessarily harsh, and in many cases accompanied by horrible brutality to women and children, to the sick and to the aged. Whole villages were deported at an hour's notice with no opportunity to prepare for the journey, not even, in some cases, to gather together the scattered members of the family, so that little children were left behind. At the mountain village of Goban the women were at the washtub and were compelled to leave the clothes in the water and take the road barefooted and half clad as they were.

"In Hadjin well-to-do people who had prepared food and bedding for the road were obliged to leave it in the street, and afterward suffered greatly from hunger.

"In many cases the men were (those of military age were nearly all in the army) bound together with cords or chains. Women with little children in their arms, or in exthemely delicate condition, were driven along under the whip like cattle. Some women became so completely worn out and hopeless that they left their infants beside the road. Many women and girls had been outraged. At one place the commander of the gendarmerie openly told the men to whom he consigned a large company that they were at liberty to do what they chose with the women and girls.

"As to subsistence, there has been a great difference in different places. In some places the government has fed them. In some places it has neither fed them nor permitted others to do so. There has been much hunger, thirst and illness and real starvation and death."

Bastinadoed to Death.

The authenticated report of the bastinado treatment, as obtained by the committee, says:—

"I was called to a house one day where I saw a sheet which originated from the prison and which was being sent to the wash. I got to the bottom of the matter by the help of two very reliable persons who witnessed part of it themselves.

"The prisoner is put in a room (similar to the time of the Romans.) Gendarmes standing in two's at both sides and two at the end of the room administer, each in their turn, bastinadoes as long as they have enough force in them. At the times of the Romans forty strokes were administered at the very most; in this place, however, 200, 300, 500 and even 800 strokes are administered. The foot swells up, then bursts open, due to the numerous blows. The prisoner is then carried back into the prison and to bed by the rest of the prisoners. The prisoners who become unconscious after these blows are revived through means of cold water, which is thrown on their heads.

"On the next day, or more exactly, during the night, as all ill treatments are carried on at night in —, as well as in—, the whole bastinadoing is being carried on again in spite of swollen feet and wounds. I was then in —, but in that prison there were also thirty prisoners in number, and all had their feet in such a state that they began to burn and had to be amputated, or were already taken off. A young man was beaten to death in the space of five minutes. Apart from the bastinadoing, other methods were employed, too—such as putting hot irons on the chest. An iron forger who was suspected of having forged the shells of bombs was let free only after his toes were burned off with sulphur. I have seen the wounds."

Hundreds of cases are recited in the report of parties of ten, twenty and even one hundred men being led off, supposedly to exile in places several hours distance from the original place of abode.

In almost every case the guards who left with these prisoners returned in a very brief time with the announcement that some of the prisoners had escaped but that the others had been delivered at their intended destination. Just afterward reports were received that all of the prisoners had been killed and that because of the wounds they bore when the journey started it was absurd to believe any could have escaped. At least not one of these prisoners ever has been seen again by his friends or relatives.

Further on in the report it is shown that the orders driving hundreds of women and children into exile at a time when the men of fighting age of their family already were victims of army conscription were preceded by the release from jails of hundreds of murderers, bandits and thieves of the worst possible character. These fled into the mountains and, unsought and unrestrained, formed marauding bands, who lay just outside the villages awaiting the appearance of the hordes being driven into exile. The travellers were met by the bandits and despoiled of what little food and money they were able to gather together before being driven from their homes. Their guards in every case either fled or offered no resistance to the marauding parties, and the outrages of women and girls is declared to have been among the least of the brutalities inflicted.

"The women," continues the report, "believe that they were going to worse than death, and many carried poison in their pockets. Some carried picks and shovels to bury those they knew would die by the wayside. During this reign of terror no notice was given that escape was easy; that any one who accepted Islam would be allowed to remain safely at home. The offices of the lawyers who recorded applications were crowded with people petitioning to become Mohammedans. Many did it for the sake of their women and children, feeling that it would be a matter of only a few weeks before relief would come.

"The children attending the American school conducted by—, also those children left with them by persons being deported, have all be taken and placed in a school organized by a local committee, of which the— is president and the Greek Metropolitan vice president. Into this school all Armenian children, females up to fifteen and males to ten years of age, are being placed as soon as the parents are sent off. Children above these ages go with the parents."

Describing one of the marches to which, at the end, could be expected only death, the report says:

Temperance Workers Are Considering Next Move

Local Option Campaign Would Have Patriotic Object of Conserving Manhood—Deputation to Wait on License Commission.

A meeting was held last evening in the Sunday School Hall of the Murray Street Baptist Chruch of those interested in the temperance situation in Peterborough. A thorough discussion was held of the advisability of launching a local option campaign, the vote to be taken at the Municipal election. Final decision was deferred for a few days. In the meantime a committee which was appointed last evening will interview prominent citizens with the object of enlisting their cooperation, and securing an organization which would guarantee success in the event of a campaign being held. On patriotic grounds it was considered most important that a campaign should be held at this time to conserve not only the young manhood of the city, but the economic waste involved in expenditures for alcoholic beverages.

It was decided to organise strong deputations to wait on the Provincial License Commissioners when they meet in Peterborough on November 5th. The County Temperance Association is planning to organise deputations from the surrounding locality to ask that the shop license in Peterborough should be cut off, as it is the shops that supply the liquor for the outlying districts. The City Association will endorse this request, will urge that the hours of sale be reduced to 7 p.m., as was done in the case of Kingston, some months ago, which, like Peterborough, is a military centre, and the executive of the Association will consider what further requests, if any, will be made of the commission.

A meeting of the workers will be held a week or more before the Commission meets to complete final arrangements.

Enlisted To Fight Germans Killed in Rio Grande Hills Supposedly With Mexicans

Ernest Smith, a Peterborough boy who enlisted for overseas service to do his "bit" against the Germans, was recently shot and killed in the Rio Grande hills, across the Mexican border.

And thereby hangs a tale, to some extent circumstantial, but apparently true even in details. From the report received by the local authorities, he is the son of Mrs. Wm. Payne who, until a short time ago, resided at 500 Cedar street, and has recently moved to a house north of the Normal school. Mr. Payne, who enlisted with the first contingent, the father of five children, was Smith's step-father.

The young lad is said to have been one of those infected with the 'wanderlust.' He was most contented when on the move.

After his enlistment here, and his journey to Barriefield, he was forced to the hospital with an attack of rheumatism where, it is reported, he was confined for a considerable time. Whether the experience dimmed his enthusiasm for Europe, or he feared later attacks of rheumatism while in camp, is not known. It is only known that some days later when he disappeared, his name was entered among those who had deserted the colours.

He was a comparatively young chap and apparently he found little trouble in reaching the United States, where he drifted from the north to the south boundary. Probably it was both the warm climate and the promise of adventure akin to that he had forsaken that lured him. In this section his disappearance was regarded as complete.

There is no information as how young Smith lost his life, but it may be safely surmised that he was a victim of the guerilla warfare in the Rio Grande Hills across the Mexican border. The only identification card on the body was a picture bearing the address of a local man who received word of the sad fatality yesterday.

MISS EDGAR WINS PRIZE

Niece of Messrs. Edgar Bros. Distinguishes Herself

The article in the "Sundridge Echo," headed "A Successful Canadian Girl," was written by Miss Edgar, daughter of Mr. J. Edgar, M. P. P., Parry Sound district, and niece of Postmaster Edgar, and Alderman Edgar of this city.

"A Successful Canadian Girl"

Havergal girls will be interested in the success of one of their graduates Miss Mary Susanne Edgar of Sundridge, Ontario, a daughter of Mr. J. Edgar, M.P.P. Miss Edgar read of a dramatic contest in the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which called for a play setting forth the work of some women's organisation, or the development of thought and effort among the women of America. Miss Edgar, who was then taking a course at the New York Y.W.C.A., Training School, sent a poetic drama, called "The Wayside Piper," with four songs and dances, and a final hymn to the music of Beethoven's "Hymn of Praise." The play by this aspiring young Canadian not only won the first prize in a competition of four hundred, but has been most successfully produced as the Commencement Play at the Training School, New York, also at the Silver Bay Conference and Bar Harbor during the summer. The judges were the editors of the "Century Magazine," "Everybody's," "Woman's Home Companion," and Miss Helen Thomas of the National Y.W.C.A. Board, and the prize was given by several women writers—among them Kate Douglas Wiggin.

The "Piper" recalls the magic player of Hamelin traditions, and is introduced, in this latest adaptation of the old story, as solving the "girl" problem with his music. Guided by the Spirit of the Twentieth Century, he goes forth from the gathering of the counsellors to accomplish his happy mission of making the hearts of girls attune to his notes of Faith, Hope and Love. These three graces come in turn to breathe into the piper's flute the magic of their spirit. Here is Love's message:

"O music maker I am known as Love;
My home is everywhere; I set my feet
Within the starry pathway of the sky,
In quiet places where the wild things are,
And in the marts of men. I wake the dawn
And kindle fires along the sunset sky;
I blossom in the rose and nightly fold
My tender arms about the universe.
I wake the smile that creeps on baby lips,
I wake the thrill that comes in youths' glad hour;
I wake the song that everywhere finds birth
For I am Love, and Love is Life's great dower.
So, piper, to my lips I place your flute
And give your music something of myself.
Now fare you forth along the world's highway
And waken there the symphony of Love."

TEN THOUSAND BUSHELS THRASHED OFF 200 ACRES

Some Extraordinary Yields Reported in Northwest—Work Well Advanced.

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 12. — Telegrams received by the Department of Agriculture from all parts of the Province indicate that in the southeastern portion 20 per cent. of the wheat is thrashed, and 40 per cent. of the oats crop. In the southwest, where there have been continuous rains, 17½ per cent. of wheat, 15 per cent. of oats and 15 per cent. of the barley are thrashed. Not more than 5 per cent. of the flax has been thrashed so far. In the northeast 45 per cent. of the wheat is thrashed, 30 per cent. of the oats and 20 per cent. of the barley. In the northwest 60 percent. of all grains is thrashed.

When the story of this year's thrashing is completed some extraordinary yields will be heard of. One farmer west of Unity has thrashed 10,000 bushels of No. 1 Northern off 200 acres, and such instances will not be isolated.

CORRESPONDENCE CONCERNING SOUTH CENTRAL SANITATION

The Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly give publicity to the following communicaiton I have just received on the sanitary condition of the South Central school:

To whom it may concern:

This is to assure you that I have communicated with all the physicians in town and none report any cases such as that pictured in Saturday's Examiner.

I have examined the South Central school re sanitation and find that with very slight alterations it will be rendered O.K.

I also wish to inform you that there are no contagious diseases reported to me south of Brock street with the exception of one typhoid case.

Parents need not be afraid of sending their children to the South Central school under present conditions."

C. H. Amys, M.D., M.H.O."

Peterborough, Oct. 12, 1915.

I might add to the above that the South Central school has been singularly free from diseases for years, as the splendid record of the attendance of pupils will show.

As for sickness on the teaching staff, there have been no more cases than on the other staffs of the city schools.

As a result of Saturday's article in the Examiner I find that the attendance of pupils at the South Central school has been seriously affected today (Tuesday.) This is most regrettable and I hope that parents will now realize that no danger threatens their children at this school and that the Board of Education is doing all that it possibly can for the physical as well as for the mental and moral well-being of the children.

A. Mowat, I.P.S.

In reference to the above, the Examiner desires to add as much as possible to allaying any unrest or concern that has been created by the article handed us for publication on Saturday. The vital importance of the issue raised, as well as confidence in the discretion and interest in our schools of the gentleman supplying it, seemed to justify its publication. Nothing, of course, can be more important than provision for protecting and maintaining the public health; and this importance the School Board has recognised. A member of the Board of Educaiton, informs the Examiner that during the recent past holidays, $500 was expended to remedy the unsatisfactory sanitary conditions which he admitted former'y obtained at the South Central school. There must have been something amiss, before the article referring to the condition of the school appeared, if there has been a falling off in attendance. It could hardly be all due to the publicity given on Saturday; that could not have had so immediate a result. However, the Board seems to have done all that can be done to put the school buildings in a sanitary condition. It is frankly admitted that the Board and the Inspector are anxious to do the best possible in the interests of our schools —pupils as well as teachers; but in the matter of sanitary conditions of buildings ,as in private residences, there are sometimes hidden causes, not easy of discovery; which the greatest care and attention cannot readily discover, and cannot therefore, effectively deal with. All that can be done is to exercise the greatest vigilance, which, it is felt, is being done in the case in question.

Would Bring Japan To Offset Bulgaria

British Newspapers Fever Using All Resources Against German Peril.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—In connection with the Balkan embroglio the English newspapers are asking whether what Emperor William once described as the "yellow peril" should be pitted on European battlefields against what they term the "German peril."

Taking the ground that all resources ought to be used, The Observer, in an editorial, strongly urges the bringing in of Japan if Bulgaria strikes. It says the appearance of a quarter of million of Japanese troops in the Turkish Empire would correspond with the vital interests which Japan has indirectly at stake, as "Germany, once triumphant in the Near East, would reappear in the Far East to create a mighty power in China."

A CHALLENGE

Percival Young of Peterborough challenges Mr. Jones, former City Champion of London, Ont., also winner of Soo, Michigan, and Detroit amateur races, to a two or four-mile roller skating race, to be held at the Brock Street Roller Rink of this city any time after the 15th of November.

21st IN THE TRENCHES

Mrs. R. H. Muir, Peterborough, has received the following interesting letter from her husband, Pte. R. H. Muir, now at the front, with the 21st battalion.

Dear Wife,—Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and still alive. I have been seven days in the trenches and am still in them, but I expect to get out soon for a few days' rest. I am some place in Belgium. I have been under heavy shell fire for about a couple of days. It is awful to see the big shells burst over our heads. I had a small piece of shrapnel hit my cap and knock it off, but it did not injure me, so I picked it up and put it in my pocket for a souvenir. I may say everything is all right so far, and all the boys from Peterborough are safe and happy. We had a few slightly wounded but doing well. We sleep in a hole in the side of the trench, called a dugout. It is fierce in the trench when it rains. You might send me some cigarettes if you can. I received three dollars from you to-day in the trenches and the piece out of the Examiner. Glad to hear you are well and the children at school. I will write you a letter when I come out of the trenches. If any person would like to send me cigarettes I would be very thankful for them. Remember me to Mrs. Helson and Mrs. Hill. God bless you all.

Your husband,
R. H. M.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeths Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, it prevents dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair.

ATTACKS REPULSED

Bulgars Have Made Little Progress in Their Invasion of Serbia—Statement From Nish Report

STRIKE AT RAILWAY

PARIS, Oct. 13—Bulgarian troops invaded Serbia last night.

They penetrated Servia at Zaitchar (Seajecar) according to reliable information to-day.

Bulgar Attacks Repulsed.

London, Oct. 12.—The Serbian legation to-day received this telegram from Nish:

"Last night Bulgarians began an attack in the direction of Vlasina.

"All attacks up to the present have been repulsed decisively."

A despatch to the Times from Athens says that the Bulgarians began attack on Serbia at Caribogbaz, near Kniashevatz, at midday on Monday.

Two Bulgarian divisions (20,000) are engaged in the attack on the Serbians near Kniashevatz, said an Athens message received by the London Star to-day.

Kniashevatz is on a branch line railroad running from Nish to Seajecar, a fortified town on the Danube. Kniashevatz is 25 miles north-east of Nish, which has been the capital of Serbia since the Austrian occupation of Belgrade early in the war. It is an equal distance east of Alexinatz, a station on the Nish-Belgrade railroad, located on the Morava river. At Alexinatz the Serbs were defeated by the Turks in 1876.

Military experts have assumed that when Bulgaria struck at Nish she would attempt to seize the railroad running from Belgrade to Constantinople by way of Nish. Another line runs direct from Nish to Salonika and is the only one over which the allied troops now being landed at the Greek port could be transported north to the aid of the Serbians. It was unofficially reported Saturday that a bridge on this one had been blown up by Bulgarians.

Opening of hostilities against Serbia by Bulgaria has been a foregone conclusion since the rupture between Bulgaria and the allies. In fact the Bulgarian Government issued a manifesto to the nation last week proclaiming its decision to espouse the cause of Germany, Austria, and Turkey.

Vlasina is probably intended for Vlasotince, a Serbian town 25 miles southeast of Nish. It lies eight miles east of the Serbian railroad running north and south between Nish and Uskub and is about twenty miles west of the Bulgarian frontier on a latitudinal line with Sofia.

The Serbian railroad, which is the objective of the Bulgarian army in this region, as it serves as the main road over which Anglo-French troops landed at Salonika, Greece, can be transported into northern Serbia, runs parallel to the Bulgarian western frontier at a distance varying from 15 to 25 miles. Vlasotince has a population of 4,000.

AUSTRIANS ARE IN RETREAT IN GALICIA MANY ARE CAPTURED

Russians Vigorously on the Offensive, Capturing Cannon and Quantities of Munitions---Austrians Retreat in the Strypa Region Has Become a Flight.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 13.—Russia was vigorously on the offensive again to-day against the Austrians. Important Muscovite gains had been made in Galicia. Having crossed the Strypa river the Czar's forces were driving the enemy before them in disorder. The Austrians were in flight rather than retreat, several thousand of them with many cannon and quantities of munitions had been captured. To the northward gains though less important than those in Galicia were made against the Germans. Furious fighting still progressed in the Dvinsk region.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The report that use of Japanese troops in the Balkans were being considered seriously by the Allies is discredited here to-day. High officials said it was felt that such a step would have a bad effect on neutral public opinion, especially in the United States. The Serbian temporary capital's transfer from Nish to Monastir was expected to-day within 48 hours.

BULGARS INVADE SERBIA—Map shows battle lines in the new war area north and east of Nish. The enemy paid heavily for taking Semendria and some bridgeheads along the river. South of Rum the Germanic troops were repulsed.

THINKS CANADA HAS TURNED CORNER

LONDON, Oct 13—The Observer's financial editor considers that the Dominion has turned the corner as witnessed by the railway returns, showing the effect of the bumper harvest.

"There seems little doubt that the Canadian revival is ahead," he concludes, "but the problems of municipal finance are not altogether encouraging. It is to be hoped there will be no speculative revival."

THE CENSOR POLICY

LONDON, Oct. 12—In an editorial to-day dealing with the Home Secretary's justification of the censor, the Times says: "The excisions from the despatches of its correspondent, Mr. Buchan, were made from our own knowledge by two separate sets of authorities and against the express desire of the generals in the field."

On the general question of the censorship the Times says: "The public and the press are perfectly right to hold the press bureau responsible for the mischievous censorship policy. It is not their business or within their power to probe the mysterious tangle of responsibility which lies behind it. There must be an end of divided responsibilities."

Italians Are Gaining Ground

ROME, Oct. 12, via Paris, Oct 13.—The following official statement was issued to-day from the headquarters of the Italian general staff:

"In the zone between the Adige valley and Brenta, notably at the head of Valdesa, detachments of our troops made bold dashes against enemy positions. Breaches were made in barbed wire entanglements, some defensive works were destroyed or damaged, and groups of enemy troops were repulsed. We made a few prisoners, including an officer.

"The enemy, on his side, during the night of the 10th-11th, attacked our positions on Monte Maronia, at Naiva Cosorno and Alta on the plateau north-west of Arsiero. He was repulsed with losses.

"On the Carso plateau small advances by our troops are reported, particularly in the vicinity of the wood called Ferro di Cavallo."

A "Casualty" Not Quite Like Others

"Missing, believed dead," is the news that comes to Rudyard Kipling from "somewhere in France" in regard to John Kipling, his only son, a boy of 18. So many parents all over Europe, in these dark days, are getting such news—or worse, if certainly of loss be worse—that there is something illogical in the special commiseration that will be extended to Mr. Kipling from a large part of the literate world. Illogical or not, however, it is perfectly natural, for between this report and the hundreds of thousands of others like it there is the effectual difference that Mr. Kipling's grief is the grief of no stranger, but of a man whom some of us have met and all of us seem to know—a man whose qualities and abilities have been manifested to each of us as it were personally—a man to whom we are inclined for mental pleasures and satisfactions that all of us appreciate and most of us value highly and gratefully.

Himself now beyond the fighting age, Mr. Kipling, who preaches and sings a militant patriotism, has done what he could for his country and its cause by sending to the front, or more probably by allowing to go there, this one boy of his, a boy so young that in ordinary times he would still know for years only the contests of schools, the battles of the playground. It was the Imperialist's ultimate demonstration of sincerity and consistency, and Mr. Kipling must have made it with infinite precautions to avoid the publicity that eagerly awaits all his acts, for the boy's enlistment passed unnoticed and we first hear of him when he is "missing, believed dead."

If other and better reasons lacked for sorrowing over this boy's untimely end, it might be found here in the fact that by blood he was half American. The United States is not his motherland, but it is his mother's land, and the books that were written first for him—the books in which imagination, science, and history were so adroitly combined that they were still just stories, as well as "Just So Stories"—have been read by innumerable American boys who were thus in a way made his foster brothers.—New York Times

A LIFETIME OF SICKNESS

PALMERSTON, June 20th, 1914.

"Stomach Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives," your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. I said, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives." He said, "If Fruit-a-tives make you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can."

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THERE ARE NO SHIRKERS IN BONNIE SCOTLAND

Among recruiting officers in London there is a saying that if conscription were introduced into this country to-morrow it would have little effect, at any rate, north of the Tweed, because in "Caledonia, stern and wild," every fit man has joined the army.

That is, possibly a compliment to Scotland at the expense of the other parts of the country, but it is true all the same that Scotsmen have given a splendid answer to the call of country.

"Not awa' yet!" addressed to a laggard, has driven the last of the fit men out of many a Northern village, according to the testimony of a Scottish lady, who recited and spoke at a recruiting meeting in the Strand, says the Daily Chronicle.

"I know," she said, "villages in Scotland where but well-grown lads of fifteen have had to be dragged away from the recruiting officers after their elder brothers had enlisted. They were not eligible, but they overstated their age, and might have been accepted if their parents had not intervened.

"That shows the spirit of the boys, and there are thousands like them in the country districts and provincial towns from Land's End to John o' Groats, and yet we have in the streets of London many young fellows lounging about doing women's work when they ought to be in khaki."

Avoid Harsh Pills! Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

SUCCESSFUL MEMORY TREATMENT.

The late Horace Hutton used to say that having to take a little trouble would impress a fact on any one's memory so that he would never be able to forget it. In illustration he would tell his story:

"Our waitress, Maggie, could never remember to put salt on the table, and time after time Mrs. Hutton would remind her to do it. One morning it was absent, as usual, and I said, 'Maggie, where is the stepladder?'

"'It's in the pantry, sir!'

"'Please bring it in, Maggie,' I said kindly.

"Maggie brought it in with a look of wonder on her face.

"'Put it right beside the table,' I commanded, and when she had done so I added, 'Now, I want you to climb up to the top of it, look all over the table and see if there is any salt there.'

"Maggie never forgot the salt again."—Youths' Companion.

BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhoea.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, when it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestine will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

Our Serial Story Page

I'll two street cleaners spent an hour ancient hills I succumbed to an execrable impulse to take her forcibly in my arms and kiss her! I don't know why I did it or how, but that is just what happened. My shame, my horror over the transcendental folly was made almost unbearable by the way in which she took it. At first I thought she had swooned, she lay so limp and unresisting in my arms. My only excuse, whispered penitently in her ear, was that I couldn't help doing what I had done and that I deserved to be drawn and quartered for taking advantage of my superior strength and her gentle forbearance. Strange to say, she merely looked at me in a sort of dumb wonder and quietly released herself, still staring at me as if I were the most inexplicable puzzle in the world. Her cheeks, her throat, her brow grew warm and pink with a just indignation. Her lips parted, but she uttered no word. Then I followed her dejectedly, cravenly back to the roadside and executed an inward curse that would hang over my miserable head as long as it was on my shoulders.

Her vivacity was gone. She shrank down into the corner of the seat, and, with her back half turned toward me, gazed steadfastly at the panoramic valley which we were skirting. From time to time I glanced at her out of the corners of my eyes, and eventually was somewhat relieved to see that she had closed her own and was dozing. My soul was in despair. She loathed, despised me. I could not blame her. I despised myself.

And yet my heart quickened every time I allowed myself to think of the act I had committed.

The day was a glorious one and the road more than passably good. We bowled along at a steady rate of speed and sundown found us about twenty-five miles from our destination. Not caring to run the risk of a prolonged stay in the town, we drew up at a roadside inn and had our dinner in the quaint little garden, afterward proceeding leisurely by moonlight down the sloping highway.

Billy Smith met us six or eight miles out, and we stopped to parley. He examined the countess' skillfully prepared passports, pronounced them genuine and then gave us the cheerful news that "everything was lovely and the goose hung high." The train for the coast was due to leave the Staatsbahnhof at 10:05, and we had an hour to spare. He proposed that we spend it quite comfortably at the roadside while Britton went through the pretense of repairing our tires. This seemed an agreeable arrangement for every one but Britton, who looked so glum that I, glad of the excuse, offered to help him.

No sooner was I out of the car and Billy Smith in my place beside the countess than she became quite gay and vivacious once more. She laughed and chatted with him in a manner that promptly convinced me that propinquity so far as I was concerned had had a most depressing effect upon her and that she reveled in the change of companions.

I was so disturbed by the discovery that Britton had to caution me several times to handle the inner tubes less roughly or I would damage them and we might suffer a blowout after all.

Every one appeared to be gay and frivolous, even Blake, who chattered sotto voce with Britton, that excellent rascal spending most of his time leaning against the spare tires in order to catch what she was saying for his benefit. All efforts to draw me into the general conversation were unavailing. I was as morose and unresponsive as an Egyptian mummy, and for a very excellent reason, I submit. The countess deliberately refused to address a single remark to me. Indeed, when I seemed perilously near to being drawn into the conversation she relapsed into a silence that was most forbidding. My cup of misery was overflowing.

I wondered if she would feel called upon at some distant confessional to tell the fortunate Lord Amberdale that I had brutally kissed her. And Lord Amberdale would grin in his beastly supercilious English way and say, "What else could you have expected from a bally American bounder?" She would no doubt smile indulgently.

All things come to an end, however. We found ourselves at last uttering our goodbys in the railway station, surrounded by hurrying travelers and attended by eager porters.

The countess did not lift her veil. I deliberately drew her aside. My hot hand clasped hers and found it as cold as ice and trembling.

"For God's sake," I whispered hoarsely in my humbleness, "say that you forgive me!"

She did not speak for many seconds. Then her voice was very low and tremulous. I felt that her somber eyes were accusing me even as they tried to meet my own with a gentleness that was meant to be reassuring.

"Say that you forgive me."

"Of course I forgive you," she said. "You have been so good to me."

"Good!" I cried bitterly. "I've been harsh, unreasoning, supercritical from the day I met"—

"Hush!" she said, laying her free hand upon my arm. "I shall never forget all that you have done for me. I—I can say no more."

I gulped. "I pray to heaven that you may be happy, Alice—happier than any one else in the world."

She lowered her head suddenly, and I was made more miserable than before by hearing a quick, half suppressed sob. Then she withdrew her cold little hand and turned away to follow Collingraft, who had called out to her.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Count Wants the Castle.

I SAW them board the train. In my heart there was the memory of a dozen kisses I had bestowed in repentant horror upon the half asleep Rosemary, who, God bless her little soul, cried bitterly on being torn away from my embrace.

"Well," said Billy Smith, taking me by the arm a few minutes later, "let's have a bite to eat and a cold bottle before we go to bed, old chap. I hope to heaven she gets through all right. I am strong for her, aren't you?"

"I am," said I, with scarcely a quiver, coming out of a daze.

He led me off to a cafe, where he seemed to be more or less at home, and where it was bright and gay for him, but gloomier than the grave to me.

* * * * * * *

I drove the car home the next day. When he got down at the garage, Britton shivered and drew a prodigious breath. It was as if he had not breathed for hours. We had gone the distance in little more than half the time taken on the trip down.

"My word, sir," was all he said, but there was a significant tremor in his voice. It smacked of pride.

Mrs. Titus placidly inquired how we had got along and appeared quite relieved when I told her we had caught the train at K. Jasper junior revealed a genuine interest in the proceedings, but spoiled it all by saying that Alice, now prematurely safe, was most likely to keep out of the frying pan into the fire by marrying some blithering foreigner and having the whole beastly business to do over again.

"How soon do they go?" asked Peggy, adding just then afternoon, after listening to Mrs. Titus' amiable prophecies concerning Alice's future activities and getting my harassed ear in a moment of least resistance.

"I don't know," said I hopelessly, I had heard about all I could endure concerning his lordship's magnificent estates in England, and the sort of a lord he was besides. "There's nothing to do but wait, Fred."

"She is a remarkably fine woman, but"— He completed the estimate by shaking his head, trusting to my intelligence, I suppose.

We waited two days for word from the fugitives. Late in the afternoon of the second day Britton returned from town with a telegram for me. It said:

Grace safely aboard Pendennis, Captain Parker commanding. Clear at 5 today. Everything satisfactory. G. G. RAFT.

No sooner was this reassuring news received than Mrs. Titus conspicuously set about having her trunks packed. The entire household was in a stew of activity, for she had suddenly decided to catch the 6 o'clock train for Paris. I telephoned to reserve accommodation on the Orient express from Vienna and also to have it stopped at the town across the river, a concession secured at a no inconsiderable cost.

She was to travel once there as my mother.

"You will not fail to look me up when you come to New York, will you, Mr. Smart? Mr. Titus will not be happy until he has expressed to you in person his endless gratitude. You have been splendid. We shall never forget your kindness, your thoughtfulness, your—your forbearance. I—I"—

Upon my word, there were real tears in the dear lady's eyes! I forgot and forgave much in recognition of this instinct of genuine feeling on her part. It was not necessary for her to complete the sentence so humbly begun.

Their departure was made with some degree of caution, Mrs. Titus rather considerately reminding herself that my interests were at stake. I saw them aboard the train. She played her part admirably—I will say that for her. She lifted her veil so that I could bestow a farewell filial kiss upon her cheek. Jasper junior's eyes popped very wide open at this, and as he shook my hand warmly at parting he said:

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

ALLEGED SWINDLER BROUGHT FROM AKRON

BUFFALO, Oct. 13—John Sullivan, alias John E. Jones, of Cleveland, O., charged with grand larceny, was brought back from Akron, O., by Detective Sergeant Charles Zimmermann. He is wanted here in connection with the swindling of several saloonkeepers, who lost their money in an unusual fashion. Sullivan's brother, Joe, is under arrest in Cleveland, but is fighting extradition. Another man is also wanted.

According to the police one of the three men walked into the saloon early in the morning and ordered a drink and laid down a $10 bill. He left the change on the bar and stepped in a rear room. The others would then step into the bar room and tell the saloonkeeper that they had a box in a wagon for him and it was too heavy for them to carry. After the box was brought into the saloon, and the men had disappeared the saloonkeeper would discover that his cash register had been rifled.

It is alleged the trio got $1,300 in this way.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER

A Russian's Effort to Lose Himself

By EUNICE BLAKE

Peter Trolenco was a member of one of those circles that sprang up in Russia some forty years ago when nihilism was first heard of. They took their name from their underlying principle that nothing in government which existed should continue. The Latin word for "nothing" is nihil.

There was great secrecy in these circles, the members of one circle being completely ignorant of those in another. Peter understood that different circles worked in harmony through their chiefs, but beyond this he had no information whatever. And yet St. Petersburg (now Petrograd), where he lived, was full of nihilists.

Peter was young, and there was something captivating in all this mystery. But one night there came to him a terrible awakening. Lots were drawn to decide which one of the circle should assassinate the chief of police, and Peter drew the fatal paper, on which had been sketched a dagger, all the rest being blanks.

All the romance attending the secret meetings, the disguises, the many ingenious plans of the propaganda of nihilism, shriveled before this terrible deed which Peter was required to commit and from which there was no escape. He might flee to the ends of the earth, but would never know when some one, possibly his best friend, would strike him.

To add to his horror, he loved a young girl, to whom he was expecting to be married. Nina Dimitrieff was at the time preparing her trousseau. Peter feared that his misfortune, which, in any event, would break their betrothal, would kill her.

He spent a long while in making up his mind what to do and finally decided upon flight. He would leave Russia disguised and go to a land where he would be lost to the world. But what action should he take in reference to his betrothed? After weighing the matter, dreading the shock he would cause her by telling her what had happened, he decided to disappear from her as mysteriously as from others. He would confide only in his mother.

A few days after he had drawn the dagger he began a journey to the border. Disguised as a beggar, he traveled by night and begged by day in the towns through which he passed. What money he took with him, added to what he received from charity, enabled him to reach Gibon and take passage for America.

For five years the fugitive kept changing his residence, avoiding the large cities so far as possible, thinking to lose himself more effectively in the country. But whenever he came near a Russian he moved on. He dared not write to his mother for fear his letters would be intercepted, but before leaving Russia he had laid a plan for communicating with her at long intervals. Finally he received word from her that a friend of his in the circle to which he belonged had informed her, at the risk of his life, that an emissary had been sent to assassinate him.

One day Peter appeared in a small town in Missouri to receive a communication expected from his mother. What was his astonishment to see walking on the main street Nina Dimitrieff. The sight staggered him. Could it be possible that the girl he loved had been sent out to kill him? He banished the thought and ran toward her, kissing him, she gave him a meaning glance and passed on.

Peter followed her and presently saw her drop a bit of paper. Picking it up, he read, "Meet me at 11 on the bridge." The town was on the bank of a small stream spanned by a single bridge. This fixed the place. At the hour appointed he went there. Nina soon appeared, and the two were clasped in an embrace.

Then Nina told her story. After his disappearance she had wormed the secret from his mother. But it was not till Nina Trolenco told her that an emissary had been dispatched to kill him that Nina decided to join him in his exile. The immediate reason for her coming was to warn him against this person who had been described to his mother. Nina knew the man who was to avenge the circle, but he did not know her. Indeed, she had seen him in the town that day.

What was to be done? Nina declared that she would remain with her lover, protect him so far as she might be able and die with him if she could not save him. The danger was imminent. Besides, if they left the town they would be followed. They talked together a long while, discussing various plans, and finally adopted one that bid fair to accomplish the desired result.

The stream flowing beneath them was a tributary to the Missouri river. Beyond the Missouri were the plains, then uncivilized. Arranging to meet at a point in Kansas, they separated. Peter descended the stream and reached the Missouri in the morning. There he found a boat tied to the shore. In the bow he placed a paper, on which he had written that, tired of being hunted for his life, he had decided to drown himself. Then taking off his outer clothing, which he left in the boat, he plunged into the river and after a hard struggle with its swift current succeeded in reaching the opposite shore.

The emissary who searched for his victim read an account of the supposed suicide and returned to Russia. Peter and Nina had succeeded in losing themselves to the world.

Some men get angry about that 7th point. Wise men sit down quietly to think it over.

"Exercise and Rest."

What is the relation between exercise and rest? Work is that at which we must continue, whether interesting or not, whether we are tired or not. It used to be thought that the prime requisite of rest was the use of faculties other than those involved in the labor of the day. But there is such a thing as fatigue which goes deeper than daily work. We can work so hard as to become exhausted—too exhausted for any kind of work. Perhaps this is will fatigue. It is coming to be regarded as fundamentally true that rest from such fatigue demands continuity; that, for example, four periods of fifteen minutes each of rest is not the equivalent of one hour's rest; that a man who goes on a vacation and takes half an hour of his business work every day is doing the same thing as the man who had a horse with a sore back. He kept the saddle on only a few minutes each day, but the sore did not have a chance to heal. Rest periods must be sufficiently consecutive to overcome consecutive fatigue.—Luther H. Gulick in North American Review.

An Original Oath of Allegiance.

In the old days when the Spanish province of Aragon was a proud and independent monarchy the people used when choosing their king the following singular form of election:

"We, the freeborn inhabitants of the ancient kingdom of Aragon, who are equal to you, Don Philip, and something more, elect you to be our king on condition that you preserve to us our rights and privileges. If in this you should fail we own you for our king no longer."

What Might Have Been.

Rosemary—Isn't it wonderful how prolific some of the old novelists were when it is taken into consideration that they had to do all their composition with pen and ink?

"WHY WOMEN CANNOT SLEEP."

The highly organized, finely strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

The peace of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which are necessary for happy womanhood, are only possible when the sensitive organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restores womanly health as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription" invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce.

Chatham, Ont.—"A few years ago I suffered a general break-down and got very weak and thin. I was in an awful state. I was very much discouraged and at times thought I would lose my mind. I knew of Dr. Pierce's medicines so I got his 'Favorite Prescription.' It gave me immediate relief, and completely cured me in a very short time. My sister used it with good results also. She was in a very delicate condition. I got her to take it and two bottles cured her completely.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's medicines; they are all that is recommended of them."—Mrs. Margaret Bryant, 87 Park Ave., Chatham, Ont.

Luxemburgers Chafe Under German Rule And Look To Allies To Deliver Them

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Describing Teutonic methods in occupied territory, life in Luxemburg under the Kaiser and how the Germans are disliked there, a Berne correspondent writes that while all may be familiar with the narratives of the methods with which Germany rules the occupied parts of Belgium, very little has been heard about her treatment of Luxemburg, with the violation of whose neutrality she opened the present campaign. This neutrality was solemnly guaranteed by Germany in 1867. The 260,000 inhabitants of the Grand Duchy are virtually prisoners of war, having been entirely cut off from communication with the outside world since the beginning of August, 1914, and were it not for the good offices of the Swiss government, which sends them regular consignments of flour, they would be actually short of food.

The Luxemburg bakers are supposed never to sell to German soldiers any bread made with Swiss flour and intended for the use of the civilian population of Luxemburg. Nevertheless the German soldiers, of whom there are 16,000, mostly men of the last line, in the Grand Duchy, guarding bridges and railways, 6,000 being in the capital alone, not unnaturally, greatly prefer the good Luxemburg bread to their own bad bread, and are ready to pay as much as 25 cents a pound for the privilege of eating some of it, and consequently contrive to procure at any rate a certain quantity.

The circulation of gold has absolutely ceased, the Germans having commandeered all that there was in the Grand Duchy, and sent it to the Reichsbank, in Berlin. The money in use is chiefly paper, of course always German. The population has perforce been obliged to earn money by making ammunition for Germany, no other means of livelihood being accessible to them.

Grand Duchess Ignores Kaiser.

As far as possible the young Grand Duchess of Luxemburg refuses to have anything to do with Germans. When the German Emperor was in Luxemburg she ignored his presence, remaining in the palace, access to which is forbidden to any German in uniform. The Luxemburg guards, 600 in number, have contrived to repel, by pointing their bayonets, any attempt made by a German soldier or officer to enter the palace precincts. Even at the frontier there are still Luxemburg gendarmes watching everywhere that nothing the export of which is forbidden is sent out of the country, and thus it is that Luxemburg has succeeded in keeping her fine horses, although Germany has endeavoured more than once to commandeer them.

The pathetic protest made by the Grand Duchess at the beginning of the war, when she blocked the passage of German troops on the bridge by stopping her automobile, as well as her consistent attitude since the war began, have made a deep impression on the Luxemburg people. Any attempt to remove her by force would certainly mean a rising of the population, which the Germans would have to quell by brute force.

A Luxemburg gentleman who managed to escape to Switzerland, and whose standing is such as to place his testimony beyond suspicion, says that all the German Emperor's efforts to ingratiate himself with the Grand Duchess have been fruitless, and all the attempts made to induce her to marry a Bavarian or other German Prince have likewise failed signally. Some German newspapers even went the length of announcing her approaching marriage with a Bavarian Prince, but as a matter of fact the Grand Duchess will have nothing to say to any German suitor whomsoever.

It frequently happens that the Luxemburg people take the law into their own hands, especially if one of themselves has been in any way insulted or annoyed by a German soldier, who is certain one day or another to receive most chastisement for his misbehaviour. If the German authorities institute an inquiry nothing is ever ascertained, for no Luxemburg subject will give evidence against another. They even venture to wear French, English or Belgian colours, but never don German colours, and they persistently sing "The Marseillaise" and other well known French patriotic songs, the only course open to the Germans in occupation being apparently not to pretend to hear.

In the shop windows portraits and postcards of General Joffre, President Poincare, King Albert, King George and Lord Kitchener are everywhere displayed, but those of the Kaiser are conspicuous by their absence, and, needless to say, no portraits of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, General von Mackensen or the Crown Prince find a purchaser.

The Luxemburg gentleman who furnishes these details relates that one day when the Kaiser was passing through Luxemburg and going about the capital incognito, accompanied by two officers in mufti, he stopped to look at the shop windows, and was, of course, struck by the absence of any portrait or postcard of himself. Entering a shop he asked the attendant for a postcard of the German Emperor, but was told, "We haven't any. No one would buy them." Whereupon he walked out of the shop, looking the reverse of pleased.

Another day he was visiting a hospital in Luxemburg, where French and German wounded were being nursed. He carried a bunch of white roses and gave each soldier one. As soon as the imperial back was turned, however, the French wounded called to one of the nurses to take the flowers away at once, whereupon she replied: "Just wait a minute, I'll fetch a dustpan and broom and clear them away."

German military bands which occasionally give open air concerts, have no Luxemburgers in their audiences, every one considering it a patriotic duty not to go and listen to them — every one, that is, except a few old dames who have a certain sneaking regard for Germany and a grudge against France because she separated Church and State and consequently deprived the clergy of their stipends, which in Luxemburg still amounts to from $300 to $1,200 a year, which the clergy have no wish to lose.

The newspapers in Luxemburg are strictly controlled by Germans, and the newspapers allowed to come in from neutral countries are only such as are strongly under German influence. One journal, however, which is allowed to circulate freely is the bi-weekly "Gazette des Ardennes," published by the Germans ostensibly for the delectation of the inhabitants of French speaking countries in their occupation.

The Luxemburg people are suffering silently, but none the less really. Ninety-five per cent of them would rather perish than continue to live under the yoke of Germany, and they look to France and Britain to save them from such a fate.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Cabinet Has Delayed Action

Despite the fact that the Ontario Cabinet went at the question of the early closing of hotels with hammer and tongs at Friday's session of the Council, Premier Hearst stated after the meeting that no decision had been reached. The Premier repeated his assertion that final consideration had not been given the problem. Mr. Hearst remarked that "all the guessing was wide of the mark," evidently seeking to give the impression that the generally-accepted belief that the Cabinet had a 7 o'clock closing recommendation before it was erroneous, and that the report that the Ministers would in the end support the 7 o'clock regulation was also wrong.

There has been a good deal of somersaulting, and 'tis said that the liquor interests have caused the performance. The attitude of certain of the Ministers is one of keen resentment that the seven o'clock closing recommendation should have got abroad before the Government had a chance to deal with it. The Government has only had ten days in which to consider the recommendation.

The License Board is not saying much, but again 'tis said that three of its members have none too complimentary opinions of the action of the Government. J. B. Lucas, Attorney-General, is credited with being the man who, in Council, has insisted that the recommendations of the License Board be carried out, and that political considerations be discarded. Rumour says the Premier also felt similarly, but did not like to jam the thing through in the face of opposition from other Ministers.

One story says that the proposal made to the Government by the board on Friday was not satisfactory, and that the board may be asked to reconsider the recommendation.

PROTECTING THE EAR FROM GUNFIRE SHOCK

Many Made Incurably Deaf in Modern War—Great Difficulties in Finding Preventative

A subject of timely interest and importance, and one that is closely allied in the subject of the industrial diseases in general is that of the injuries to the ear resulting from loud concussions. What may be regarded as one of the minor accidents of war is nevertheless, because of the large number of individuals concerned at the present time, one that cannot be ignored, and here the Medical Record indicates to us how men in time of peace may suffer the same injuries as prevalent in this thunderous war; for the aural injuries to which the soldier is exposed are no different from those of the boilermaker, of the structural ironworker, or the sportsman, and of those who are exposed to the shriek of the railway whistle when a train is passing through a tunnel or covered station.

Jobson Horne pointed out in The London Lancet that the report of a piece of artillery, the concussion of an explosion, or the firing of a cannon close to the ear may exert its injurious effects upon the nerve terminals of the ear, may cause rupture of the drum membrane, and may even result in irremediable deafness. During the Russo-Japanese war, among the 1,721 men who were wounded in the naval engagements there were 116 cases of concussion of the labyrinth and rupture and congestion of the tympanic membrane, which cases represented 7 per cent. of the wounded who survived. The injuries to the drum and to the nerve endings are due to the sudden condensation or rarefaction of the air in the external auditory meatus. As a rule one ear is more affected than the other.

Naval Guns Are Worst

Politzer states that with the improvements in modern artillery ruptures of the drum membrane are now scarcely ever met with. This is attributed to the introduction of breech-loaders, and also to the fact that the serving party withdraws to a distance of about 18 paces, with the exception of only one man who attends to the firing, but who also stands at a considerable distance. In naval warfare, however, the gunners cannot be protected in this manner. Experience has taught the gunner that by keeping his mouth open so as to equalize the air pressure on each side of the drum membrane the unpleasant consequences of concussion may be diminished.

The toothpick that is chewed by nearly all officers while serving guns partly fulfills this requirement, although a piece of rubber rolled between the teeth would be still better as a means of keeping the mouth partly open. The Japanese naval surgeons distributed pledgets of absorbent cotton to the entire crew with the instruction that the ears be plugged up during the firing of the guns. In individual cases, many instances of deafness resulted.

Many Devices Tried, But—

In 1911 the British Admiralty advised the use of an aural plug consisting of a mixture of plasticine and cotton wool. Jobson Horne believes that an efficient aural plug should be close fitting and impervious, and while reducing the intensity of sound should not prevent hearing; it should be easy to insert and easy to remove intact; it should be non-irritating; it should be inexpensive, so that the same plug may not be used repeatedly; and, above all, it must be as nearly antiseptic as possible. Cotton wool when inserted sufficiently tightly is not easily removed intact, and does not long remain sterile when handled by men engaged in gun firing.

The ear plugs made of vulcanite rubber or celluloid cannot be supplied to fit exactly the channel of the ear. They must be made of a substance that retains its shape without hardening or softening, and remains ever plastic. A substance having the consistency of jeweller's wax may yet be produced, and may be made to fulfill all the requirements of effectively plugging the ears and at the same time of preventing infection.

Canada's Best Recruiter

Color-Sergt. Charles W. McGee of the 60th Rifles, Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, holds the Canadian record for recruiting. Too old for overseas service himself, he, as a recruiting officer personally obtained between 600 and 700 recruits from the Moose Jaw district during the first year of the war and is still bringing them in. He wears the service medals of the Zulu War (1879) Egyptian War (1882), the Veteran's Medal and the Khedive's Star (1882).

Armored trains were thought of as long ago as 1846.

The Atholl Highlanders, a force of men drawn from the Atholl country, and commanded by the Duke himself, is the only private regiment which still exists in Great Britain.

GRUESOME STORY OF ARMENIAN MASSACRE

Authentic Report of Committee of Prominent Americans---Women and Girls Are Brutally Murdered or Sold Into Slavery---Unspeakable Outrages Condoned by Germans.

"Many persons who had goods which they could have sold if they had been allowed to do so were obliged to start out on foot without funds and with what they could gather up from their homes and carry on their backs. Such persons naturally soon became weak; they fell behind and were bayoneted and thrown into the river and their bodies floated down past—to the sea or lodged in the shallow river on rocks, where they remained for ten or twelve days. I have talked with eye witnesses who state there were many naked bodies to be seen on snags in the river fifteen days after the affair occurred and that the stench was terrible."

Drowned in Boatloads.

Another means of disposing of the Armenian population is reviewed in the report thus:—

"Finally it was decided that the old men and women and the Catholics must go, and they were sent along toward the last. A number of lighters have been loaded with people at different times and sent off toward—. It is generally believed that such persons were drowned. During early days a large caique, or lighter, was loaded with men supposed to be members of the Armenian committee and sent off toward—. Two days later a certain Russian subject and one of those who left in the boat returned overland to—badly wounded about the head and so crazy he could not make himself understood.

"All he could say was 'Boom! Boom!' He was arrested by the authorities and taken to the Municipal Hospital, where he died the following day. A Turk said this boat was met not far from—by another boat containing gendarmes, who proceeded to kill all the men and throw them overboard. They thought they had killed them all, but the Russian, who was big and powerful, was only wounded and swam ashore unnoticed. A number of such caiques have left—loaded with men and usually they return empty after a few hours."

Numerous instances are contained in the reports of all the property of wealthy Armenians being confiscated apparently for no reason whatsoever other than the fact that no restraint is placed on the Turkish soldiers, who steal everything of value after the able bodied men of the Armenian population have been driven off and killed. Then the women are ravished by the guards supplied to protect them, and, more dead than alive, after many days' march, they are left isolated in the desert to make their way to safety if they can, provided neither with money, food nor means of transportation other than their own fast ebbing strength.

"Daily the police are searching the houses of Armenians for arms," the report continues, "and not finding any they are taking the best and most honorable men and imprisoning them; some of them they are exiling and others they are torturing with red hot irons to make them reveal the supposedly concealed weapons. I have heard before of refinements of deviltry, but I have seen instances this year that have burned into my soul. The manifest purpose to destroy these people by starvation cannot be denied. Every day 2,000 inhabitants from—are transferred to—under severe guard, and after a short halt at night are deported toward unknown destinations. The hotels and the two Armenian schools are full of these deported families. The Turks are in a perfect delirium.

"It is impossible to describe the horrors suffered by the deported Armenians. Violation, conversion of women and girls are ordinary and every day facts, as well as worse outrages. The Armenian population of—has been annihilated, one or two villages excepted."

One of the most striking accounts of the atrocities is the testimony of a widow, whose family once was wealthy, but who now has been reduced to worse than penury. Her name has been carefully concealed by the committee, to which her narrative was told. As reported by the committee this woman states in her testimony:—

"A week before anything was done to—, the villages all around had been emptied and their inhabitants had become victims of the gendarmes and marauding bands. Three days before the starting of the Armenians from—, after a week's imprisonment, Bishop—had been hanged, with seven or eight other notables. After these hangings, seven or eight other notables were killed in their own houses for refusing to go out of the city. Seventy or eighty other Armenians, after being beaten in prison, were taken to the woods and killed. The Armenian population of—was sent off in batches; I was among the third batch. My husband died eight years ago, leaving me and my eight-year-old daughter and my mother extensive possessions, so that we were living in comfort. Since mobilization began, the—Commandment has been living in my house free of rent. He told me not to go, but I felt I must share the fate of my people. I took three horses with me, loaded with provisions. My daughter had some five lira pieces around her neck, and I carried some twenty liras and four diamond rings on my person. All else we had was left behind.

"Our party left June 1 (old style) fifteen gendarmes going with us. The party numbered four or five hundred persons. We had got only two hours away from home when bands of villagers and brigands in large numbers, with rifles, guns, axes, etc., surrounded us on the road and robbed us of all we had. The gendarmes took my three horses and sold them to Turkish muhadjirs, pocketing the money. They took my money and that from my daughter's neck, also all our food. After this they separated the men, one by one, and shot them all within six or seven days—every male above fifteen years of age. By my side were killed two priests, one of them over ninety years of age. These bandsmen took all the good looking women and carried them off on their horses.

Girls Carried Off.

Very many women and girls were thus carried off to the mountains, among them my sister, whose one-year-old baby they threw away. A Turk picked it up and carried it off, I know not where. My mother walked till she was no further and dropped by the roadside on a mountain top. We found on the road many of those who had been in the previous sections carried from—; some women were among the killed, with their husbands and sons. We also came across some old people and little infants still alive, but in a pitiful condition, having shouted their voices away. We were not allowed to sleep at night in the villages, but lay down outside. Under cover of night indescribable deeds were committed by the gendarmes, bandsmen and villagers. Many of us died from hunger and strokes of apoplexy. Others were left by the roadside, too feeble to go on.

"One morning we saw fifty to sixty wagons with out thirty Turkish widows, whose husbands had been killed in the war, and these were going to Constantinople. One of these women made a sign to one of the gendarmes to kill a certain Armenian whom she pointed out. The gendarmes asked her if she did not wish to kill him herself, at which she said 'Why not?' and, drawing a revolver from her pocket, shot and killed him. Each one of these Turkish hanums had five or six Armenian girls of ten or under with her. Boys the Turks never wished to take; they killed all, of whatsoever age. These women wanted to take my daughter, too, but she would not be separated from me. Finally we were both taken into their wagons on our promising to become Moslems. As soon as we entered the arabia, they began to teach us how to be Moslems, and changed our names, calling me—, and her—.

"The worst and most unimaginable horrors were reserved for us at the banks of the Euphrates and in the Erzingian plain. The mutilated bodies of women, girls and little children made everybody shudder. The bandsmen were doing all sorts of awful deeds to the women and girls that were with us, whose cries went up to heaven. At the Euphrates the bandsmen and gendarmes threw into the river all the remaining children under fifteen years old. Those that could swim were shot down as they struggled in the water.

"After seven days we reached—. Not an Armenian was left alive there. The Turkish women took my daughter and me to the bath and there showed us many other women and girls that had accepted Islam. Between there and—the fields and hillsides were dotted with swollen and blackened corpses that filled the air with their stench. On this road we met six women wearing the feradje and with children in their arms. But when the gendarmes lifted their veils they found that they were men in disguise, so they shot them. After thirty-two days journey we reached—."

Under the caption the "Horrors of—" the report describes the depopulation of a large city on June 1. The third section of the exiled caravan was composed of between 4,000 and 5,000 persons.

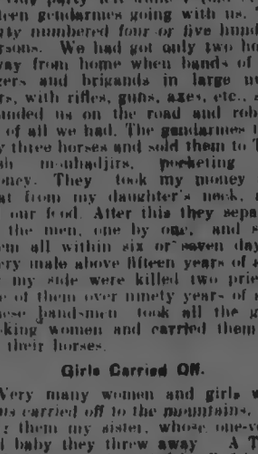
EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.



Very little people have never looked better than in the simple styles which some of us call Greenaway and others by some different name. In any case, we all mean the little frocks which hang from the shoulders in soft folds to the hem, disguising the shortness of the little legs and the undue length of the little body.

In the frock herewith shown we have one of the prettiest of simple frocks. It has the full fronts gathered or smocked in front of the shoulders and also in the centre of the back. The closing of the dress is placed at the side of the front near the edge of the dress. There is a round collar at the neck. The sleeves are long and end in a band cuff. Of course they may be shortened to mere puffs if desired.

Nainsook materials as batiste and organdie are much liked for these dresses and also for French gingham. They may also be made of wash silk and of crepe for evening and party wear.

The dress pattern, No. 7343, is cut in sizes 1, 3 and 5 years. Medium size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Canadian Wheat Is Shut Off From Those Who Want It Most

OTTAWA, October 13—There are a hundred million bushels of wheat for export in the Canadian Northwest, which according to the law and restrictions of this fair Canada of ours, may be sold to anyone but the people who are most willing to buy it.

When Premier Borden came back from England a month ago he announced that ships would be provided to transport this great crops across the ocean and get Liverpool prices, or something just as good. He also announced that the Canadian farmer was at liberty to dispose of his wheat to any neutral country he could lay hands on or words to that effect.

Both these announcements turned out to be hollow blessings, because ships to carry the crop across the ocean were not available, having been chartered or expropriated most of them, by the allies for other purposes; and also because no neutral country wanted to buy Canadian wheat except the country nearest us, namely the United States, with which it is the policy of the Conservative Government to have neither truck nor trade on a mutual preferential basis.

Other proposals looking to the purchase of the crop en bloc by the British Government likewise fell through, chiefly because neither the grain growers nor the British Government could see any considerable advantage in such a transaction.

Meanwhile the opening of the Dardanelles draws everyday nearer, which means the release of a great flood of Russian wheat and the glutting of the European and British markets against the Canadian product. Naturally Europe buys the Russian wheat because it is nearer and cheaper. In fact, so far as Europe is concerned, if Canadian wheat doesn't get the market first; it doesn't get the market at all, because the European demand for the fine flour into which Canadian wheat is manufactured is not insistent. They have their poorer classes over there and the poorer classes have to put up with poorer bread. They are not educated, as they are on this continent, to a high average of taste.

This point of quality is what makes Canadian wheat salable in the United States, which is a wheat-producing, wheat-exporting country itself and in no danger of starvation if the Canadian crop is cut off. The only reason why United States millers buy our wheat is because it is a harder, better wheat and makes up into superior grades of flour, which can be mixed with the inferior flours from the softer American wheats to bring them up to standard. In short, the United States buys that hundred million bushels, if it does buy it, simply because the best is none too good for a nation that has developed a palate. That the United States is keen on our best grades of northern wheat is proved by the fact that in spite of freight tolls and custom duties a lot of it keeps dribbling over the line all the time.

Without going into an elaborate argument about the price of wheat in Winnipeg as compared with the price of wheat in Chicago or Minneapolis, it is safe to say that if the United States duty were removed the Canadian farmer would get ten cents a bushel more for his wheat than he does now—that is to say he would get the duty. There is no reason why the United States won't take that duty off except that Canada won't take hers off too. It is understood that the light still holds out to burn at Washington, and that in spite of the repulse to reciprocity in 1911, the United States continues to welcome mutual concessions which will make food cheaper.

Canada could remove her tariff on American wheat with perfect impunity because Canada is not a wheat-importing country. The only thing that prevents is cracker-barrel politics. Canadian wheat must be denied its nearest and dearest market because the interests, and consequently the Government elected by the interests, say so. It is being recalled in the present juncture, that it was the wheat crowd, and the meat crowd that defeated reciprocity—not the men who produce the wheat and the meat, but the men who roll it and grind it and cure it and smoke it and freeze it and squeeze it, for monopolizer's profits.

The war seems not to have altered the Borden Government's intention of making a few millers and packers rich at the expense of the masses. The farmers of the northwest were deliberately encouraged to increase their wheat acreage this year, the prospect being held out of war prices for a bumper crop. Briefly speaking, that was the "patriotism and production policy," launched by the Borden Government. The farmers were told that Russia was all tied up at the Dardanelles and now was their chance to cash in. And the farmers, though not lacking experience of these fair promises before, took them at their word. Water-sodden year though it was, they produced several million bushels more wheat than they did in 1914.

Much good it does them! The European market goes glimmering. Even if it didn't go glimmering the ships Sir Robert promised had faded away—so what was the use? The farmers are told to hang on—not to flood the market with a great deluge of wheat—to dole it out and keep prices steady. Good advice, perhaps, if the Northwest farmers had barns to store wheat in, but not so good when it leaves them at the tender mercy of the railways and elevator companies.

Besides, the winter price threatens to be weak, and no man wants to hold on for a loss. A Government commission has shown that on an average it costs the Northwest farmer sixty-four cents to produce a bushel of wheat. Some years it costs seventy cents a bushel. Suppose Winnipeg buys at ninety cents a bushel—today's quotations for No. 1 hard, and all wheat, mind you, isn't No. 1 Hard—what's there in it for the farmer after freight rates and elevator charges are taken out. A small margin which tends constantly to disappear. And if the wheat grower holds on, as he is advised to do, the risk increases not only through deterioration in the commodity he has to sell, but through the manipulations of the markets.

It has been figured out that, after all expenses are paid, a Northwest farmer tilling a section of land, twenty bushels of wheat to the acre, realizes nett perhaps $15.00—that is to say two dollars on an acre, small enough return considering his toil and hardship and the high cost of living for himself and his family. If the tariff barrier between him and the United States were taken down he would realize on that same crop over $25.00, which would, I fancy, make the Northwest winter about twice as tolerable as it is now.

With no ships to sail the seas, and no place to move the crops to, except the same old spot favored by the interests, the Northwest farmer practically has that hundred million bushels for export on his hands. If he sells it in Canada he isn't going to make much out of it, and when he doesn't sell it in the United States—which he is not allowed to do—he loses about ten million dollars. He not only loses ten million dollars on the hundred million bushels for export, but perhaps another five million dollars on the remaining hundred million bushels for home use, considering the fact that if the tariff barriers were knocked down the international price would tend to even up on a higher line.

From which it follows that the Northwest farmer is being done out of fifteen million dollars by a government which is too scared of its friends to give him a square deal. The only argument which stands between the farmer and the fifteen million is a sentimental one—if Canadian wheat went to the United States without let or hinderance it would get in the habit of going there and would presently "lose its identity." One might suggest here another sentimental argument—that when it loses its identity, blending its proud No. 1 Hardness with softer, baser, elements, it does it with a noble end in view, to uplift and glorify the mass with which it mingles. One argument is about as silly as the other. Canadian wheat can afford a good price per bushel. Canadian fish frequently swim over the boundary line and lose their identity as Canadian fish, but no complaint is made. It is much the same with Canadian wheat—identity, or not, it will slip across.

ONE MAN'S GOOD AIM SAVES WHOLE TROOP

A remarkable feat of marksmanship is reported from the southwestern Austrian front where many of the famous Tyrolese riflemen are fighting against the Italians. A troop of the so-called Kaiser Light Infantry, which was fighting on the Doberdo plateau, got into a most precarious position in advance of the Austrian lines. They could not retreat as the ground over which they would have to run was fully covered by the Italian guns. They held their ground for several days, while suffering greatly for lack of food and water.

The Italian artillery was playing upon them with accuracy, being directed by means of a post of observers on higher ground than that held by the Tyrolese. It was regarded as necessary to get rid of that post, which consisted of eight Alpini, and a soldier who had made a reputation for himself in the Ortzthal as a highly expert poacher volunteered to undertake the difficult task. Climbing stealthily by night, as if hunting chamois, he reached a hiding place in easy shot of the post, and when the eight Italians began to stir the next morning he quickly picked them off, one after the other.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity, therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, should try a meal of any food or foods in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has direct action on the stomach but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. Do not dose an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs, but get rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia, as stated above and note remarkable results.

HOW YOU CAN REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT AS I REDUCED MINE

By Kate Thomas

A year ago my weight was 176 lbs., my complexion was dull, dark and yellowish. My circulation was bad and I felt tired and sleepy most of the time. My liver was inactive, my stomach flatulent, my heart seemed weak and I was unable to stand the slightest exertion. At times I had rheumatism and I made up my mind that if I could reduce my weight I would feel better, so I tried every so-called fat reducer that I could hear of, and after I had finished with them I weighed more than before. Finally a friend told me of oil of orlene capsules, which I knew had reduced her weight many pounds. I tried them, and in a short time I had reduced my weight 34 lbs., and my complexion is fresh and bright. The colour has left my nose and has gone to my cheeks, which are as rosy again as in my youth. The condition of my stomach is excellent, my liver is no longer inactive, my heart is strong, rheumatism gone, my figure willowy.

I studied the action of oil of orlene capsules and found that they not only reduce excessive fat to stay reduced, but are wonderful to build up the general health. If you need them, or any of your friends need them, they are not expensive.

Any druggist can supply you or a large box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1259, Montreal, Can.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind, could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy without my glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

Allies Have Captured More Territory on Western Front

Germans Made a Determined Infantry Attack on the French Line North-east of Souchez But Were Repulsed--Intense Artillery Actions Rage All Along the Line--Ill Health Given as Reason for Retirement of French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

FORMAL DECLARATION OF WAR

PARIS, Oct. 13. (French Official).—Following a heavy bombardment throughout the day the Germans made a determined infantry attack on the French line north-east of Souchez on Tuesday evening. To-day's official statement announced that it was repulsed. Intense artillery actions raged all night between the Somme and the Oise in the Andechy region at Moronvillers, east of Aheims, about Tahure and east of Mesnil Hill. Despite heavy cannonade of the German artillery fire on the advancing French forces, the Allies were able to take more ground in the neighbourhood of La Trapeze, near Tahure.

BOMBARDED STATIONS.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—It was announced this afternoon that French aeroplanes have once more bombarded Boseacourt and Warmerulle Railway Stations in the Suippe Valley. These are on the railway which has been the objective of recent French fighting in the Champagne district, and air raids interrupting its operations do much to hamper the supplies of the Crown Prince's forces in that region.

DECLARATION OF WAR.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Bulgaria formally declared war on Serbia yesterday. Hostilities have been in progress for two days.

BRITAIN'S ANSWER.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Answering an argument of Germany's Foreign Minister, Von Jagow, to the effect that Britain showed "cant and swindle" in going to war on behalf of Belgium, yet allowing her troops to be landed in Greece, a semi-official statement from the British Government was given out to-day as follows: "It is impossible at the present moment to publish confidential communications that have passed with Greece, but it may be taken as certain that at no time have the Allies taken action in Greek territory that would be unwelcome to Greece."

RESIGNATION ANNOUNCED.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Foreign Minister Delcasse's resignation was announced officially to the Ministers' Council by Premier Viviani to-day. Delcasse has been ill and Viviani has been acting for him for several days.

BULGARIANS REPULSED.

ATHENS, Oct. 13.—The Serbians to-day repulsed the Bulgarian attempt to take their positions south of Zaitchar, on the railway between Nish and Prochova.

GERMAN STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—After giving the crew time to get off, a British submarine dynamited the German steamship Walter Leonard, in the Baltic on Tuesday, according to a Copenhagen despatch to-day. Other German craft destroyed by British under seaboats in the same waters in the past few days were the steamships Nicomedia, Gutrune, Germania and the Linea and an unknown steam vessel. It was believed that the crews were all saved.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Although ill health is given as the official reason for the retirement of Foreign Minister Delcasse of France, press despatches from London and Paris to day intimate that it was likely he was practically forced out because of dissatisfaction with diplomatic results in the Balkans.

Work of The Children's Aid Society

Five reasons why you should:

1. Because the sorrows of a little child must touch your heart.
2. Because you would not allow a child of your own to be ill-treated.
3. Because the Society is a legally constituted organization for the protection of children.
4. Because thousands of children have been benefitted in the past—and a still greater preventive work is possible.
5. Because the Society's aim is to educate parents to love and appreciate their children: to find homes for the homeless, and to befriend and uplift young people who have fallen into evil ways.

Are not these good reasons?

What Has Been Accomplished in Ontario.

The Children's Protection Act was passed in 1893. 60 Children's Aid Societies have been organized. Over 6,000 children have been made wards of these different societies.

Many of these are now grown men and women living respectable lives.

HOW TO TENDER FOR SUPPLIES

To the Editor of The Examiner

Sir,—It may be of interest to many of your readers to know that Major Hamilton, Director of Supplies, 3rd Division, Kingston, is the proper official to communicate with in case correspondents wish to obtain information regarding tenders for the supply of bread, meat, butter, vegetables, hay, oats, etc. for the troops and their horses this winter at the Armouries. About 600 men will be quartered here that being the capacity of the buildings.

Yours, etc.,
J. H. Burnham.

Board of Health's Reassuring Report On the South Central

At a meeting of the Board of Health, held yesterday afternoon, Dr C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, reported that he had in company with Mr. G. H. Duncan, chairman of the Board, and Sanitary Inspector Spence, inspected the South Central school and found everything in a satisfactory condition. The inspection revealed nothing that would justify the publicity respecting the alleged insanitary condition of the building. Dr. Amys said he had called up all the doctors in the city with a view of locating the source of information concerning the symptoms that characterized the condition of children who are said to be effected and had only found one who knew anything about the conditions referred to in the Examiner on Saturday last.

Dr Amys said that an improvement might be made in connection with the ventilation with the object of eliminating the odour that was manifest when the inspection was made. Speaking of the health of the town, Dr. Amys said there was only six communicable diseases in the city.

Cold weather is just around the corner. Be sure and arrange with Rogers, MacPherson & Co. to put your stoves and furnaces in order.

THE RECRUITS COMING IN

Although the Effects of Last Night's Meeting Have Not Yet Been Felt —Five Accepted Yesterday

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Five recruits passed the doctor at the armouries yesterday. Of the squad three were born in Canada, one next door in Newfoundland, and the fifth in England. The list is as follows:

Arthur Thomas, 477 Bolivar street, born in England, two years in the King's Shropshire Light Infantry.

Carl Noftall, 186 Dalhousie street, born in Newfoundland.

Asa Downer, Douro, born in Canada.

Philip Simons, Tweed, born in Canada.

No. 2 platoon of the Peterborough battalion were on duty at the armouries last night acting as ushers for the mass meeting.

There was a big fatigue job for the local soldiers this morning in clearing the armouries after last night's meeting. Nos. 1 and 3 platoons did the work.

Corp. Coleman is in charge of the guard at the Armouries to-day.

The Peterborough battalion had [illegible] men on the roll this morning. Forty men have passed the medical examination in the last nine recruiting days.

Fires Destroy The Pavement

Several complaints have been heard of late regarding the frequency of bonfires throughout the city. A number of cases are known where citizens have raked the leaves off their lawns on to the asphalt pavement, and there burned them, to the detriment of the pavement. The heat destroys the oil in the pavement and hastens depreciation. Several cases of this kind have been authorities are Hunter Street and the authorities are contemplating some form of action that will prevent a repetition of what constitutes a breach of the by-law.

Havelock Case Was Dismissed

Magistrate Langley Found No Evidence of Criminal Intent

County Police Magistrate Langley was in Havelock yesterday, where he disposed of a case in which E. C. Pace of Cordova was charged with the theft of a gramaphone. F. Primrose of Havelock was the complainant. His Worship dismissed the case upon the grounds that there was criminal intent.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defendant and Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution.

Magistrate Is Very Much Alive

Report of His Death Was Very Much Exaggerated—To-day's Police Court

Like Mark Twain, the report of Police Magistrate Dumble's death was very much exaggerated. Somebody tried to kill him yesterday with a rumour but was unsuccessful. This morning, Magistrate Dumble was very much alive, as Harold Gagnon will testify. The latter was fined two dollars for being disorderly in a public place. He pleaded guilty and when asked if he could pay his fine, produced a roll that a dog wouldn't jump over. He had over one hundred dollars in his possession. Chief Thompson advised Gagnon to open a bank account.

PROBABILITIES.

Moderate to fresh southeast and south winds, some showers to-night Thursday—Southwest to west winds; mostly fair and warm.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham and Capt. Dick Ponton of the 2nd Battalion Wound Hide Audiences in High Pitch of Enthusiasm—Thrilling Story of the Canadians' Work at the Front.

THE PATH OF DUTY PLAIN

No one could have left last night's big recruiting rally in the Armouries without a quickened sense of duty and responsibility. A glowing vivid address by Capt. Ponton of the 2nd Battalion, telling of the glorious conduct of the Canadians at the battle front, followed by a forcible logical speech by Hon. Geo. P. Graham, M.P., put the issue squarely before everyone in the audience. The need of men, the desirability of every young man of physical fitness and military age joining the colours, the duty of those who have to stay at home in doing their part in the great conflict were driven home in a manner that must have carried conviction to every hearer.

The meeting which was under the auspices of the Peterborough Branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League, was a magnificent success and practical results are bound to follow. In Capt Ponton and Hon. Geo. P. Graham the League had made a most fortunate selection of speakers. Capt. Ponton, of Belleville, who is invalided home from the front, and who served through Ypres, Festubert and Givenchy with the Peterborough boys in the 2nd Battalion, held the big audience spell-bound with his description of the work of the Canadians in those memorable engagements. It was a thrilling tale that he told, a story that stirred his hearers as few audiences in Peterborough have been stirred, and his narrative threw fresh light on the glorious incidents in which the Canadians won everlasting fame.

Hon Geo. P. Graham followed him with an address that put the question squarely before every member of the audience. The ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, always a facile orator has been heard here on several occasions, but never to better advantage than last evening. In a speech of less than an hour's duration he hammered in argument after argument, and fact after fact.

The attendance was very large, several thousand people gathering at the Armouries, all the seats being occupied, while a number stood at the rear of the hall. On the platform in addition to the two principal speakers were, among others, Mr. Dan O'Connell, the chairman, Lt-Col Johnston and Capt R P Watt, of the Peterborough Battalion, J H Burnham, M P; G A Gillespie, M P P; Mayor Buller, R R Hall, A E Coulthard, president of the Speakers' Patriotic League; J A Aylmer, vice-president of the League; B E Ackerman, Rev Canon Davidson, Rev R G Peever, Rev R Pogue, and others.

The band of the Peterborough Battalion, stationed in the west gallery, played a number of enjoyable selections while the audience was gathering and also at intervals in the programme. During the evening Miss Dorothy Allan sang "Your King and Country Need You," and Mr Ed Hanrahan "The Veteran's Song." Both soloists were in excellent voice, and their numbers were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

Mr. O'Connell in his opening address, expressed his thanks on behalf of the Speakers' Patriotic League to the audience on the great interest they had shown in the work of the League. A little over two months ago the campaign had been inaugurated at the magnificent meeting addressed by Hon Geo. E. Foster. Since that time the Patriotic League had had the sympathy and assistance of the citizens of Peterborough and this co-operation had been in a large measure responsible for the great success already accomplished. They were proud to be able to present to the speakers of the evening such a magnificent audience which gave some evidence of the spirit with which the people of Peterborough were animated. It showed that the citizens of Peterborough realized the gravity of the situation and realized that in the present momentous struggle the life of the Empire was at stake. It was a struggle of life and death, and he was sure that the Canadian people were determined to see the great conflict through to the end. Canadians recognized the fact that they were fighting for their existence, for freedom, for individual liberty, for the laws, rights and privileges their forefathers had handed down to them as a sacred heritage to hand on to their posterity, and they were determined to hand it down untarnished and without a stain. There was a duty for everyone, Mr. O'Connell pointed out. Those who stayed at home must make sacrifices, this year and next year, and until the war was over.

More Men.

"If we are to be successful in this war we must have more men," said Mr F R Hall. The conflict that is being waged is unparalelled in the history of the world. Only when we stop to consider the huge battle-

UNSEASONABLE BLACKBERRIES

The wonders of this extraordinary season's extraordinary growth do not cease. Yesterday it was ripe strawberries as big as a door knob. To-day it is Lawton blackberries, fully ripe, and luscious looking in their black beauty as jade beads. Mr. Harry Zealand, 300 Maitland Avenue, left with the Examiner a small box of these berries, ripened in his garden, and plucked on October 12th, with others coming on. Next in order are pineapples or second-crop oranges.

Are Sending Out Supplies

KINGSTON, Oct. 13.—A letter received from Canadian nurse engaged with the Canadian military hospitals at Lemnos Island, near the Dardanelles, states that the patients, nurses and staff are suffering through lack of proper nourishment. It has been found a difficult task getting food over to the island. Friends here are sending out supplies as speedily as possible.

Has Five Nephews Now Bearing Arms

Ernest Cook, nephew of Mr. Chas. Noyes, the veteran G T R employee at Charlotte street, is the last of five sons to enlist. His home is in Hampshire, Eng., but he has been working with a Cavan farmer named Crowe. The rest of the family resides in England. Mrs. Cook is the youngest sister of Mr. Noyes. Her boys have answered the call one after another. The fourth enlisted in one of the English regiments a month ago, and Ernest has joined the new Peterborough Battalion. Mrs. Cook has only one daughter who is an invalid. One of her sons has been twice injured, a bullet passing through his head and another striking his ankle. He has recovered and returned to the front.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 13, 1915

HAIL TO THE CHIEF!

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's hosts of friends will be pleased to learn that he is, after nearly five weeks' confinement in hospital and home, once more in harness, occupying today his office at the Parliament Buildings; again in harness and again ready for the active duties of leadership and patriotic service to Canada he has so long rendered. However, the Liberal leader will be invalided south for necessary rest and preparation for the strenuous duties of the coming session of Parliament. It is a little remarkable that at the age of three score and fourteen, after forty-one years of strenuous and fruitful public life, Sir Wilfrid shows still the same patriotic interest in Canada, the same active zeal for its interests as a man half his age. Now that he has passed a serious illness and is again in fighting armour, thousands will congratulate Canada upon the possession of a grand old man like Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

LIGHT AND DARKNESS.

We introduced Hon. Geo. Graham to the city last evening with the possibilities of a blaze of electric light effulgence on George street, but when we steered him into Murray street at the Y.M.C.A. buildings we plunged him into, after nightfall, a zone of comparative darkness. Especially in contrast with George street "white way," the tunnel of darkness from the light zone to the Armouries presents a violent contrast as the public found out last night. It is a good deal like the witty Hibernian's description of the architectural style of his new residence — "Queen Anne in front and Mary Anne in the rear"; a good deal like the fair front some of us make to our lives, while the less obtrusive aspects are dark and gloomy. Murray street from George street west is not at all well lighted and that, taken in conjunction with the contrast between fair pavement and street mud gives a rather undesirable Rembrandtesque effect. This stretch of street is an important one. It gives access to, and fronts two of the finest buildings in the city in their respective architectural characters, both models for their purposes. There should be a greater fitness of things, both in the matter of street conditions underfoot and lighting conditions overhead. We can "get after" the Board of Works in respect of the street surface, but who is responsible for the lack of light? Is it the City Council or the Utilities Commission? One would think the matter should be attended to promptly. From henceforth the Armouries will be a great centre. We are to have five or six hundred troops quartered there this winter. Their presence will not only be a public attraction, but we should do our best to lighten the way and incidentally lighten the load of the soldiers who are fighting for us. If we should realize the reasonable ambition of making Peterborough a permanent military centre of a new district, we must meet the authorities at least half way, and make the approaches and surroundings of the Armouries, in the way of lighting and otherwise, as good as possible. By so doing we shall strengthen our claim upon the military authorities and show an interest that will to its extent justify consideration of our ambition to become a military centre.

GOVERNMENT ACTION DEMANDED.

The Globe calls attention to an important national duty in these words:

Military affairs are under the control of the Dominion Government, and when anything unusual, like the caring for returned soldiers, develops it should not be necessary for voluntary and irresponsible workers to take the Government's work out of its hands.

This brings into focus a matter upon which there is too much discursive thinking, and not enough concentrated action. Our government is apparently doing its best to promote our share in the war. It is specially equipped with the power, and weighted with the responsibility of leading in action. It can do, and does do, many things by virtue of its organization and equipment, that the people at large, no matter how willing, cannot do. It represents in military, as in other, matters the people of Canada. It assumes certain responsibilities which upon, so to speak, natural to it, and it ignores or evades other responsibilities, coming as naturally within its province. It equips and sends to the front men to do the fighting(and its responsibility should not end when the soldier bravely doing his duty has spent his vital forces and returns invalided and in need of care. This is not a matter for voluntary and necessarily unorganized effort. Caring for returned soldiers is as much a duty of the government as enlisting, equipping and sending doldiers to the battle line. In the supremely important matter of the work done now by the Red Cross the government does not do what it should do. Why should voluntary and irresponsible—except to their own conscience—workers be called upon to do in the way of providing funds what the government should do? By leaving the care of returned soldiers, and the provision of hospital dressings, etc., to voluntary workers, the government throws the burden upon a comparatively few. Whereas, if the government as it logically should do, assumed full responsibility in both cases and provided the necessary funds, the burden would be spread over the whole people, and the whole people would be practically bearing a burden that is now thrown upon a few. It may be urged that such a course would involve a great strain upon the national finances. The people contribute the national finances in one way or another; and they would be in a better position to make such contribution, if their means were not lessened by the voluntary contributions, which in turn lessen the pecuniary capacity of the people to meet other obligations, which must be met, war or no war. A few people should not be called upon to bear a burden that should be generally distributed, as it would be by the government assuming responsibilities which it now relegates to voluntary effort or voluntary generosity.

THE END COMING.

In a serious article on civilization in the Kolnische Zeitung, a leading paper in Cologne, there appears the following German definition of kultur:

> It is the perfecting of human existence, both in the man himself and in his externals. Kultur works both in the soul and in the body. Its aim is to elevate the spirit and make more beautiful the human body. The more Kultur a people possess, the purer are its feelings, the more humane its disposition, the more chaste all its expression of life. Kultur does not seek the formation of an elite, rather the drawing together of the entire nation for the prosecution of better objects and conditions of life. In all its work Kultur sets an ideal before itself, and in the case of Germany, especially, this ideal is one of goodness and supreme virtue.
> "Kultur is as a refreshing, purifying, invigorating breeze over a miasma-laden atmosphere. It clears away the vapors engendered in the swamps of so-called civilization. The Kultur of Germany is calculated to refresh, purify and invigorate the world."

If one had any doubt of the diabolically demoralizing effect of militarism, it is furnished by the above rhodamontade. A naturally good, kind, and generous people corrupted to the point of accepting such a venomous cult as that set forth in the above offensively absurd paragraph is something to make the angels weep. We have an example, in devastated, disolated Belgium, of how "the kultur of Germany has refreshed, purified and invigorated," that corner of the world. Germany or German kultur, has provided the means of strengthening the application of the same spirit of "kultur" to the Armenians in Turkey. Not content with the Belgian crime, it comes to the help of Turkey to give another horror of the same kind in Armenia. But the day of disillusion is coming to the German people, and the day of delusion is coming to an end. The general trend of all the news from all the battle fronts shows that Germany and the hellish cause she stands for are losing ground. The struggle of right over wrong has been hard, and there will still be hard work, but the gains of the Allies, though slow, are steady and irresistible, all tending towards the breaking point of German resistance, and the end of the greatest national curse in the way of tyranny and oppression, in the way of drugging national conscience, in the way of relentless cruelty, the world has ever known.

Our aim is to give you results. No matter what kind of a want ad you put in our paper we will give you results.

What The Allied Champions of Humanity Are Fighting For

Lloyd George now enjoys the confidence of many who reviled him before the war. But mingled with this new admiration there is a suggestion that the powerful Minister is on the penitent bench, striving to undo the evil that he did in promoting radical legislation. That is an absurd view. Lloyd George has not repented, nor has he ceased to be a Radical. He has simply risen to the occasion, and shown that he can meet the foreign enemy as courageously as he met domestic foes. He fights for justice in the international field as he fought for justice in the British Islands. He always fights for the human race.

Of course, he knows, as every sensible man knows, that public business cannot be conducted during war as it is conducted in peace. When a man's house is on fire, he is not expected to act as he does when he is building a house. When there is a dangerous illness in his family he is not expected to act as he does when everybody is well, and the chief object is to keep everybody well, with plenty of fresh air and good food. But the fact that a man is ready to act quickly, and take extraordinary measures to put on a fire does not mean that he has lost his faith in building. The fact that a doctor is ready to administer powerful drugs or perform drastic operations at a critical time does not mean that he has lost faith in hygiene and preventive medicine.

To-day we are dealing with a danger akin to a plague or a fire. We have got to stop the plague or put out the fire. There is not much use in talking. But when it is done, humanity has still to go on building, planting, constructing, developing the human body and the human soul. And while our attention is necessarily diverted at present from the slow processes of growth to war against terrible destructive agencies, that does not mean that constructive civilisation is to be thrown into the rubbish heap. It only means that we must attend to-day to the immediate pressing business of the day.

We must fight. But what are we fighting for? We are fighting for the principles that Lloyd George stands for, and for the temple of civilisation and freedom that he was building up before the war. We are fighting because we believe that our ideas of civilisation are better than the German ideas. But that is not enough. We must not only say that our ideas are better, but we must go on making them better. If we do not do that, we may find ourselves some day fighting on the wrong side. To-day we can say with Sir Galahad, "My strength is as the strength of ten, because my heart is pure." But that saying will become mere hypocrisy unless we keep on working and fighting for the welfare of the human race, and for social justice. For these things Lloyd George is fighting. He fought for them before the war. He fights for them during the war. We shall be much disappointed if he does not fight for them after the war.—Toronto Star.

THE "NAVAL ISSUE."

The shells from His Majesty's Australian cruiser Sydney which sank the German Emden also exploded a lot of old political ammunition which our Conservative friends had in stock for campaign use in connection with the "naval issue" in this country. The Sydney is a ship of the improved Bristol class, such as the Laurier Government proposed to build, and for which they had called for tenders before they were defeated four years ago last month.—St John's N.B.) Telegraph.

BLOODSHED AND POPPIES

There is a brisk discussion in France between the scientific people and the sentimental, tradition-loving peasants. It has been noticed that all the battlefield of northern France where blood was shed last year are awave with red popples, which grow everywhere and border all the roads. The peasants see in it the aftermath of the blood shed in the fights of last autumn. Scientific men point out that it is merely the result of the fields being thrown out of cultivation. But, at least, the peasants have tradition on their side.—Manchester Guardian.

HER FRIENDSHIP WORSE THAN ENMITY.

Germany's enmity is bad, but Germany's friendship is a far more deadly possession. France began a nobler national life after Sedan. Austria has been a slave since Sadowa. It was Bismarck's policy, when Austria was defeated in 1866, to make peace on such light terms that the vanquished would be bound to the victor by gratitude and friendship. The enemy became the "ally," forced, however, to recognize her inferior position. There has never been any pretence about Germany's attitude. She has always been ready to throw Austria over if it suited her purpose. Bismarck, indeed, once [illegible] distinctly anti-Austrian [illegible] Russia. The cynical [illegible] and Austria at the proper moment to further Teutonic ambitions, and that is exactly what has occurred.—London Daily Express.

THE FAR-FLUNG BATTLE LINE

The character of the offensive which Great Britain and her allies are disclosing against Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey is slowly becoming a character to almost stagger the imagination. This all-devouring, all-encompassing war surpassed anything ever known, while the battle line on the western front was five hundred miles long and that on the eastern front a thousand, but it now appears operations are in progress on a far larger scale. Thus in Mesopotamia, it is understood, a very considerable British expedition has defeated the Turks and is rapidly marching through Asia Minor on Bagdad, the purpose being to sweep northwestward toward Constantinople. Another movement attacking Constantinople, in addition to that in progress in the Gallipoli Peninsula, is also reported to be under way. There is also confirmation of the forwarding of considerable reinforcements from France to Serbia, landing near Saloniki, which will enable it to see speedy service, if the reported purpose of Bulgaria to attack Serbia within fifteen days is carried out. Thus it will be seen that the Allies are more and more taking the offensive and that a ring of armies is gradually in process of formation around the entire territory of the Teutonic allies.—New York Herald.

BRICKLEY JOINS HARVARD COACHES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 13.— A sensation was created among the Harvard freshmen when Charley Brickley the crimson's great drop kicked, walked through Harvard square and down to the varsity field. Last year's captain was the centre of all eyes and he was mighty glad when he was able to find seclusion behind the secret practice fence.

Brickley came here from Baltimore to coach the drop kickers for a few days. Percy Haughton gave him a squad of eight men and he worked with his pupils this afternoon, making special progress with Whitney and Robinson. The latter missed three field goals against Colby, but appears to have the makings of a good man.

Mahan, King, Watson, Cowan and Bigelow did not take part in the scrimmage. All or none may be in to-day's game, according to Donovan, the trainer. Hartke was at one end most of the afternoon and is making such progress that Gilman almost any time may be returned to tackle.

The regulars scored frequently yesterday. One of the touchdowns was made by Soucy on a 40-yard run following a forward pass from Boles. Another was scored by Lyman after recovering a scrub fumble on the 15-yard line. Harris, who was tried at centre for a time last year, was in again this afternoon. His passing, however, was bad, and one poor pass for a kick resulted in the second team forcing the varsity to make a safety.

CLOSE TO $150,000 FOR THE PLAYERS

BOSTON, Oct. 12.— To-day's game was the last in which the players share the receipts. A total of $144,-890.50 awaits division among the members of the two teams. This is the share the receipts. A total of $144,-Commission rules by which the players participate in the profits for four games only.

The winning team will receive $86,-190.70, or 60 per cent. of the total. As 25 players of each team are eligible contestants in the series, the individual share will amount to $3,770.68 each, if the division is equal. The players themselves are the authorities in deciding how the money shall be disposed of and may reduce the allowance to utility men who have figured little in the activities of the league season or of the series.

To the losers will go $57,960.80, or 23 shares of $2,519.12 each if the division is equal.

The players' profits this year are not equal to those of 1911 and 1912, the record crowds at the two games played on the Braves Field failing to offset the restricted attendance at the Philadelphia park.

During these first four games 123,-040 persons have watched the play of the teams. They have paid $266,339.50 for their places. Of this sum the National Commission will receive $91,-823.25. Each club treasury gains $48,-239.25 from these games and will be further enriched as will the Commission's strong box by the receipts at subsequent contests in which the players have no financial interest.

Tragedy Follows A Quarrel

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 13—Angered because she refused him money, Chas. Hanson, 49 years old, a sailor, killed his wife, a servant girl, and himself, early this morning.

When the police arrived the servant Teresa Sins, was alive, though fatally wounded, and she was rushed to a hospital, but died in the patrol waggon. The Hansons apparently had been killed instantly.

The weapon was a cheap make of a revolver of the 38 calibre kind. The bullet which killed the wife, entered the brain, and the one that killed the hired girl entered over the right eye.

According to neighbours, Hanson has had trouble with his wife frequently. Her father, the late Andrew Ziegler, who died a year ago in Cleveland, left $93,000 to be divided between her and a brother, Earl, who lives in Buffalo, N.Y. Since then, it was said, Mrs. Hanson had had difficulties with her husband.

Hanson did not harm his own child Charles Edward, 2 years old, a cripple, and Lenora Fisher, the 9-year-old daughter of Mrs. Hanson, by a former husband. Both children witnessed the tragedy.

A heavy wooden club, loaded at one end with lead, was used by Hanson in the struggle that evidently preceded the shooting.

According to the story told by Lenora Hanson, the 17-year-old servant attempted to help Mrs. Hanson when her husband attacked her.

CHICAGO RELISHES FIRST DRY SUNDAY

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Chicago was dry Sunday for the first time in forty years, and apparently relished the innovation.

Police reports made in periods throughout the day and evening showed that the 7,000 bar rooms obeyed literally the order of Mayor Thompson clamping on the Sabbath observance lid.

Violations reported by policemen travelling beats and their commanding officers numbered a score and with two exceptions none of these, Superintendent of Police Healey said last night, were of sufficient importance to justify revocation of license.

The suggestion that the early closing and the Sunday dryness would be followed by an unprecedented number of arrests for drunkenness did not prove to be true. Fewer than a dozen arrests were made.

The observance of the state law, for many years a dead letter, was reflected for good in a marked decrease in crime and accidents. Of homicides and suicides none were reported to the police. The day was also made memorable by a lack of street brawls.

Sunday in Chicago, for years has been punctuated by many impromptu fisticuffs, stabbing and shooting affrays, following disputes superinduced by liquor clouded brains. The usual Sunday toll of deaths and injuries in automobile accidents are also missing.

LOSE LEGS AND CUTS HIS THROAT.

OIL CITY, Oct. 13—Despondent because his legs had been amputated after being injured in a railroad accident, and he was about to be removed to the County Home, Andrew Volsch, aged 65, slashed his throat with a razor at the City Hospital, here. His condition is serious.

Rousing Addresses Delivered, etc.

fronts can we form some conception of the enormity of the conflict. Had it not been for the masterly retreat that was conducted by General French at the outset of the war, the Germans might now be engaged in the final process of enveloping Russia and subjugating France. Though we may congratulate ourselves upon the great sacrifices that we are making we are not sacrificing one-third as much as Great Britain. If we were, Canada would have enlisted five hundred thousand men instead of one hundred and fifty thousand.

In conclusion Mr. Hall enjoined those who were forced by circumstances to remain at home, to see that the dependents of those who were at the front, were taken care of.

Capt. Dick Ponton.

Capt. Dick Ponton, of Belleville, who fought with the Second Battalion until he was incapacitated, received a rousing reception when he arose to speak. Cheer after cheer rent the air as he limped up to the platform. His speech was one of the best that has been heard in Peterborough from one who has been at the front, both in point of delivery, which was both forceful and lucid, and for the amount of information which it contained concerning the Second Battalion of which the Peterborough detachment formed a part. Capt. Ponton thanked the gathering for the hearty reception that was accorded him. He said he felt at home in Peterborough because he had experienced the honour of fighting with some of the most gallant men Canada could produce. Men such as Major Bennett, who would not return, but whose name would go down as one of the martyrs in British history. It is over one year since that great armada sailed across the seas carrying the largest army that had ever crossed the ocean. The men were taken to Salisbury. "You know what we experienced there," said the speaker. For my part I would sooner go through the battle of Festubert and Givenchy than Salisbury, he added. Three days after we landed in France, he continued, we were put in the first line trenches one hundred and fifty yards from the German trenches. Next to us was two of the British line regiments. We were nervous. Let me see the man who is not nervous when he first goes to the front. We were nervous but not afraid.

Battle of Neuve Chappelle.

"For some weeks we were stationed in the vicinity of Neuve Chappelle. The trenches were wet and dirty, but there were no complaints. We took part with the famous Imperial regiments in the battle of Neuve Chappelle and suffered a number of casualties. In twenty-four hours we used more ammunition than was used in the South African war in two years. That is what war is under present conditions. Later we were sent over to Belgium. We were glad because it was Belgium we went to fight for. On the twenty-second of April that we were all ready, and at two o'clock in the afternoon I was in conversation with Major Bennett. He seemed very cheerful. Later in the afternoon we were surprised to see large bodies of Algerian troops rushing past our position. They had been gassed and were falling back in confusion. Our battalion fell in at once and we started forward to fill the gap in the canal. We lost a few men but finally got across the canal and connected with the 16th Canadian Scottish. Then we waited for the order to charge. Although we only waited for three-quarters of an hour it seemed like a day. We were anxious for an opportunity to avenge the latest German atrocity. Shortly after midnight we got the order to charge. They stood up to us for about four minutes, although they outnumbered us by about forty to one. When daylight came not one of our men was above ground. Those of the battalions that were left had entrenched themselves.

Canadians Never Budged.

Officers and men of the Second Battalion had paid the supreme sacrifice. They were subjected to an enfilading fire which swept them on all sides, and though the Germans made several counter-attacks, the Canadians never budged. They had fulfilled the expectations of General Alderson, who in an address to the Canadians upon their arrival in France said: "Lads, may it be said of you that Canadians never budge." Continuing Capt. Ponton said on the following Saturday the Germans counter-attacked. Our both wings were exposed and we were getting the enemy's artillery fire in our backs and on all sides. The only complaint I heard was when we were ordered to fall back. An order from General Alderson did not suffice, it had to be an order from General French. When the roll was called two hundred and ten men answered out of a total of twelve hundred and eighty, which comprised our battalion. Had we failed to hold the line ninety-five thousand British troops would have been cut off by the enemy. We were then moved down to Festubert where we made a charge and captured four lines of German trenches. Then we were moved on to Givenchy, where for four days we threw hand grenades at each other. At Givenchy the Germans used shells that threw off a noxious gas, and I got more than was good for me. Capt. Ackerman was wounded a few hours before me. No one knew how bad he was hurt. I am glad you have him back with you, said the speaker.

Message of Gratitude.

"Canada," continued Capt. Ponton, "is like the top storey of a departmental store with England as the base. When she telephones up to say that the bottom is on fire we must rush to her aid. To the women I would extend a word of thanks for what they have done for the boys at the front. I bring a message of gratitude direct from the boys on the firing line. Keep up the good work. Keep on with your socks. They are needed. Christmas is coming, and I would like to see every man at the front with a plum pudding. I have told you of some of the dreary things of this war, yet there are many bright spots to the situation. Oftentimes when we would be enjoying a game of ball back of the lines, and the big shells were dropping nearby, one of the boys would jocularly remark—"I believe there is a war on." I want you all to realize there is a war on. There are many of you who cannot go, but there is not one of you who should not possess a certificate to this effect. There are many who are physically fit, but have yet failed to offer their services. Many are carried away with that quotation—"Business as usual," when there cannot be business as usual. I bring a sterling message from the boys at the front, and that is come. The conditions under which you fight to-day are different from those under which the immortal first division fought. It's good fighting to-day, declared the speaker.

Shared Their Rations.

Capt. Ponton corroborated the report made by the Bryce Commission, which touched only lightly upon the actual atrocities that were committed by the Germans. He had seen numbers of children with their hands cut off. One thing that had touched him was the sight of British "Tommies" sharing their rations with the starving Belgian children who crawled out from under haystacks as the troops were marching to and from the trenches. The speaker had nothing but praise for both the French and Belgian troops. Capt. Ponton paid a glowing tribute to the work of British scientists who had created a means of offsetting the effects of the noxious gasses used by the enemy. This was accomplished within three weeks after the gas was first used by the Germans. In conclusion the speaker said he honed to have the opportunity of taking a message back to the boys on the firing line to the effect that Peterborough had raised a whole battalion.

Hon. George P. Graham.

"Say, young men, you who haven't a khaki suit on, how much would you give to be in Capt. Ponton's place to-night?"

In the direct ness of this opening question, the Hon. George P. Graham indicated the method of his overwhelming appeal for assistance and even sacrifice in the prosecution of the struggle in which the Empire is now engaged. He threshed about no rhetorical bushes, but kept driving persistently and pointedly at the plain and, in some cases, painful facts. There was nothing pessimistic in his review of the situation and its requirements, but he made it plain that victory cannot be cheaply purchased and that no one should attempt to evade the price.

We are now confronted, he said, with a very strong combination of circumstances and events. "Bulgaria has taken, although I cannot recollect that she has yet done any fighting, an attitude which we hoped she would not take. If she has thrown in her lot against the Allies, it will be a sorry day for Bulgaria. It will mean her utter extinction as a power of any consequence, and that's what ought to happen to her."

He reviewed briefly the unanimous response from all the Dominions of the Empire at the first sign that Britain was in danger. The minor differences from which the Kaiser had been led to expect assistance in his design vanished immediately in New Zealand and Australia, in Canada and India, and in South Africa. Gen. Botha, Mr. Graham declared, stood out as one of the grandest figures in the war. His name would go down into history with those of the greatest men in the British Empire.

"It was a great surprise to the Kaiser," Hon. Mr. Graham remarked succinctly, "but he has greater surprises coming to him yet."

The Position of Canada.

"There is a school of thought that takes the ground and argues it more or less vehemently that it is not the duty of young Canadians to fight anywhere but on Canadian territory and in defence of Canada." This was the speaker's premises and he immediately set forth its illogical foundations. First of all he declared that he had no sympathy at all with that idea. In a few words he told how and why Britain was involved. Great Britain allowed herself to be backed across the platform of diplomacy with her back against the wall before she declared war. She tried to arrange a conference with the nations, but when Germany showed herself bent on war, and violated the treaty to Belgium, Britain would have been less than a nation worthy of the name had she held aloof. And every man in the Dominion of Canada says Great Britain did right. She has stood for the principle that the word of a nation must be held sacred, and when she put her name on the treaty to guarantee the neutrality of Belgium she knew what she was doing and was prepared to fight to carry it out.

To Avoid Conscription.

Passing to personal aspects of conditions arising out of the war, Hon. Mr. Graham referred to conscription, which he said he was personally opposed to, as it was similarly opposed to British ideals. But the surest way to prevent this method of obtaining enlistment was to thresh the man who was trying to drive the country toward conscription, the German Kaiser. 'Get into the khaki as soon as you can and help lick the Kaiser."

Another reason that made the premises he outlined impossible was that Canada has taken a more important place in the Empire than she formerly held. She has sprung from a piece of property in the Empire, a place for the investment of money, to being part proprietor of the Empire, and a considerable part at that. Canada has become a sharer in her glory, her traditions, her institutions, her flag. What else could we do but fight for the British Empire.

Had Canada's shores been attacked we would have all rushed to the defence of our homes. If this war was taking place fifty miles from here, our homes endangered, and our wives and sisters, would you be here? You would all be out trying to keep them there, holding the enemy at these fifty miles. Hon. Mr. Graham plainly pointed out that the defence of Canada is taking place not on nor within her borders, but in Flanders, in France and in the Dardanelles.

Canada Worth Fighting For.

Following up his lucid and easily discerned reasoning in support of the idea that Canadians should participate in the European conflict, Hon. Mr. Graham pointed out why Canada was worth fighting for. In 1763 we passed from a French to a British possession. In 1776 an effort was made to lure us from our British allegiance.

"Far better had we gone with the States of the Union then, than with Germany now."

There was a little trouble in 1812 when we fought to maintain our place under the British flag. Our great grandfathers believed that the British form of government was the best system ever devised by man.

"Young men of what did avail them, if you let go that hold to go under a form of despotism little short of bondage? A thousand times better had we been defeated in 1812 than lose in 1915."

Our Canadian forbears refused to join the United States, whose government was a democracy and very similar to ours. Of what good were the sacrifices of the United Empire Loyalists if we are going into a condition infinitely worse than what they refused in 1812. But we'll never submit. The Allies must be victorious.

Canadians Enlisting.

It had been said that after all it was the British born who were gathering to the colours. True it was that the great majority of the 1st contingent were British born, and all honour. They were brought up in a European atmosphere. They knew what war was and military service. Canadian boys were brought up in a world of peace; at least there was no conflict in their lifetime. To the possibility of war they had given no thought. It was now agreed that so soon as young Canadians began to realize their responsibilities they marched to the colours; they have enlisted and are enlisting; and they are glad and ready to do their full duty.

Individual Duties.

Hon. Mr. Graham left no room for evasion as he indicated the duties every loyal Canadian should make. The basis for comparison must be with the act of the man who by his enlisting offers his very life for the Empire. Those who can't go are in duty bound to do more—Give! Go down into the same place and give some more. If you were told to take your choice of going to the trenches, or of putting up a 'hundred' in two weeks, you would find the hundred. Give until you are brought to a realization of your full duty.

The Duties of Others.

The duties of the Church, of the State, of Finance, of employers, and of employees, were referred to by the speaker who said that all must do their part. Commerce plays its part, and upon the result of the war largely depends. To the women, Mr. Graham paid a glowing tribute. Their's has been the greatest sacrifice in this crisis. When the history of the struggle is written, one of the brightest pages will be devoted to the sterling assistance from the women.

And, lastly, he spoke to the man who ought to go—the man physically fit within the prescribed age limits.

"I have no right to come here and tell a young man he ought to go. I do not know his affairs or his condition. But I do know that Kitchener says we need men, and more men. Realizing that Kitchener wants you, that the Empire needs you, that the freedom of the world depends on you, I leave it to you if you have a sufficient reason to counterbalance all these."

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Hon. Mr. Graham and Capt. Ponton, on motion of Mayor Butler, seconded by Rev. Canon Davidson.

When Rev. Canon Davidson began his remarks in seconding the motion, he urged that no one leave the hall until the last chords of the National Anthem had been sung. With the utterance of the words National Anthem the band evidently taking it as a signal began "God Save The King," which was played to the end. Rev. Canon Davidson realised his full duties and refused to be thus unintentionally interrupted. "Having honoured the King," he said, "let us now do our duty to the speakers, by giving them three hearty cheers."

It thus formed a very happy conclusion and all arose for the repitition of the National Anthem

Annual Meeting of Peterboro' Protestant Home Yesterday

Reports Received Tell of Eighteenth Year Just Closed—Review of What Was Done—Financial Statement.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Home was held yesterday afternoon with a good attendance of directors and others interested in its welfare. Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Charlotte street Methodist church, conducted the devotional exercises.

The days slip so quietly by, so unmercifully for the staff here, that it is hard to realise that October, and the annual meeting are here once more. Since this time last year, three deaths have taken place in the home and two inmates have died in the hospital. The most recent of these deaths, that of Elizabeth Dixon, on the 7th inst., was an occurrence that left a deep impression on all that had witnessed her unfailing courage under great and enduring pain, her unfaltering submission to the will of God and her constant and pathetic gratitude for the little that could be done for her. Such experiences are educative, and should, and I am sure will, have a lasting and helpful effect on all concerned. With one or two exceptions, cases of individuals, who, being pugnacious by nature, find their chief joy in rebellion against constitutional authority, the atmosphere of the Home has been peaceful and harmonious. A very potent means to this end has been the succession of Sunday services, at 9.45 a.m., conducted by the various clergymen of the city. Their kindness in this particular has been deeply appreciated, and their words listened to with the closest attention. To these I wish to tender my personal thanks, as also to the members of the Board, to whose advice, counsel and encouragement I owe so much, and whose kindness to me personally I can never forget. That I appreciate these things, I hope to show in greater and better service in the year to come.

S. G. Robinson, Treasurer.

This report was adopted on the motion of Miss Robinson and Mr. H. F. Mason.

Secretary's Report.

The year 1914-15 has been a quiet and successful one for the Home. There have been more inmates than in former years, the total number being 39, with a total number of days 10,939. At present there are 21 men and 17 women, making 38 remaining in the Home. Two were discharged for various reasons, and there were seven deaths.

Owing to Miss Lancaster's untiring efforts everything runs smoothly. She showed her true worth during the trying time of sickness and death among the old people last winter, both she and her staff labouring overtime, which was much appreciated by the Board.

Twenty-five meetings of the Board have been held, a special one in June to receive the gift of $1,887.50, made by the executors of the Lavich Estate. The Board and some friends supplemented the amount to enable them to buy a block of town debentures.

The interest of the Sunday morning services has been kept up, and the thanks of the directors are extended to all the clergymen of the city, who have conducted them. Also to Dr. F. L. Robinson for furnishing the conveyances for the clergy.

In October, 1914, a jam and linen shower was held, which was most generous. The usual Christmas entertainment was provided, Mr. Feever conducting the religious exercises. Mr. John Allen, Miss Dorothy Allan, and some other members of St. Paul's choir contributed the music which was apparently much enjoyed. Mr. Allan making a very happy Santa Claus.

Early in the year the Board was sorry to lose, through ill-health, our very efficient janitor and gardener, Mr Downing, who passed away in April. Mr. John Bradley, his successor, has joined the 39th Battalion, and we have to find another capable man to care for the old men and the beautiful garden, which will be more beautiful than ever owing to the kind thoughtfulness of the late Mr. Cooney, who gave us many shrubs, peonies, rose bushes, etc.

Mr. Williamson, of Knox church, looked after the winter's entertainment for the old people.

Many rooms in the house were kalsomined and paint has been procured to repaint the building. With other repairs and small improvements the building has been kept up.

We cannot close our year's report without expressing the deep gratitude we feel toward all those who have so materially helped us. The Misses Nichols for staying the month of June, to enable Miss Lancaster to get a much needed rest, the doctors of the city who have given their services so freely, the gentlemen who have acted as auditors, the Press of the city, who have always been so courteous, and all the interested friends, all of which is respectfully submitted.

Flora H. Davidson, Secretary.

The adoption of the report was seconded by J. A. Aylmer.

Board of Management.

Mrs D. Walker, Mrs. Hazlett, Mrs. R Neill and Miss H. Dennistoun, retiring members of the Board of Management, were re-elected. Mrs. Robt. Hall was chosen to succeed Miss Dennistoun on the Board.

Rev. Mr. White of St. Luke's church pronounced the benediction.

Address at To-night's Poultry Meeting

The regular meeting of the Poultry Association will be held to-night in the Labour Hall. Mr. A. Everson will give a paper. There will also be a competition of Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes. A large attendance is requested.

Just to remind you that the tinsmithing department of Messrs. F. R. J. MacPherson & Co. can put your heating system into good running order for the winter. Book your order now.

Has Resumed Her Duties

Miss Bertha Mowry Returns to Her Duties at the Queen Mary Hospital

The Board of Health is in receipt of a communication from Miss Bertha Mowry stating that she has resumed her position as matron of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital following the completion of a course of training which she underwent preparatory to going overseas in the capacity of nursing sister. Mrs. Hattie Reid who had assumed Miss Mowry's duties at the hospital has resumed her old position which she will retain until such time as Miss Mowry leaves for overseas service.

The Board was surprised to learn that Miss Mowry had returned to her position at the hospital, believing that her departure for Quebec was preliminary to leaving for the front, whereas it involved a course of training.

COUNCIL MEETING TO-MORROW NIGHT

Citizens Are Invited to Attend—Will Consider Appeal Made on Behalf of Red Cross Society

His Worship Mayor Fuller is thoroughly impressed with the object of the appeal that had been sent broadcast by Lord Lansdowne on behalf of the British Red Cross Society and the French Order of St. John. A Council meeting will be held to-morrow evening in the Council chamber, when further steps will be taken in connection with the matter. Arrangements will be formulated for the street and other collections to be made on Thursday, October 21st when it is hoped that a substantial amount will be raised for the work. The public is invited to attend.

Improvements on Lafayette Avenue

Recent Have Been Connected with the Sewage—Owners Will Be Notified of Needed Alterations

Two accounts were presented for the chairman's signature at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health that was held yesterday afternoon.

A communication concerning an account for work done on the property said to be owned by Mr. G. H. Howson, was shelved until next year. It is the intention of the Board to have the amount added on to the taxes, but as the collectors roll is in for this year, this will not be possible this year. The account is disputed.

Lafayette Avenue.

Sanitary Inspector Spence made a verbal report concerning sanitary conditions on Lafayette Avenue. He said that all the houses on the street had been connected with the sewer, with one exception. He outlined certain alterations that would have to be made before some of the work would pass the inspection of the Board. The alterations concern a lack of ventilation which is contrary to the public health act. The work accomplished by R. C. Braund was considered satisfactory.

The Inspector was instructed to take such action as might be necessary to effect the desired improvements.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Stephen Johnstone, painter and decorator, 191 College street, will be answered —in rotation— questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of enterprise and enforced and supposed economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, paperhanging, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Enquirer, City:—Will you, through your column, tell me if colours can be blended with kalsomine as well as paint? Also what colours would be suitable for double parlours? Thanking you in advance.

Ans.:—Kalsomine can be blended by the same process as paint, viz., by working from the darker to the lighter tints, always bearing in mind that kalsomine dries fast, so to make perfect work always keep the edges wet. Lay on a yard or so, blend it up and repeat. Of course if were, say an oval in the centre of a ceiling or a large wall, blending from the base to cornice, greater care would have to be exercised and had better be placed in the hands of a competent artisan. Not knowing conditions I cannot say what colours would be suitable for double parlours.

Dubious, Smith T'p.:—Will you kindly give me a suggestion for a dining room in the way of papering. It is a very large room, about 14 feet by 13 feet and about 10 feet high. It has only one window, has double doors and two single doors, but is very dark, as it is shaded by the brick wall of the next house. Als ohow many rolls the next house. Also how many rolls and walls? If you have any other suggestion besides papering to make, I would consider it a great favour.

Ans.:—As your dining room is very dark and has no direct light, but rather a reflected light of either a red or yellow hue, I would suggest first of all that you get light. And yellow is the most sunshiny colour there is. Now do not misunderstand me when I say yellow. Some of the most beautiful hues and tints can be made with the yellows and for richness have few rivals. Moreover, the reflected cast from your brick wall will not materially affect the scheme. So a white or very light cream ceiling, a yellow satin finish wall, and with a limecrust stain of deeper tone, you will have a rich, light as possible, dining room. Let your wood work be finely dark, strange as this may seem you will find it will add to intensify the bright effect. It will take 7 rolls of ceiling, 14 rolls of wall. I would not use a border, and hang only the brightest and liveliest of pictures and few of them. Your dining room can be decorated entirely in distemper and if done well by competent workmen, I believe far exceeds wall paper, which at best is more or less artificial, whereas decoration done by hand has distinction and is more sanitary.

Down South, Peterborough:—I have a small golden oak table and I would like to have it stained mahogany. Could I stain right over the oak, or by what process would it have to go through to get the desired result?

Ans.:—You do not state whether your "golden oak" table has ever been polished, or is still in the raw state. In any case it can be coloured or stained to resemble mahogany excepting that the grain of the wood will always betray its identity.

Black and White, Peterborough:—To settle a dispute will you, through your "Arts and Crafts" column say whether or not there is more than one colour of black or white?

Ans.:—To start with, neither black nor white are, properly speaking a colour. The total absorption of all the rays of light really constitute black; on the same principle that white is produced by the reflection of all the light. White is pure light, not broken into colours. Black is pure darkness in which all colours are absorbed. However, this may settle your dispute. There are several shades or kind, of black and white, such as ivory, bone, drop, lamp black, etc., and ivory, flake, snow, zinc, china white, etc.

Vexed, Otonabee, Ont.:—I have just had my bedroom papered and the paper is all cracking in the corners. Can you kindly tell me through your "Arts and Crafts" column what is the cause of it?

Ans.:—There are a great many causes, some by the house setting, some cause the paper was not cut in the corners. Vibration will cause it, and in many cases it really seems inexplicable. I have known it to crack in corners where the house was old and apparently had ceased settling, the paper cut in the corners, and little or no vibration. But whether we know the reason or not, we cannot get away from the fact that there is a cause for every effect even though we cannot find it.

EXHIBITION WILL DEPEND UPON THE PURCHASE OF GROUNDS

A meeting of the Board of the Peterborough Central Exhibition was held last evening in the Council Chamber, for the purpose of passing accounts. A large number of accounts were presented and passed for payment.

A resolution of thanks to Mr. E. G. Patterson, of The Canadian General Electric Company, and to The Wm. Hamilton Company, for the loaning of their shells for the Exhibition, and to Mr. Clark for his War Relics, and Mr. Carl Simpson for his Bust of Sir R. L. Borden, was also passed.

President Garbutt made the suggestion that the Board should see whether the grounds are going to be made available after the present lease is out, because if they are not the Peterborough Central Exhibition will be a thing of the past. It is understood there will be something to report in the course of a couple of weeks in connection with the matter.

INSECT'S BITE KILLS — GIRL ABOUT TO WED

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—In a strange manner death befell Miss Claire Burnette Hallock, of Smithtown Branch, L.I., granddaughter of Alanson Hallock, Democratic leader of that section. She was to have been married Tuesday noon at the home of her mother, Mrs. Anna B. Hallock, to George Louis, Jr., a bank clerk, of Brooklyn. She died Wednesday night in Dr. Ross' sanitarium at Brentwood, her distraught fiancee kneeling at her bedside. It was a time when they had expected to be on their honeymoon to Bermuda.

The cause of Miss Hallock's illness mystified Dr. Turrell, the family physician and Dr. Ross. Finally they found a small red mark on the back of her neck that led to an examination. The physicians announced that she died of anthrax, a splenic fever, caused by the bite of an insect. The disease is rare here, but common in cattle-raising lands of Europe.

The roll call of the last enemy has again been heard in our midst, and John Russell, full of years and ready to enter into his rest, responded to the summons at 12.30 this morning, at the home of his son-in-law, John Scott, Chamberlen Street.

Born in Devonshire, England, 82 years ago, and came to Canada with his parents when an infant. Shortly after coming to Peterborough his father was accidentally killed at Whitlow's race, better known as the locks. Then the family moved to Emily, where his mother died. He then came to Peterborough, where he has resided since. In 1858 he was married to Miss Sarah Ann Meharry, daughter of the late John Meharry of County Cavan, Ireland, and niece of the late J. T. Henthorn, J.P., of Peterborough who predeceased him eighteen years ago.

Mr. Russell was perhaps the oldest Orangeman in the district, he having joined the Order 70 years ago and has been an honorary member of No. 80 L.O.L. for some time.

There are left to mourn his loss two daughters and one son, Mrs. John Scott and Mrs. R. J. Lockie, both of Chamberlen Street, and Mr. J. W. Russell of Toledo, O. One son, Robert M., died some years ago. His only brother, William, died at Millbrook, Aug. 1st. He was a Presbyterian in religion, and a Conservative in politics.

The funeral will take place Friday afternoon at 2.30. The service will be conducted by Rev. J. A. McKenzie, and funeral will be to Little Lake Cemetery.—(Com.).

ONLY $250.00 HEART BALM

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 13.— It took the jury in the Assize Court to-day about fifteen minutes to decide that Miss Mary Ann Frederick's heart had been damaged to the extent of $250 when Horace Hanniacy, retired farmer 71 years old, refused to marry the 53 year-old plaintiff. For this breach of promise Miss Frederick sued for $10,000 damages. With this judgment she was allowed county court costs.

TEMPORARY HYDRO SUB-STATION PREPARING ON BETHUNE STREET

Mr. E. M. Wilson Requires His Building on George Street and Utilities Commission Has to Move.

Owing to the fact that Mr. E. M. Wilson, of the Peterborough Machine Co., George street, requires the building now used by the city as an electrical substation, the Utilities Commission are fitting up as temporary premises the building at the southeast corner of Sherbrooke and Bethune streets. It is on this property the Commission intends to erect a permanent substation, the plans of which are now being prepared. Workmen are now engaged in putting the old Hamilton building into condition to receive the Hydro apparatus from the present station on George street.

RED CROSS PUBLIC MEETING

One outstanding feature of Red Cross work in Canada has been the absence of criticism. That is not due to any censorship of the press, or to any interference with the right of free speech. The work of the Red Cross has been conducted in plain public view. It has been no mystery for thousands of Canadians have participated in it.

The reason it is plain for this lack of criticism is the lack of material for criticism. The patriotic disinterestedness of the Canadaian Red Cross organization is matter of public knowledge.

There have however been a few rumors said to be based on soldiers letters from the front to the effect that men in some instances were being made pay for Red Cross supplies. A great many field comforts have been sent to the front by various organizations to be distributed gratis. In addition to this there are regimental stores and the Y.M.C.A. canteens at which articles are sold to the troops. Red Cross supplies are issued from Red Cross warehouses to the Army medical corps, on requisition from hospital commandants in the hospitals. Kit bags, pyjamas, socks and other articles are given to the patients by the Red Cross authorities. In every case the proceeds of the Canadian public generosity are distributed as free gift.

A recent cablegram from Col. Hodgetts the Canadian Red Cross commissioner in England characterises all reports of the sale of Red Cross supplies as absolutely preposterous. Even stronger language could be used. The Canadian Red Cross discharges this trust faithfully. It distributes all its supplies impartially and freely.

Red Cross Notes.

The British residents in Rome have fully equipped a ward for the Italian Red Cross in the Hospital Addolorata. It contains 85 beds which are to be added to.

Calcutta India has raised a fund of £35,000 which is to be expended by the Red Cross in keeping up a convoy of 50 motor ambulances, repairing cars and motor cycles.

The British residents of Athens have been active in sending field comforts and Red Cross supplies to the British soldiers at the Dardanelles.

Owing to confusion resulting from the great number of Relief Societies in England it has been proposed that the British Government grant the Red Cross the exclusive right to license medical and other relief work.

Munition Workers Are Not Wanted

Orders Are Issued That They Shall Not Be Allowed to Enlist

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—Canada's need of munition workers is announced in to-day's camp orders as follows:

"The orders and regulations as to enlistment in the Canadian expeditionary force now provide that expert mechanics should be enlisted only in corps requiring their services as such and that in other cases their enlistment should be referred to headquarters, Ottawa, through this office.

"These provisions are in future to be carried out as follows:

"(a) Upon the application for enlistment by any man who is a qualified mechanic or machinist, his enlistment should not be completed, but full particulars as to such man should be forwarded to headquarters. You will then be informed with as little delay as possible as to whether the services of such men are required for the purpose of the manufacture of munitions.

"(b) No men who are at present engaged in the manufacture of munitions should be allowed to enlist, but it should be pointed out to them that they are serving the country as well by carrying on their present employment and helping towards a successful issue of the war in another way.

MORE CANADIANS LAND IN ENGLAND

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—Militia headquarters has received information of the safe arrival in England of the steadily Scandinavian, with the remaining Canadian troops on board. They left Halifax from British Columbia comprising ten officers, and four companies of infantry draft from Ontario, comprising fifteen officers, one hundred and fifty men, and a draft of the Army Medical Corps, consisting of five officers and one hundred men.

THE EXAMINER IS APPRECIATED

While in the city, Capt. Dick Ponton took occasion to comment upon the admirable military spirit shown by the Examiner. He said it was one of the most highly appreciated papers along the Canadian front, and was widely read by the boys in the trenches.

During his stay in the city, Capt. Ponton was the guest of the Rev. Canon J. C. Davidson. He left on the noon train for Kingston, where he will deliver an instructional lecture to the members of the 39th and 80th Battalions. Capt. Ponton spent the morning sightseeing, Mr. T. F. Matthews having kindly placed his car at the disposal of the visitor.

Inspector Mowat Explains

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— In your comments on my letter in yesterday's issue, you say that the falling off in attendance at the South Central school could not have been due to your article of Saturday last.

It could not have been due to anything else, as the attendance was most satisfactory up to yesterday. The enrolled attendance for June was 373; for September it was 417, an increase of 44. The average attendance for September was 94 p.c., and this high average continued right up to yesterday when there were 50 absentees, and there would have been more had not some of the parents accompanied their children to school and satisfied themselves that conditions were not such as you described.

If you had communicated directly with the Medical Health Officer or the Sanitary Inspector, the work of the school would not have been disturbed.

A. Mowat, I.P.S.

The Examiner regrets that, as explained by Mr. Mowat, the article published, resulted in a decrease of school attendance. This it is hoped will be only temporary, and the result may be the development of a greater public confidence in the sanitary sufficiency of our school buildings. The Board of Health, the Medical Health Officer, and the Sanitary Inspector, have approved of the conditions in the South Central school and thereby have created a confidence that, as admitted, had not previously existed. The sanitary conditions and surrounding conditions of our public schools, as of all public places should, like Caesar's wife, be above suspicion, and unfortunate as was regarded the article handed the Examiner for publication, it has been the means of a public assurance in this regard, that might not otherwise have been given. Neither the Examiner nor any other person desires to injure the Public schools, and if with a good object, an error of judgment has been made, the propensity of human nature, to fallibility and not intention, properly bears the onus of responsibility.

Provision For the Invalided Soldier

Many times the question is asked as to what provision is made by the department for the care and assistance to the soldier invalided home and discharged, on account of wounds received in action as incapicitated for further service. The Patriotic Office has been advised of the allowance made in the case of Private E. Mesley, Corps 2, 2nd Batt., and who reached Peterborough last week. Following is the official notation:

"Three months pay, etc., amounting to $286.80 has been awarded him, pending the decision of the Pension Board. His permanent disability is assessed at 50 per cent. for six months."

This allowance will be of assistance to the soldier and we all hope to see him fully restored to complete health and activity.—Com.

The death occurred to-day of Nora Gilbert, aged eight years and six months. Deceased, who has been ill for some time, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gilbert, 486 George street.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

MATILDA WATLEY.

There passed away on Tuesday last, October 5, one of Dummer's best known and most highly respected residents in the person of Matilda Watley, wife of Fleglar Bell, Esq. Mrs. Bell had been a sufferer for some time from an affection of the heart, and had several times been nearly away, though her energetic make-up had been the means of overcoming the attacks, until Saturday prior to her demise it was felt that recovery was impossible.

Mrs. Bell was known to all by her splendid character, which was at all times a good matured kind and genial and which is reflected in her family of eight children who are left to mourn the loss of the best of mothers. She was born and lived her lifetime in this township. Two sisters, Mrs. W. H. Bell and Mrs. Fralic Bell, of Essex survive. The children are; Lawrence of Chicago, Ill.; William, of Warsaw; Estell, of Merid, Sask.; Percy at home, and Ernest of the Army Service Medical Corps, attached to McGill University Company in France; Mrs. John Tucker, and the Misses Eva and Jennie at home.

The funeral took place on Friday to St. Mark's Cemetery, Warsaw, and was one of the most largely attended that has come to that place of burial. —Com.

"CIVILIZE THE FOREIGNER"

At St. Paul's Presbyterian church to-night Rev. B. M. Dickey, B.A., will give an illustrated address on the subject "Civilizing the Foreigner." None should miss the opportunity of hearing Mr. D. Grey. For a number of years he was a pioneer missionary in the Yukon, and is known all over Canada and in the British Isles as a wonderful lecturer on subjects connected with the far north. Once heard, he is never forgotten. For a number of years Mr. Dickey has been specially active in the work of Canadianizing the thousands of foreigners who work and live along the lines of our frontier. Certainly the attitude of the German-Americans since the present war broke out has shown the peril of allowing immigrants to flock into a country without taking means to make them true and loyal citizens of their adopted country. Mr. Dickey understands the problem. He also knows the foreigner. Those who hear him to-night and see his pictures will learn something about Canada which will be new to them. Now is the time to study the foreigner. When the war is over there may not be time. Mr. Dickey's address will be a revelation.

ANOTHER BIG VICTORY FOR THE RUSSIANS

SERBIANS CHECK THE BULGARIANS

Selborne Firm

Repeats His Criticism of Censors in Mishandling Despatches

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Earl of Selborne, President of the Board of Agriculture, in an address in the House of Lords yesterday, referring to his speech at York last week in which he strongly attacked the censorship said the press bureau was not responsible for the excision from the article of the correspondent of The Times of the mention of the bravery of the Germans in the recent fighting in France.

The excision, the Earl of Selborne said, had been made by military authority, but whether in England or in France he did not know. He believed, however, the authority was given in France for the excision.

The speaker said he withdrew nothing from the opinions he had expressed as to the exercise of discretion.

Asked whether he made the statement in the name of the Government the Earl of Selborne said he had not consulted his colleagues but that he should be sorry to learn that any of them disagreed with him.

Conscription Once Again

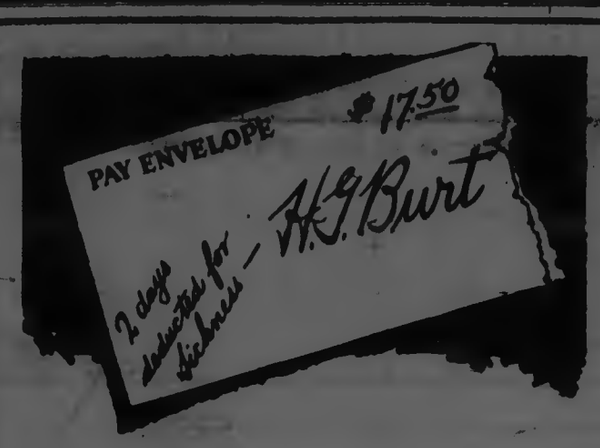
Renewed Attempt to Obtain a Definite Ruling by the Cabinet

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News asserts that the conscriptionist members of the Cabinet, headed by Winston S. Churchill and Earl Curzon, will make a renewed attempt at today's Cabinet meeting to force the issue and obtain a definite ruling for or against conscription.

The conscriptionist members believe, the News continues, that Earl Kitchener is more inclined to their view than he was a month ago, and they also believe that if the British Government should announce adoption of conscription at the present juncture when a new war is beginning in the Balkans, it would have a striking effect on the military situation.

Several Liberal members of Parliament are urging the Government to appoint a committee to investigate the circumstances under which the Dardanelles expedition was begun and the manner in which it has been conducted. It is considered doubtful that the Government will consent.

Turkeys must be well housed, otherwise you will not rear them with success. The houses must be warm but not stuffy. They must be dry and free from all damp and cold, for if dampness or cold gets to the birds the chances are ten to one they will die.



When Health is Wrong The Pay is Short

Getting ahead in this world calls for mental and physical forces kept up-built and in trim.

Often the food one eats "makes" or "breaks"—it depends upon the kind of food. In many cases the daily dietary lacks certain essential elements for keeping brain and body at their best.

Over 18 years ago a food was perfected to offset this lack—

Grape-Nuts

—and it has stood the test for the years.

Made of whole wheat and malted barley this famous pure food supplies all the nutriment of the grains including their mineral salts—Phosphate of Potash, etc.—necessary for building brain, nerve and muscle.

Grape-Nuts has a delicious nut-like flavour; is always ready to eat—fresh and crisp from the package; so thoroughly baked it is partially predigested.

Russians Again Triumph in Galicia

Czar's Troops Have Stormed and Captured One of the Strongest Positions on the Stryps River Line, Securing Thousands of Prisoners---The Way Opened for the Recapture of Lemberg.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Despatches from Petrograd say that the Russians to-day won another brilliant victory over the Austro-German forces in the Stryps River district. The Czar's troops stormed and captured one of the strongest positions on the line, securing thousands of prisoners and several guns. The Russians still pursue the retreating enemy.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Zeppelins raided London Tuesday night, killing eight, and wounding 34. The material damage was slight and the fires were soon extinguished.

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—All Ontario bars will be closed at eight o'clock commencing November 1st, Saturday at seven p.m.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 14.—Russians continue to defeat the Austrians on the Galician front. The way is now open for the recovery of Lemberg.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—The Bulgarians sustained a severe reverse at the hands of the Serbians.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Belgrade was shelled by the Germans with artillery and aeroplane for three days, and hundreds of civilians were killed.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Rumours that the Russians are marching through Rumania to help the Serbians are current this afternoon. Rumania is momentarily expected to join the Entente Powers in arms.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Fifty Gallic aeroplanes bombarded German infantry concentrated at Bazancourt for an attack on French lines. The damage was so great that intended assault was abandoned.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The Chamber of Deputies this evening adopted a resolution of confidence in the Government by a vote of 372 to 9. Premier Viviani said the Allies were in agreement concerning Balkan intervention at secret session.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Greece has replied to Serbia that existing treaty between the two countries requiring Greece to help the Serbs against Bulgaria, doesn't fit the present circumstances.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Sir Edward Carson to-night issued an official denial of the rumour that he had resigned as Attorney-General,

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Royal assent was given to the American loan bill this afternoon.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—It was announced this (Wednesday) afternoon that French aeroplanes have once more bombarded Bazancourt and Warmerville railway stations in the Suippe valley. These are on the railway which has been the objective of recent French fighting in the Champagne, and air raids interrupting its operation do much to hamper the supplies of the Crown Prince's forces in that region. The official account says:

"A squadron of nineteen French aeroplanes has thrown down 140 shells on the railroad station at Bazancourt, whence movements of the enemy have been reported.

"Another air squadron composed of eighteen machines has bombarded the railroad junction at Achiet-Le-Grand near Bapaume.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Things have been quiet on the Canadian front recently though there has been considerable artillery firing during the afternoon. A few nights ago the Germans got noisy and "compliments" were exchanged over neutral ground where the trenches were close enough. This led to active hostilities at one point and our men give them a taste of rapid fire. The boches retaliated with a couple of aerial torpedoes which did little damage.

CATHOLIC BISHOPS URGE SUPPORT OF BRITISH RED CROSS

"That, having taken cognizance of the appeal for contributions in aid of the British Red Cross, to be received by the officials of cities, towns and municipalities on October 21, we, the undersigned Bishops, are in complete sympathy with the object of this appeal, and we hereby urge Catholics to contribute generously therefor.

"N. McNeil, Archbishop of Toronto; M. J. Spratt, Archbishop of Kingston; T. J. Dowling, Bishop of Hamilton; D. J. Scollard, Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie; W. A. Macdonell, Bishop of Alexandria; M. F. Fallon, Bishop of London; M. J. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterboro."

Another Enemy Steamer Sunk By British Sub.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 13, via London.—Another German steamship has been destroyed as a result of the British submarine campaign in the Baltic, undertaken to prevent Germany from receiving supplies from Scandinavia. The German steamer Walter Leonhardt, 1,281 tons gross, was blown up and sunk in the Baltic yesterday by a British submarine and her crew had been permitted to take to the small boats.

Real Decision To Be Made in West

Whatever May Happen in Outlying Theatres of the War, the Contest on the French Front Will Be the Main Issue ---Situation There is Excellent for the Allies.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—In the excitement attending the German onslaught in the Balkans, many people are taking too depressing a view of the situation of the allies. This situation, even if the Germans reach Constantinople, still offers every prospect of victory.

In the first place Britain's control of the sea is stronger than ever. Germany's submarine campaign is at least temporarily defeated. Steel nets spread under the water seem to have proved effective.

Russian armies, which a month ago were threatened with complete disaster have checked the German offensive everywhere and taken the offensive themselves on the left wing.

Finally the situation on the French front is excellent. Large British armies have begun to materialize, and the French offensive in Champagne and Artois has shown decided superiority, both in light and heavy artillery, so the entire army is confident of its ability to gradually expel the invaders. There is every probability that the French will undertake a still greater offensive at the end of autumn. The falling of leaves denudes the woods and facilitates aeroplane observations, while hardening of the ground insures a maximum result from artillery fire.

Whatever may happen in the outlying theatres of the war, it seems more likely than ever that the real decision must be made on the French front. French newspapers are therefore now loudly warning the Government against sending too many men to the Balkans lest it weaken operations here.

BELGIUM AND GREECE

Writer in New York Times Points Out the Principal Differences Between Two Invasions

William Bayard Hale, in your issue of Oct. 9, is unable to see the difference between the trespass of England and France on Greece and Germany's violation of Belgium. It is the chief difference is that Germany was pledged to protect and maintain Belgium against all aggressors, whereas France and England were unpledged as regards Greece. A rather important difference is that Belgium was bound to perpetual neutrality, whereas Greece was bound by treaty to come to Serbia's aid in a Balkan war. A very practical difference is that violation of Belgium was sure to cause the miseries of an unequal war, while it was known that the merely technical trespass at Saloniki would be winked at by Greece and would cause no bloodshed. The perfunctory protest of Greece only alleged that Serbia had not yet been attacked by Bulgaria, and hence that the advent of Serbia's allies was premature. But from the moment of Bulgarian aggression on Serbia, which was known to be certain, Greece herself was bound to fight for Serbia, and by the same token to welcome on her territory Serbia's other allies. Thus any merely technical trespass or offence of France and England has already been terminated by events. But Germany's offense in Belgium continues and is morally interminable. Germany never had and never could have in the premises a shadow of his mental confusion.

The chief difference is that Germany was pledged to protect and maintain Belgium against all aggressors, whereas France and England were unpledged as regards Greece. A rather important difference is that Belgium was bound to perpetual neutrality, whereas Greece was bound by treaty to come to Serbia's aid in a Balkan war. A very practical difference is that violation of Belgium was sure to cause the miseries of an unequal war, while it was known that the merely technical trespass at Saloniki would be winked at by Greece and would cause no bloodshed. Disease Rampant and Food Scarce in Vienna, Writes Correspondent

The Petit Journal of Paris received from a correspondent a gloomy, descriptive account of conditions in Vienna.

"It was no longer permitted," he says, "to take a stroll in the surroundings of the capital, where elite society used to have their gatherings. The picturesque suburbs, with their villas and mansions, as well as the forests and mountains in their vicinity, are closed to the civilian population. Troops are camping there and have spoiled the beauty of the landscape by their trenches. Nor is the setting up of big guns calculated to enhance the general aspect of the scenery. Vienna is nothing but a citadel in the centre of an immense fortified camp.

"Life has become almost unbearable. Everything is outrageously dear, and what is worse still, money is scarce, and it is almost impossible to procure any resources. A pound of meat costs more than ten francs (about $2), and one cannot always get it, for on two days of the week, Tuesday and Friday, the sale of beef, veal, mutton and pork is prohibited. Those two days chicken and eggs are the only substantial victuals available, but as the prices asked for these commodities are exorbitant, most people have to be satisfied with vegetables for their meals. Consumption of bread is still subject to limitations. I receive my daily allowance card, calling for a quantity of 240 grams, as soon as I get down for breakfast in the morning. The most modest dinner in the restaurant of my hotel costs me at least six francs ($1.20). The price of an ordinary small steak is 50 cents, and the other ingredients of the meagre meal entail a proportionate outlay.

"Let me say a few words about the war bread I receive in exchange for my coupon. The article is black, doughy and has all kinds of taste, except that of bread. It is as indigestible as a piece of clay, and it is therefore lucky that its bad taste prevents you from eating much of it. All sorts of combinations and mixtures have been tried as substitutes for flour, because there have been many long weeks when the latter staple could not be obtained.

"It has been rumored that a trader man at Prague, was put in prison because he had sold a composition, supposedly of corn and rye, twenty-five per cent. of which, however, was sawdust. Many of the diseases now raging in Vienna have undoubtedly their origin in similar cases of food adulteration. One can safely say that the Austrian capital is passing through its severest experience of modern times. Not only is the city on the verge of actual starvation, but epidemics are causing havoc among the inhabitants. Cholera especially is giving the authorities just cause for great anxiety."

Says Automobile Horns Should Go

Why anybody should think that because he is driving a motor car he is privileged to order other people out of his way, especially people on foot, is a mystery beyond solution and yet the privilege is claimed innumerable times every day, and its assumption is made the more offensive by the peculiarly harsh and discordant sounds by means of which it is asserted. For some of the milder horns there is an occassional use that is legitimate, but these are so few and unimportant, and the improper uses are so numerous and so outrageous, that almost without question both public decency and public interest would be served if the carrying on an automobile of any implement whatever, the designed object of which was to make a noise, were prohibited by law and the law sternly enforced. The immediate effect would be to make the drivers of cars more careful, if not more considerate.

The horns in all probability cause more "accidents" than they prevent, for insolently loud as are the commands issued to pedestrians through them, obedience cannot always be as prompt as the makers of the noises expect. If the automobilists had to pick their way as other people do, they would soon learn, perforce, that there is nothing in their licenses to justify them in consulting only their own haste and convenience as they pass along the roads and streets that are the common property of us all.—New York Times.

Ben Jasper Junior was very young, and he couldn't understand.

At last we were to ourselves, my extensive household and I. Late that night I sat in my study considering the best means of reducing my staff of servants and in computing, with dismay, the cost of being a princely host to people who had not the least notion what it meant to do sums in economic subtraction. It was soon apparent to me that retrenchment, stern and relentless, would have to follow upon my wild though brief season of profligacy. I decided to dismiss the scullery maid.

I was indescribably lonely. Poopendyke was worried about my pallor, my lassitude. At the end of a week he took it upon himself to drop a line to the Hazzards, urging them to run out for a visit in the hope that company might take me out of myself. All attempts to renew my work on the ill fated novel met with utter failure. The power of mental concentration was gone. I spent most of my time in the garden.

The Hazzards came and with them the joyously beautiful Betty Billy. Poopendyke must have prepared them for the task in hand, for they proceeded at once to transform the blank, dreary old castle into a sort of hilarious merry go round, with me in the very vortex of it all. They succeeded in taking me "out of myself," I will say that for them. My spirits took an upward bound and, wonderful to relate, retained their altitude in spite of all I could do to lower them. I did not want to be happy. I figured that I owed it to my recently aroused temperament to be permanently unhappy. But the wind blew another way, and I drifted aimlessly with it, as a derelict drifts with the currents of the ocean, but preferably with the warm gulf stream.

We had word from Mrs. Titus in London that negotiations had been reopened with the count and that a compromise might be expected. The obdurate nobleman had agreed, it seemed, to meet Jasper Titus' lawyers in Paris at no distant date. My chief concern, however, was for the countess herself. That she had successfully reached the high seas was apparent; if not, the newspapers, which I read with eagerness, would have been filled with accounts of her seizure. We eagerly awaited the promised cablegram from New York announcing her safe arrival there.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I nerved myself to question him about the Englishman.

"Splendid fellow," said he, with discouraging fervor; "one of the finest chaps I know, eh, George?"

"For an Englishman," admitted Hazzard.

"He's a gentleman, and that's more than you can say for the tagtag of nobility that paid court to Aline Tarnoway. He was in love with her, but he was a gentleman about it. A thoroughbred, I say."

"Good looking?" I inquired.

"Well, rather—the sort of chap women rave about. Ask Betty. She was mad about him, but he couldn't see anything in her. I think she hates him now. He had eyes for no one but the fair countess. An awful grind on Betty. She's used to something different."

Hazzard studied the clouds that drifted over our heads. "I wonder if Aline cared anything for him."

"I've always believed that she liked him better than she cared to admit even to herself."

"I fancy he'll not let any grass grow under his feet now that she's free," said Dr. Hazzard.

"Think she'll have him?"

"Why not? He has a much better position in England than Tarnoway has here, and he's not after her money. I hate to say it, but Aline is a seeker after titles. She wouldn't be averse to adding 'your ladyship' to her collection."

"Oh, come!" I protested. "That is a nasty thing to say, George."

"She may have been regenerated," he said obligingly. "You know her better than I do, old chap. What say?"

"I didn't say anything," I muttered.

"I thought you did."

I hesitated a moment and then purged myself of the truth. "As a matter of fact, I have reason to believe she's in love with Amberdale and has been for a long time. I'm not saying it in disparagement, believe me. God knows she's entitled to something decent and fine in the shape of love. I hope he's good enough for her."

They looked at me with interest, and Smith broke the momentary silence.

"I'm glad of that," I said gruffly.

"The old lu—I mean Mrs. Titus—will be tickled to death if the match is pulled off," said Hazzard.

"She was tickled the first time," said I sententiously, and changed the subject. There was no sense in prolonging the agony.

Toward the close of their visit a message arrived from the countess herself, signed with the fictitious name we had agreed upon. The news she gave caused us to celebrate that night. We had a bonfire in the courtyard and drank to the god of good luck.

Cargo safely landed in New York and forwarded to the Adirondacks for storage and to await the appearance of a claimant. Former owner has agreed to accept $1,500,000 and release all claims. When are you coming over? ALROSE.

By the most extraordinary coincidence a curt, businesslike letter arrived in the evening post from Marie Tarnoway postmarked Paris. Its contents staggered me.

John Bellamy Smart, Esq.:

Dear Mr. Smart—Will you put a price on Schloss Rothhoefen? I am desirous of purchasing the castle if you care to sell and we can agree upon a fair price for the property. Sentiment moves me in this matter, and I earnestly hope that you may be induced to part with your white elephant. If you will be so kind as to wire your decision, you will find me deeply grateful and at the end of the ensuing fortnight. Faithfully yours.

MARIE TARNOWEY.

My "white elephant!" I was so eager to get rid of it that I would have wired at once, naming a figure proportionately low had it not been for the united protests of my four friends and the canny advice of Mr. Poopendyke.

"Souk him!" said he, and I arose to the occasion.

I waited for three days and then telegraphed him that I would not take a heller less than $250,000, more than doubling the price I had paid for the property. I was prepared, however, to come down a paltry hundred thousand or so if he revealed signs of reluctance.

We built another bonfire that night and danced around it like so many savages.

Three acceptable. Will come to Schloss Rothhoefen at once to complete the transfer. TARNOWEY.

Accompanied by Hazzard and Smith, I went over the castle from top to bottom in quest of the reason for Tarnoway's prompt acceptance of my demand. We had no doubt that he had a good and sufficient reason for wanting the place, and but one thing suggested itself to our imagination; his absolute certainty that treasure was hidden somewhere about the venerable pile, treasure of considerable magnitude, you may be sure, or he would not have revealed such alacrity in accepting my terms. Sentiment had nothing to do with this surprising move on his part. That was all bosh. He had an ulterior motive, and it was for me to get the better of him at his own game if I could. While I was eager to get rid of the castle at any price, I did not relish the thought of having laughed at for a fool by Marie Tarnoway after he had laid his greedy hands upon treasure that had been mine without my knowledge.

He was no fool. The castle meant nothing to him as a home or as an investment. No doubt he would blow it to pieces in order to unearth the thing he knew its walls secreted.

We spent two unprofitable days in going over the place, and in the end sank down tired, defeated and without the slightest evidence in our possession that so much as a half crown lay hidden there as treasure trove. I gave in and announced that if Tarnoway could find anything worth having he was entitled to it so far as I was concerned, and I wouldn't begrudge him a farthing's worth.

He telegraphed that he would arrive on the morning of the third day, accompanied by his lawyer, a notary and an architect. My four guests departed in haste by the late night train after extracting a promise from me to join them in Vienna when I was no longer the master of Schloss Rothhoefen. I rather relished the thought of a brief vacation.

Then, like the spider, I crept back into my web and waited for the foolish fly, knowing all the time that he would have the better of me in the long run.

I confess to a feeling of sadness in parting with the place, after all, elephantine though it was in every sense of the word. Within its gray and ancient walls that beautiful thing called love had come to me to live with me forever. It had come unbidden, against my will, against my better judgment and in spite of my prejudices, but still it was a thing to cherish and to hold in the virgin youth all through the long years to come. It would always be young and sweet and there entwined the unrequited love of Aline. Walking through the empty, disrupted rooms that had once been hers, I grew sick with longing and in something like fear fled downward, shame tears blinding my eyes. Verily, I was a fool—a mooncalf, silly fool!

Tarnoway was so kind and smiling on a May morning as he came jauntily down the great hall to where I awaited him.

"I am here incognito, my dear Smart," he said, extending his gloved hand, which I took perforce. "Dub rosh, you might say," he went on, with a wry smile. "A stupid, unchivalric caprice has designs upon my gentlemanly perhaps, but it's just as well not to die up the mahkeye, as you Americans would put it."

"One into friend, the baron, was not totally without friends, I take it," said I dryly.

He made a grimace. "Not genuine," he declared. "Brave men rarely have many enemies than friends, and he was a brave man, a truly brave man. Because he was a brave man I have the honor to call him a coward, Mr. Smart."

He introduced his three companions. I was surprised to see that the lawyer was not the fawning Schymansky and later on inquired for him. Tarnoway laughed. "Poor old Schymansky! He is in prison."

"Alas! I am not surprised," said I.

"He was my second, poor chap. It did not occur to him to run away after the—er—duel. They had to make an example of some one. His trial comes up next week. I am afraid he may be dealt with rather harshly. I miss him dreadfully. But let us come to the matter in hand, Mr. Smart. I daresay your time is valuable. You have no objection to my going over the place with Mr. Saks, I am sure. He is the architect who is to rebuild the castle for me. My attorney and Mr. Pooly, the notary, will, with your assistance, draw up the proper contracts preliminary to the formal transfer, and I will sign them with you upon my return."

"Would it not be better to discuss the question of payments before we go any further, Count Tarnoway?"

"You will be paid in cash, Mr. Smart, the instant the deed is transferred," he said coldly.

I followed him to the top of the stairs which descended to the basement of the castle. It was rather significant that he elected to explore the lower regions first of all.

"I shall accompany you," said I deliberately.

A faint scowl came into his face. He eyed me fixedly for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and said that his only desire was to avoid putting me to any unnecessary trouble. If I cared to come he would be more than grateful.

"It isn't necessary to visit the cellars, Saks," he said to the architect. "Ample time for that sort of rummaging. I particularly want your opinion on the condition of the interesting walls on this floor and above. My scheme of improvement, Mr. Smart, contemplates the enlargement of these halls by throwing them into one."

"A very simple process," said I, "if the whole structure doesn't topple down upon your heads while you're about it."

"I shall contrive to save my scalp, Mr. Smart, no matter what happens. It is very precious to me."

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

REV. MR. PEEVER IN AN ACCIDENT

LINDSAY, Oct. 13.—A peculiar accident happened in the village of Little Britain Monday night, when two rigs collided, both horses running away.

It appears that Mr. John Brown, of Valentia, was deputized to meet Rev. R. G. Peever, of Peterboro, at the Little Britain station as he was billed to give an address at the Valentia fowl supper and concert. When driving along a village street, Mr. Brown met the Harris creamery rig and the wheels locked, the horses becoming badly frightened. Mr. Peever was thrown out and sustained a few bruises but otherwise unhurt, and later on proceeded to Valentia where he delivered his lecture without any apparent extra effort. Both horses ran away, considerable damage being done to the rigs.

A Stake of Two Lives.

[Original.]

There were two absorbing passions that swayed Jean Tangre, governor of the prison in Dijon, France, at the time of the reign of terror—love of money and pride in his skill at chess. There was also a temporary passion—a hatred for an aristocrat. He guarded his prisoners well, but he still spent his leisure moments at his favorite game, and when he could do so without risk appropriated their belongings.

One morning after he had heard the reports of his jailers and attended to the usual routine of business he sat down to a game of chess with his daughter, who was the best opponent he could get. He beat her several games and threw himself back in his chair, with a deprecatory shrug and grunt. At that moment an attendant entered and said that a young man desired to speak with the governor. A boy of about eighteen was ushered in and thus addressed him:

"Citizen, I have heard of your skill in chess and have come all the way from Paris to try mine with you. I have beaten all opponents there, and if I can beat you I shall be champion of France. But I fear that is impossible, for I have heard that you are invincible."

At this compliment Tangre's breast swelled like that of a pouter pigeon.

"Sit down, citizen," he said. "Whom have I the honor to oppose?"

"Pierre Levesque, at your service," replied the young man, taking the seat left vacant by Julie Tangre.

"Levesque? I have heard of all the noted chess players of Paris, but not of Levesque."

"I am very young, citizen. I have lived in the country. Only a few weeks ago I went to Paris and vanquished the notable players after my arrival there."

They played a game in which Tangre beat his opponent, who looked very much surprised.

"That is a new move," said Levesque, "that I have never seen before. None of the Paris players has it."

"So?" said the governor, delighted. "Well, perhaps I shall show you more new moves before we get through."

The next game was a long one. Levesque knitted his brows and studied and hesitated, but with all his thinking he was at last beaten.

"You play well," said Tangre. "That game required all my skill to beat you."

"In Paris," said the boy, "we always play for a stake. I think a stake tends to sharpen my skill. Shall we have one?"

"As you like," said his opponent. "Make it a louis a game."

They played all the morning, and at noon the governor had won what was for him a goodly sum, having beaten seven games in ten. Then the stranger began to grow irritated.

"What!" he cried. "Have I beaten the best players of the capital to come here to be beaten by a provincial?"

Tangre chuckled. Levesque put his hand in his pocket and withdrew it full of golden louis. He repeated the process till he had placed quite a pile of coins on the table.

"Match them," he said, "for the best six games in eleven."

"Ah, citizen," said Tangre, looking at the heap greedily, "if I only had the wherewithal to match them I would gladly do so."

"You dare not," said Levesque.

"Is there nothing you would like me to stake against them except gold?"

"Yes," said the stranger; "there is." He leaned forward and whispered in the governor's ear:

"My father, Count Ulric Dumont, is your prisoner. I will play my gold against his liberty, the best six in eleven games."

A succession of curious expressions passed over the governor's face—first suspicion, then deliberation, avidity, confidence, followed in quick succession. He felt sure from what he had seen of Levesque's play that he could beat him. The young man's love for his father had led him to make a rash attempt for the prisoner's life. Tangre consented to the terms, signed an order for the count's release and laid it on the pile of gold.

The first two games were won by Tangre, the third by Levesque, the fourth by Tangre, the fifth and sixth by Levesque, the seventh and eighth by Tangre. The governor had now won five games to Levesque's three. From this point all was changed. The next game Levesque checkmated his opponent in twelve minutes, the next in six minutes. This left the games evenly divided, but so brilliant had been Levesque's later play that his adversary turned pale. Levesque on the eleventh game checkmated his adversary in four moves.

He reached forward and seized the paper, leaving the gold on the table. Rising, he bowed ceremoniously to the governor and withdrew, Tangre, sitting in a sort of stupor, looking after him as he went out of the door. As soon as it was closed Tangre scooped the money from the table and hid it in a closet.

Had not the young man left the gold on the table his plan might have been a failure and he and his father both gone to the guillotine. As it was, within half an hour the two were riding posthaste for the coast, where they found a vessel about to embark for New Orleans.

A month after the count was liberated. Tangre received an order to send him to Paris to be tried. This really meant to be executed. Tangre claimed that he had never received such a prisoner and substantiated his claim by unquestionable records.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect has been in many cases reported remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

NOTE Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

HOW PRUSSIA RULES

Scientifically Barbarous is Her Treatment of Poles

The Prussian Poles have lived for long years under the harshest and most cruel oppression one can imagine. The work of denationalisation has been most tenaciously carried on by Prussia. The Polish language is everywhere prescribed. The postman does not deliver letters whose address is written in Polish. The people are not allowed to use their own language in public meetings. And, as if this were not enough, the notorious law regarding expropriation was promulgated, and a fund of a billion francs established for the purpose of evicting the Poles from their own lands and of giving them to Germans. A really systematic form of spoliation it is, an outrage on all sense of law and right, in the carrying out of which all the German chancellors from the least to the greatest have vied with each other, Von Bulow being the most pitiless of them all. The law is the application of the principle defended by a Prussian Minister, speaking in the Landtag in 1912, who said: "We should always firmly maintain the principle that all the subjects of a German state should be Germans." And it was then that the little girls who say their prayers in Polish were sharply whipped on their fingers, just as the Hungarians in Transylvania do to the little Roumanian girls.

The theory of the expropriation of the lands of a conquered or subject people has been already defended by the most authoritative German writers and particularly with reference to Poland. K. F. Wolff, to mention but one of these, wrote in 1913 in the official organ of the Pan-German League: "Where is it written that the dominant and conquering race is under the obligation of granting political rights to the conquered? Is not the exercise of political rights a prerogative, which from the biological point of view, belongs exclusively to the superior race? It is right that the conqueror should have the absolute will to dominate and should work for the political and ethnical annihilation of the conquered. It is absolutely necessary to destroy the prejudice, according to which the conquered have a right to preserve their nationality and their language."

The Russian Poles, who know well what is the lot of their brethren in Germany, naturally can have no confidence in the promise of the proclamation of Warsaw.

A man of 5 feet 8 inches should weigh 136 pounds, and seven additional pounds for each of the next three inches in height.

RUSSIA'S MODEST RULER

Czar Looks Extremely Youthful—A Lover of Simplicity

The London Times recounts the interview of M. Jean Cruppi, the former Minister of Justice, in France, with the Czar. "My reception was of the most cordial description," says M. Cruppi. "The Sovereign after a reign of over two decades looks quite young, carries himself very modestly, with an extreme simplicity, and his welcome was quiet and pleasant.

"But his voice rose clear and firm when he affirmed his will to continue the war until the victories have been achieved which are necessary to assure the freedom of Europe and the triumph of right. 'The peasants say "thee" to me,' said the Czar. 'Every day I receive addresses from them. "Go forward and be firm," they say; "we are always behind thee."'

"The Sovereign's tone betrays his emotion," M. Cruppi continues, "when at frequent intervals he speaks to me in a kindly tone of France, of our heroic army, and of the mutual feeling of confidence which animates the allied nations. While the Czar is speaking thus the door opens and a child appears. The Emperor smiles and presents me to the Czarevitch, who remains beside his father. The picture this presented gave me an insight into the simple and tender family life at Tsarskoe Selo."

Britain's Wise Choice

The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. are credited with the most scrupulous refusal to purchase, for the house or personally, stocks of any company to which they award war orders for the British Government, thus sacrificing the chance of millions of dollars of profits. The great advantage of employing a house like Morgan's is that it is already so rich that money is no temptation as compared with commercial honor.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework, and have a family of ten."

TERRIBLE ALPINE COLD

Where Night Alone Checks Fierce Onslaughts of Italians

An account given by a wounded Hungarian officer of the fighting around the Kyn, quoted by the London "Morning Post's" Budapest correspondent says: Day and night saw most desperate hand-to-hand encounters in this plteau, called the "cliff of death," by the men, Austrians and Italians alike. The positionr are 7,000 feet high on the summits of the mountain, far above the clouds. Our men do not much mind the heights, but the climate is not to their taste. By day the heat is oppressive, by night the cold unbearable. They are supplied with heavy fur coats and blankets, yet they freeze all night. The men are relieved more often from these trenches than on other fronts owing to the intense cold. They simply tremble when the evening approaches.

This is the only sector where the enemy attacks mostly by day, and where every attack ends with bayonet fighting. The nights are not adapted for fighting, the men's hands being stiff from cold.

The Italian troops all consist here of Alpini regiments, the best troops to face the "cliff of death." Although we are so near to each other, there is no fraternizing, as was the case of the Russian front. Our men sincerely hate their enemy. When they storm our positions, shouting, "Avanti!" our men call out to them, "Avanti, briganti!"

BELGIUM'S HATRED

Aged Poet Inflicts Germans an Insurmountable Aristocratic Abhorrence

In his old age Emile Verhaeren, poet of Belgium's great pests, has passed through the supreme experiences of war. His humble home in Flanders was dominated by German arms, and he is a refugee in England. His latest poems and prose writings breathe a passionate indignation. M. Verhaeren recalls that within two hours of a cruel ultimatum Germany was breathing forth the purity of her intentions toward Belgium. He continues: "She could have dared to offer open battle, but she preferred a treacherous ambuscade. And by this deed she has created against herself in the hearts of Belgians a hatred so passionate and so universal that it will go down from this generation to a depth that no man can forfeit. The Germans have waged no real war against us, they have been ravagers, thieves, pillagers, assassins.

"They have not been satisfied with the devastation caused by their armies; they have deliberately created a famine in Northern Belgium. Now, in the full twentieth century and in Europe, there are cries of a people dying of hunger. Help pours in from all sides. But how far will these gifts go to satisfy the hunger of whole provinces? It is an unvarying rule that conquered territories must be provisioned by their conquerors. But the Germans recognise no duties in warfare. They are glad that those whom they have not been able to slaughter should die a death even more horrible."

As an instance of wholesale pillage, M. Verhaeren tells how the station at Malines was blocked with 700 pianos taken from the homes in that town. He recites acts of savagery inflicted on men and women. He tells of a merchant who decided to stay in his country house near Antwerp with his two daughters, 17 and 20 years old. Five German officers took up their quarters in the house and were treated as hospitably as possible. An abundant dinner was prepared for them, but before sitting down to it the eldest of the officers ordered the father to be confined in his own cellar. When he was released the next morning his daughters had been given over to the common soldiers, and one of them was insane. The facts are vouched for by the French Minister of War.

It is the author's profound conviction that Germany is uncivilisable, that she is Asiatic at heart, and has in her an inexhaustible store of savagery. To indicate the spirit of the nation he quotes this extract from a German publication entitled "Grossdeutschland und Mitteleuropa um das Jahr 1950": "After a short term of years we shall see some such sight as this: The German flag will wave over 86,000,000 Germans, and they will govern a dominion peopled by 130,000,000 Europeans. In this great empire only the Germans will have political rights, only the Germans will be owners of property. They will be a nation of masters, permitting, by condescension, that the peoples under their rule should perform menial labor." M. Verhaeren adds that the modern spirit of liberty and justice pays lip service to the future and promises salvation for the world. He is proud that Belgium sacrificed herself for that ideal.

VAGARIES OF STEEL APPEAR IN SHELLS

Armor-piercers Are Soft-nosed—Many Marvels Are Wrought in Arsenals —Time and Care

Everybody knows that the modern shell is one of the most diabolical of man's inventions; but how many of us realize that it is also one of the most delicate and complicated? Recently, some firms holding contracts for making high-explosive shell took upon themselves to "correct" a detail in the specification, and, as a result, a certain thread was "improved." They will never do anything of the kind again, because all their work was rejected. The apparent absurdity is designed of set purpose.

There is a somewhat similar anomaly in the big shell for penetrating, which was introduced in consequence of an accident. One day a test shell was fired at a piece of armor plating from the soft side, and the projectile went clean through it, and exploded after impact; whereas, a similar shell fired against the front—the hardened and tempered side—shattered, and left an indentation of only a few inches. This singular incident set somebody thinking, and, in consequence, the high-explosive armor-piercing shell is now given a soft nose. To the hard point is attached a cap of soft metal, with which, addition it will go through the toughest piece of armor plate. What happens on impact seems to be this: The cap spreads, holding the point, and so enabling it—remember that the shell is revolving rapidly—to force its way unbroken through the hard face of the place by a sort of boring action.

When Steel Needs Rest

No less curious is another fact concerning the points of such projectiles. After the heads have been worked, the shells are left for weeks before they undergo the next stage, because, strong as they look, they are liable to snap. Why? Think of the razor. Constant stropping twists the grain, with the result that the steel gets "tired," and will not yield a keen edge. But if you put the thing away for a few weeks the grain will return to its normal state, and you can get a satisfactory shave. In a similar way, the grain of the steel is affected by working, though, of course, to a much greater extent, and till it is "rest" the makers must go cautiously.

Steel shows a like eccentricity in the making of test guages. Some of the measurements of shells are very fine, and the instruments employed are so delicate that they have to be used quickly, lest the heat of the hand causes the metal to expand.

Forty Inspections

As a concrete proof of the elaborate nature of projectile making, take the case of the shrapnel shell. The steel portion undergoes about a score of operations, and the brass cartridge case attached to the base requires about sixteen, counting from the disc of sheet brass to the finished article. Then there is the fuse, the delicacy of the work in which resembles watch-making. Altogether, the shell is subjected to about forty inspections, and may be rejected at any stage.

After a shell has survived this ordeal it ought to be, one would think, perfect; but a test shell is taken from every 120, and actually fired from a gun into a bank of sand. It is then again examined, and if the contour about the powder pocket is expanded, away goes the whole batch, because if they were fired the grooving might be torn out of the gun. Perhaps the most striking illustration of the minute care exercised in projectile making is that every shell is weighed over and over again. If you produce an eighteen-pounder high-explosive shell, it must be only a few drachms over or under its normal weight; otherwise it is rejected.

Motor Boat Warfare

Motor boats have already taken a great part in the present war, and armored motor boats, mounted with a number of machine guns or a quick-firer or two, have patrolled up and down the Vistula, Danube, and other rivers, and have served to help the soldiers in their attempts to cross. Although the British Motor Boat Reserve has placed a large number of boats at the use of the Admiralty, who have used them along the coasts for scouting, yet the fighting powers of motor boats have practically only been brought into play in France and Russia, especially the latter country.

Question of Japanese Aid In Balkans To Be Re-opened

Do Recent Developments Justify Change in Japan's Decision Not to Lend Armies to Her Allies

TOKIO, Wednesday, Oct. 13—Bulgaria's participation in the war and advices received here from London that British opinion, in some quarters at least, favors the despatch of Japanese troops to the Balkans have suddenly reopened the question in Tokio of what Japan's future course will be.

There is a strong impression here that the return from Paris to-day of Baron Kikujiro Ishii, the recently-appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs and previously Ambassador to France, is likely to be followed by a full reconsideration of the international situation, with special references to Japan's policy for the preservation of her own permanent interests.

Another factor is arousing discussion on this subject is the arrival of Hugues Le Roux, editor of the Paris Matin, who, although without official mission, comes, it is understood, with introductions from and the approvation of M. Delcasse, the French Foreign Minister, to discuss military questions with prominent Japanese, with a view to determining whether the latest developments justify a change in Japan's decision not to send an army to aid her allies, and the likelihood of despatching troops to the Balkan theatre.

BRITISH "SUBS" IN BALTIC DISRUPT GERMAN TRAFFIC

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The German steamer Nicomedia, 4,891 gross tons, of the Hamburg-American Line, was sunk in the Baltic yesterday by the British submarine E-19, according to a despatch from Kalmar, Sweden. The Nicomedia was bound from a Swedish port for Hamburg with 6,800 tons of iron ore, and was sunk off the southern point of Oland, a Swedish island, which Kalmar Sound separates from the mainland.

The crew was given 15 minutes to take to the boats, and it is reported that all landed safely.

A despatch to Reuter's from Karlskrona, Sweden, says that the German steamer Direktor-Reppenhagen, 1,683 tons, of Stettin, has been torpedoed by a British submarine. The fate of the crew is not known.

Thirty-four men, the crew of the Hamburg collier Gutrune, have been landed at Trelleborg, Sweden. Their ship was torpedoed yesterday off Memland. The German ore steamer Germania, says a Copenhagen despatch, was fired upon by a submarine and was beached to avoid sinking. The crew was saved.

On the other side of the ledger of the underseas warfare, the British steamer Halizones, 5,093 tons gross, has been sunk, without loss of life.

Baltic Traffic Disorganised.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 12.—The Politiken says that British submarines in the Baltic Sea are causing the German mercantile fleet great losses.

"Five steamers are now known to have been sunk," says the newspaper. "How many British submarines have got through the narrow sound is not known, but it is evident that Germany was too late in laying the Baltic mine fields."

A WELSH OPTIMIST

Comment Canada as Economic Conditions Improved by the War.

The statement on Friday of Mr. D. A. Thomas, the Welsh captain of industry, who is in America as the representative of Mr. Lloyd George, respecting Canada's economic condition, might well have been incorporated in the recent "Prosperity Edition" of the Free Press, as it agrees with all the arguments there used.

Mr. Thomas declares that Canada's economic condition was "much better than it there had been no war, since $250,000,000 worth of orders of various sorts for war supplies had been placed in this country" from abroad.

As to the conditions following the declaration of peace, Mr. Thomas was also most optimistic. Within a year or two after the war, as after the Franco-Prussian conflict he thought there would come the greatest trade boom of several generations.

In Canada with the cessation of munition manufacture and war orders, there might be a year of depression, to be followed by great prosperity, since the Dominion would be called upon to supply Europe, while her trade, especially with Great Britain and Russia, was certain to greatly increase. In addition to this the heavy taxation caused by war expenses would cause immense emigration to Canada, which within fifteen years or so would possibly double the population.

Even the chronic optimism of The Free Press will not take it quite that far, but we do believe that, just as it adjusted itself to the new conditions set up by the war, Canada will readjust itself to the situation that will arise when the war is over. Even now, Canada should be making arrangements for an immigration propaganda similar to that carried out by Clifford Sifton under the Laurier government, in order that, when the right moment arrives, the machinery may be set in full motion without the slightest delay.—Ottawa Free Press.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The double skirt has invaded every department of dress. It differs somewhat from the tunic of last year, but suggests it strongly.

In the little frock shown in this illustration we have a surplice closing for the blouse, with a small shield and a wide collar at the neck. These may be omitted when a dressy effect is desired, or separate guimpes may be worn instead.

The sleeves are made full length, plain at the shoulder and somewhat puffed at the wrist. They may be shortened when desired and a wide cuff used as a finish.

The skirt is straight and has little fulness. Over it hangs the tunic, which is of circular cut and which has the lower edge perforated for scallops. Instead of these the straight edge may be used if preferred. Tunic and skirt are attached to the waist of the blouse beneath a wide flat belt.

In making these little dresses we have a chance to make use of combinations of material which are very attractive and can introduce panels, stripes, checks and contrasting plain colors. The style is also pretty for a party dress and the tunic may then be of embroidered flouncing, while plain material is used for waist and underskirt.

The dress pattern, No. 7,328 is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires, for waist and tunic, 1⅞ yards of 36 inch material, with 1⅛ yards of 36 inch striped goods and ⅝ yard of 36 inch lawn for collar.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents or 2 for 25c.

Bulgars Have Struck Serbia At Three Points

LONDON, Oct. 12—Bulgarian armies crossed into Serbian territory at three points yesterday. Two of them are evidently destined to march on Nish, the present capital, while the third, having entered Serbia farther to the north, is aiming to cut the Orient railway at Paratchin, thus leaving the forces resisting the German invasion without a line for supplies.

Semendria, on the Danube, was captured by the Germans yesterday. Both the town and the fortress were taken after bitter fighting on the part of the Serbs, who held out as long as military discretion would permit.

In addition to the capture of Semendria, the Berlin War Office announces that the Austro-German armies of invasion are everywhere making favorable progress. News from other sources, however indicate that at some points the invaders are being held up by the Serbs, who are fighting with their traditional heroism. The advance of the German army which has sought to cross the Drina, on the western side of Serbia, seems to be especially slow.

Given His Passports.

The Foreign Office to-day handed the Bulgarian Minister to London his passports, and announcement was made that all diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Bulgaria have been broken off.

The Serbian Legation in London received to-day the following telegram from Nish:

"Last night Bulgarians began an attack in the direction of Vlasotince. All attacks up to the present have been repulsed decisively."

An Athens despatch contained the news that the Bulgars have also begun attacks in the direction of Zaitcar and Kniazevac. Kniazevac is about 25 miles north-east of Nish. Zaitcar, farther to the north-east, is 35 miles due east of Paratschin.

The Daily Telegraph's Bucharest correspondent sends the news that the Bulgarians have captured the river steamship Belgrade, carrying munitions to Serbia. Three other munition ships are reported to have taken refuge in the Roumanian port of Carabia. The correspondent adds that Prince Hohenlohe, the special envoy of the Kaiser, has arrived in Bucharest, and is staying at the Palace Hotel.

The Kaiser at Belgrade.

Berlin advices say that the Kaiser reached the Serbian front yesterday, and after a conference with Field Marshal von Mackensen and his staff crossed the Danube and entered Belgrade.

The Bulgarian plan of invasion as it is revealed in to-day's news contains but one surprise. That surprise is to be found in the absence of any attacks along the extreme south-eastern boundary of Serbia, toward Kepu, for instance, where the Salonique-Nish railway lies closer to the Bulgarian line than in any other vicinity.

A Handfu'

On a recent Sunday, outside a Scotch coast church, a father of four encountered his sister-in-law, shepherding her flock of three. They joined forces, and subsequently filled a front gallery pew to the great edification of worshippers holding a firm belief in the nobility of the "old-fashioned family." But the attention of the sister-in-law was seriously distracted from the service by the whispered remark of a motherly buddy in an adjacent pew. "Aye, three times twins an' an odd yin. She looks kin' o' licht for sic a handfu'." "She does that, but the Lord gives us strength for the burden he lays upon us," said a pious neighbour.

Savagely the cabman had toiled at his task, but it had ended at last. Then Mrs. Buchanan came out of the house and eyed her family's cherished belongings for a moment before entering the vehicle. "Sure you've got everything, ma'am?" asked the cabbie, with sarcastic politeness. "Yes, that's all," was the reply. The cabman glanced back at the house as he remarker, "Seems a pity, don't it, to leave the doorstep?"

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headaches, dizziness, your stomach sours, or is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

ALL CHILDREN LOVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give it when Feverish, Cross, Bilious, for bad Breath or Sour Stomach.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food, and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

GREEK RESERVISTS HALTED IN VOYAGE

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The steamship Vasileffs Constantinos, biggest, newest and swiftest of the fleet of the Great Line, known officially as the National Steam Navigation Company, Limited, of Greece sailed at 9 o'clock this morning from its Jersey City pier, deliriously cheered by a throng of Greeks, men and women, who had assembled to see their compatriots, more than 2,000 reservists, depart for enlistment in the Greek army. Four hours later the liner returned to Quarantine and anchored. Capt. Paleologus said all that he knew about his recall to port was that he had received a wireless message from his agents here to come back.

When the Constantinos received the wireless she was about twenty miles off Sandy Hook, and her skipper immediately headed back over his course, much to the surprise of the reservists, who did not learn until after the ship had anchored that she had come back under orders from the line.

Midolin Galanos, agent of the line, said he was as much in the dark as to the reason for the ship's recall as the reporters who asked him about it. He conjectured that the uncertainty of the situation in Greece doubtless had something to do with the action af the Greek Government in requesting the head of the line in Athens to send a peremptory order to hold the Constantinos and the reservists here for the present. Nearly all the reservists are from places outside the city. Until the local agents hear from the main office at Athens the ship will stay at anchor in Quarantine.

Russian Successes All Along The Line

British Subs Are Active In The Baltic Sea

Russians Continue Their Gains At Many Points in the East

Fresh Successes by the Czar's Troops Reported---Germans Driven Back in Disorder in the the Pripet River District While Further South Russians Are Driving the Austrians Before Them--The Latter Fighting Irregularly

NOT MUCH CHANGE ON WESTERN FRONT

PETROGRAD, Oct. 14.—Continued Russian successes all along the German and Austrian lines from the Dvinsk region into Galicia were claimed by the War Office here to-day. All German attacks west of Ilukst, in the Dvinsk territory have been repulsed, said the statement. The Czar's forces were said to have occupied the heights northwest of Ilukst and to have beaten back a German attempt to recapture them. From the country south of Pripet River on the left bank of the Styr and north of Rafalovka, the Germans have been driven in disorder it was stated. Reference was made to the capture of several villages with several hundred German prisoners and a number of guns. Following up the earlier Galician successes the Russians were said to have occupied various important positions [illegible] be driving the Austrians before them. The latter were described as fighting irregularly."

PARIS (French Official) Oct. 14.—Violent artillery fighting here and there throughout the Artois region continued all of Wednesday night, said the official statement issued here to-day. Northwest of Hill No. 140 between Souchez and Givenchy there were fierce trench encounters with bombs and torpedoes. In the Champagne region about Lihons suffocating shells were thrown into the French lines. Everywhere the Germans attacked, the statement said, the French guns answered hotly and all Gallic positions were held. A German attack was reported repulsed west of Tahure. Continued cannonading was in progress it was stated on both sides between Reillon and Leintrey.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Bitter denunciation of the Government's delay in providing better defense against aerial attacks filled the London newspapers this afternoon as a sequel to Wednesday night's Zeppelin raid in which eight persons were known to have been killed and thirty-four injured.

"Our shuttered window fronts," said the Globe, "may be forgiven if they wonder how long this sort of thing will be allowed to go on without effective measures to check it. We have a new scheme of defence, but it did not defend us. The plain fact is that apart from wind and weather, London has no adequate protection against Zeppelins."

"Our air defences," said the Standard, "clearly are not yet up to the mark. As a spectacle the thing was disappointing. The Drury Lane Theatre has often done better."

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey's remark of August 26 that the freedom of the seas was "a debateable matter," was reiterated in the House of Commons to-day by Hon. Secretary Lord Robert Cecil, who meant, he added "exactly what I said." Sir Edward's comment was in answer to the German Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg's declaration that it was for the freedom of the seas that Germany was fighting, and the British Minister's expression of a willingness to discuss the matter caused much remark.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The United States' formal recognition of the Carranza Government in Mexico is expected to-day. The proclamation notifying the world of this governments action was drafted and Secretary of State Lansing planned to issue it during the day.

BUCHAREST, via London, Oct. 14.—Bulgarian cavalry and German and Austrian troops were concentrated to-day at Vidin on the Bulgarian bank of the Danube opposite Rumania, apparently ready for offensive or defensive against Rumania, or possibly to meet the Russian forces reported on their way across Rumania to help the Serbians.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Because of Greece's refusal to help Serbia against Bulgaria, Serbia was arranging to-day to publish the Serbian-Greek treaty of alliance and to lay all documents connected with it before the Allies and neutrals.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 14.—Of twenty-seven ora steamers due at Stockholm only ten had arrived to-day. It was feared British submarines had destroyed the others.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Aesolutions were adopted this afternoon before a mass meeting presided over by Lord Willoughby de Brok, at the Canada street hotel, calling on the Government to announce formally a policy of reprisal through British or French aeroplane raids on German towns. "Raid for raid," as the resolutions expressed it.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—"Italy will participate fully in Allies' plans," declared Premier Viviani, speaking in the Senate to-day.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Russian troops' co-operation with other Allied forces in the Balkans was promised by Foreign Minister Grey in the House of Commons this afternoon, "the moment they are available." It was supposed he meant the moment the road is available for getting the Russians to the fighting zone.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Tremendous battle raged from the North Sea south to Arras to-day according to Rotterdam advices.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Count De Lesfargue resigned to-day as Bulgarian Consul here because he objects to Bulgaria's war policy.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Of the Bulgarian campaign nothing new has been received since Nish reported the repulse of the invaders; while the movements of the Anglo-French and Russian forces have thus far been kept from the knowledge of the public. The Russians have no easy task before them if they intend to land in Bulgaria. Varna and the other Bulgarian ports on the Black Sea, where a landing might be made, have been strongly fortified under the direction of German officers and are protected by mine fields.

The Russians could sail down the Danube, as that is an international waterway, but it is doubtful if they have the necessary transport; while to come through Roumania would require the consent of the Government of that country, which, although considered friendly to the Entente powers, might not wish to risk the displeasure of Germany.

In the meantime the allies are closely watching developments in the internal situation in Bulgaria, where many of the people are averse to fighting against the allies, particularly Russia. It is thought that the landing of Russians in Bulgaria might result in a change in the policy of that country, even thus late in the day.

ATHENS, Wednesday—"Communications have been cut between Nish and Trakanva for a distance of five miles." Fifty miles south of Nish on the trunk line between Belgrade and Saloniks the possession of which is the immediate objective of Serbia's foe, is the town of Vranya, which is probably the one referred to in the despatch.

Athens also says that General Sarrail, Commander-in-Chief of the French forces in the Orient, who arrived in Saloniks Tuesday, will take command of the expeditionary army in the Balkans.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—A general attack by the British along almost the whole front from Ypres to Loos, and the bombardment of the Belgian coast, is reported in the official statement of to-day. All attacks of the British are said to have failed.

ALD. G. WALTER GREEN

Chairman of the Board of Works who to-day announced himself as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1916.

Peterborough Battalion Was Well Advertised In Norwood Yesterday

Brought the Call of King and Country Before Many Young Men---Band and Drill Squad Made Great Impression--Recruits Coming In.

The Band and Physical Drill Squad of the Peterborough Battalion certainly did their bit towards stimulating recruiting during their visit to the Norwood Fair yesterday. Not satisfied with their work at the Fair Grounds the boys staged an impromptu recruiting rally on the main street in the evening that was a hummer from start to finish. The proceedings opened with a concert on the band stand in front of the Village Hall, and a big crowd quickly gathered. The little recruiting Sergeant, Master Percy Luther recited "Come on, Lads, and Do Your Bit," and "What Will You Do?" delighting the crowd. Corp. Jay contributed a solo, and Bandsman B. Dyer followed with another, while the chorus was heard to advantage in "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," "Fall In and Follow Me," "Tipperary" and a half dozen more.

"When the Roll is Called in Berlin" was a favourite, and the chorus came strong on "Enlist, Enlist," sung to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

Following this concert the Squad marched up street and held another session, at which a few new parodies made their appearance. Patriotic airs were rendered with a will, and the whole performance should help to bring to the local battalion some fine recruits from the Norwood district. It was rollicking, good-natured fun and while the men had a fine time their conduct was exemplary through it all. There was not the least sign of rowdyism or any desire to interfere with others and the boys made many friends for themselves and the Peterborough Battalion by their splendid behaviour.

The boys in the ranks of the Peterborough Battalion are as proud as peacocks over their band—"Oh that Band," as the physical drill squad affectionately call them. And they have reason to be proud. Yesterday, at Norwood, the Band rendered a splendid programme during the Fair, and their playing won favourable comment everywhere. The boys of the Battalion appreciate their fine playing, and they also appreciate the fact that they are ready to play at all times—in fact most of them would just as soon play as eat. Last night, while the crowd was waiting at the station for the train, eight or nine of the bandsmen contributed an impromptu programme of popular airs that added to the hilarity of the occasion. Even Bandmaster Hughes took a hand in the fun, and the crowd was half sorry when the train finally pulled in. Citizens of Norwood were quite willing to agree with the boys in the drill squad that "that band is some band."

Lt.-Col. Johnston, Lieut. Stewart, and Sergt. Major Miller accompanied the band and physical drill squad to Norwood, yesterday. They were not idle either and many young men had the path of duty pointed out to them during the afternoon. A good response from the Norwood district is looked for. So far Norwood has not a very large representation in the Peterborough Battalion, falling behind Lakefield, Keene and Millbrook in that respect. Yesterday's demonstration should help to improve matters.

The Physical Drill Squad of the Peterborough Battalion, which has been a feature of the different Fairs in the district, winding up at Norwood, yesterday, was trained by Sergt. F. Oxley of No. 3 Platoon, and is composed of the following non-commissioned officers and men: Sergt. W. Jones, Lance-Sergt. H. Freeman, Corp. H. Wood, Corp. L. McIntosh, Corp. W. Theobald, Corp. W. Lewington, Corp. E. P. Clarke, Corp. Jay Lance-Corp. E. Laing, Lance Corp. A. Tobin, Ptes. S. McCabe, J. Vollans, T. Smith, P. Smith, Ebbs, Scullie, F. Baumer, G. Milton, E. King, A. Rutter, R. Willshaw, Laing, McGroarty, and H. White.

Capt. Ponton's story of the remark made by the boys at the front, "I believe there's a war on," caught on with the Peterborough soldiers. "I believe there's a war on," was heard frequently in Norwood, yesterday.

A typographical error in a letter published by the Examiner the other day from Pte. R. H. Muir made the communication read as if he had received three dollars in the trenches. Three letters is what Pte. Muir's letter stated he received.

A card from Driver Martin Kennally of the mechanical transport section of the Canadian Army Service Corps, gives the information that his unit has already sailed for the old country. The card was written on the steamer as it passed down the St. Lawrence.

All the Salvation Army players in the Peterborough battalion band are being given leave of absence, to attend the congress in Toronto at the end of this week. There will be a massed band concert, in which all the Salvation Army musicians now in training for active service will take part.

There are now eleven pairs of brothers in the Peterborough Battalion, John and Edward Harran, corner of Charlotte and George streets, have been taken on the strength of the battalion.

HOTEL BARS TO CLOSE AT 8 P.M. DURING WEEK

Change in the Hours of Sale Announced by Premier Hearst Yesterday After a Protracted Meeting of the Cabinet.

STARTS ON NOVEMBER 1st

TORONTO, Oct. 14—On and after November first next every licensed bar in the Province of Ontario must be closed at 8 o'clock in the evening, except on Saturday, when they will be closed at 7 o'clock as at present. The announcement was made jointly late last evening by Hon. W. H. Hearst and Chairman Flavelle, of the License Board, the latter making public the order and the Prime Minister its approval by the Government. This was immediately after a meeting of the Cabinet, which continued until long after the Parliament Buildings had been closed for the day.

The License Board and the Government were in accord in their reasons for taking action, first, that the enormous financial drain upon the Empire by reason of the war made it a patriotic duty incumbent upon every citizen to conserve in every possible way the national resources, and, second, in the need during the crisis of not only thrift and economy, but physical and mental fitness, fitness on the part of the soldier and upon the part of the people generally.

The order, as was expected, makes no discrimination against soldiers, and, according to the Prime Minister, meets with the full approval of Gen. Sir Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia.

Since the matter of license restriction was first taken up and considered by the License Board, widely differing views on the subject have been laid before the commissioners and the Government. According to a statement made by Chairman Flavelle last night, the 8 o'clock order was the first made by the board—and the only one officially referred to—but it is generally understood that the board's first tentative suggestion was 7 o'clock closing. Before taking action, however, the Government received deputations from many interested bodies, temperance men and workers, the labour men opposing 7 o'clock closing on the ground that it not only would throw many men out of work but discriminated against the worker. Following the return from the North of Vice-Chairman Dingman and Commissioners Ayearst and Smith, the board went into the matter with all these arguments before them. Several counter-propositions, it is understood, were considered, more lenient treatment of the sale of beer, ales, etc., than strong liquors and earlier closing of the shops. The former would have proven difficult to enforce, while the board, it is said, felt that the shops, having been required to close at 7 o'clock by the Legislature last session, should be left alone for the present. The argument in favour of 6 o'clock closing of the shops was that it would stop the sale of liquor to women and girls after leaving work.

MANY HOTELS IN PROVINCE WILL PUT UP SHUTTERS

That is the Concensus of Opinion of Ontario Hotel-keepers in Regard to New Liquor Regulations —Mayors and Reeves Approve of Change

TEMPERANCE OPINION

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—That many of the hotels throughout Ontario will put up their shutters for good, is the concensus of opinions of Ontario bonifaces to-day when asked by the Toronto papers to state their views regarding the new regulations to close the bars at eight p.m. Several intimated definitely that they proposed to go out of business within a month or two.

The opinions of Mayors and Reeves of municipalities on the other hand generally supported the new restriction of hours as a move in the right direction.

Temperance leaders were practically unanimous in saying that it was good as far as it went, but should have been more drastic. The general opinion here is that while the eight o'clock closing rule was characterized by Chairman Flavelle as an experiment, it is hardly likely the government will ever extend the hours again.

ALDERMAN GREEN ANNOUNCES CANDIDATURE FOR THE MAYORALTY

Alderman G. Walter Green hereby announces himself as a candidate for the Maporalty of Peterborough for the year 1916, and, according to custom, 1917.

It may help the public to judge of Alderman Green's acknowledged qualification for the office of Mayor, by stating that he has been a careful and painstaking member of the City Council for three years. He has served on every committee, having been Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee in 1914; and is this year Chairman of the Board of Works.

Alderman Green adds to the qualifications of the office, by virtue of his municipal experiences, a successful business experience of thirty years, twenty of which have been passed in Peterborough. His early announcement of his candidature shows that he is willing to submit his qualification and his claims to the support of the ratepayers to the fullest investigation, indicating a confidence that the result will redound to his credit and strengthen his candidature for the Mayoralty of the good City of Peterborough.

DON'T FORGET; DON'T NEGLECT.

Don't forget that Saturday is Children's Aid Tag Day; and don't neglect to come abroad prepared to respond to the appeal that will be presented on behalf of so beneficent an organization. We have many demands upon us; but if we can't increase our doles, we must divide our doles, and keep the machinery of our social and community life moving. When we see children slaughtered by German cruelty; when we see so much mercy for the helpless killed in Europe, we must not neglect the neglected children, and must make up in greater mercy for the mercy denied the helpless and the defenceless. There are ten wards of the city, of the public, now in the Children's Shelter to be fed, clothed and cared for till foster homes open their merciful doors to them. When we think of the contrast between them and our own, well-housed, well-fed, and tenderly tended children, and think what we should feel if our own children were in such case, we cannot turn a deaf ear to the call that comes to us in the piping voices of neglected children, and in the voice and in the name of Him who blessed little children.

MEN THE GREAT NEED.

The arm chair critics have been telling us repeatedly that Germany and Austria are at the end of their financial, and food, and munitions resource. But their statements need constant amendment, for it is unfortunate that Germany's resources in these regards are still stronger than could be wished. We cannot therefore take comfort or place reliance upon the failure of Germany in these things. We must achieve the victory vi et armis. We must put more men vi et armis. We must put more men in the field, equipped with the maximum of munitions. We must not depend upon German exhaustion of resources. We must conquer by superior strength of men and more munitions. This indicates that the great need of the hour is men for the fighting line. We need them now to hasten the overthrow of the power of the Teutonic Allies, to shorten the period of tremendous sacrifice of human life and waste of money resources, and commercial and social disturbance. Every Canadian, every Peterborough man, added to the ranks, helps hasten the end of the war and the triumph of victory. Our governments can be depended upon for adequate munitions; but for an adequate supply of men we must depend upon the men themselves. Will you be one?

WORK OF THE RED CROSS.

Our readers are specially reminded of the meeting to be held in the Collegiate Hall to-morrow (Friday) night, to hear an address by Dr. Ryerson of Toronto, President of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Every reader is urged to read with care the effective announcement of this important meeting to be found on page 10 of our news columns.

Public interest and attendance at this meeting are important for two reasons. Its central object and meaning make appeal to our active sympathy in the noblest work this appalling war, has brought into organized existence. We send our soldiers to the front with heart-breaking willingness. We know that they will be exposed to the danger of dying nobly for their country. With that aspect of their peril we can do nothing. But we can do something for the relief of the suffering the other danger create, the suffering from wounds that are not fatal. To the relief of this suffering the work of the Red Cross is specially directed, and we should not rest indifferent nor neutral when we know that in the trenches; in the battlefield; in the hospitals, the brave boys we know and love are suffering from wounds their courage has invited; that their wounds cry out for help—for the dressings, etc., that we can, through the local branch of the Red Cross, supply in greater quantity than our noble younger have been doing.

The actual needs that appeal to Red Cross activity are one of the reasons we should attend the meeting on Friday night. The other or associated reason is that we shall hear at first hand of the needs of the great work, from one who has seen with his own eyes the conditions that create the need for our help; has felt with his own heart for the sufferings of the wounded soldiers, which we are called upon to help alleviate. We can help heal their wounds and restore them to the fighting line; for, in spite of their unsparings and sacrifices, the gallant men want to get back the moment they are fit. We can, therefore, at the same time, relieve suffering, help strengthen our armies, and help the achievement of victory. Remember the meeting in the Collegiate Hall on Friday night to be addressed by Dr. Ryerson, President of the Canadian Red Cross.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

Germany's moral responsibility, due to her bringing on this great war, and to her inexpressible savagery in conducting it, is increasing every day. To her conscienceless way of waging war upon women and children, and her ghastly outrages in Belgium, are added moral responsibility for the atrocities committed by the Turks on the Armenians and Christians generally in her empire. We expect a Christless nation like Turkey to have little love for Christians; but we did not expect a pretended Christian country like Germany, not only to ally herself with Turkey, but to give her lessons in the art of extirpating Christians and killing Christianity in her dominions. Germany's barbaric spirit has infected Turkey, and insofar as example can justify, has justified Turkey in committing the cruelties which the Moslem can logically regard as not being so bad when they are less bad than the atrocities committed by Germany in her way of waging war, and in the gratuitously ghastly outrages upon women, children and non-combatants in Belgium. Austria, too, has been an apt pupil of Germany, and the outrages she has committed on Serbians, with only limited opportunity, will be greatly added to, if the Austro-German invasion is allowed to succeed. German kultur of cruelty and outrage, aided by Austrian effort will make a shambles of Serbia worse, if possible, than has been made in Belgium. We have the testimony of an eye-witness, one of our own. Captain Fenton, just returned from the battle front, told us in the Armouries on Tuesday night ,that he had seen many mutilated children in Belgium; and if with his limited opportunities he saw so much, what would the story be if we could se the number in the whole of devastated Belgium.

We may verbally protest in the name of Christianity and humanity against these things; but the best protest is the protest of armed force. The conditions that have obtained and still obtain, and will continue in three countries if not prevented, can only be removed by crushing the evil at its fountain head; by breaking the spirit and strength of the German militarist, the source and devilish inspiration of the outrages that surpass all that primitive barbarism and savagery could have conceived or committed. The one way we Canadians can effectively protest is in adding to the strength of the forces that are combatting, in the name of liberty and humanity, those gigantic powers of evil. There is a call for every able-bodied and physically eligible Canadian to enter the ranks. If we neglect this, the responsibility for German, Austrian and Turkish atrocities comes back upon us. We virtually sanction, approve and permit what we can help prevent and do not help prevent. Let every eligible young man do a little thinking. It won't need much honest thinking, to provoke action.

Voice of The People

Dear Sir,—There may be difference of opinion as to the advisability of starting so much permanent improvements in the way of paving our streets; but there can be only one opinion as to the quality of the work done on Charlotte Street.

I have taken a keen interest along with others, in this work, as it was to our interest to do so, and from the start we could see nothing to complain of.

About the time of the World's Fair, in Chicago, pavement of this nature was in experimental stages. I can remember seeing several streets treated in that city about that time, heavy wagons were prohibited from using those streets, and they had to be continually kept watered in warm weather. At a great many places where excavations had been made for sewers and other similar work the pavement did not hold up.

Now, after seeing with what care and attention the foundation got, along with the character of the mixture, there is no danger of anything of that nature taking place on Charlotte Street. Some were inclined to think the work was delayed. No doubt some of the work would have been completed sooner if the weather was more favorable, but time is what this foundation wanted, and it was not rushed on that account.

The next cost is something new, and looks like the real goods, and gives the three applications an adhesive bond. The finish is not so much of a rubber nature that it was some years ago, and I believe not so liable to damage from heat or cold. The residents of Charlotte Street can rest assured that the Standard Paving Company have delivered the goods.

Charlotte Street Resident.

AUSTRIANS APPLY GERMAN SYSTEM OF ATROCITY IN SERBIA

The report of Serbia that the people have risen en masse to resist the Austro-German invasion is reasonably certain to prove true. The Serbian non-combatants know from horrible experience last year that their fate will be no worse if they resist to the death than if they surrender. There is in existence a report by Professor Reiss of the University of Lausanne on the Austrian atrocities in Serbia, which proves that neither age nor sex was a shield from the Austrian soldiery, and that deviltries were committed in Serbia far more dreadful than anything recorded in Belgium.

Professor Reiss is a Swiss scientist of repute, specializing in criminology. He went to Serbia at the invitation of the Government, with liberty to disinter the remains of victims, to photograph the bodies, to interrogate Austrian prisoners, and to carry out in general a scientific inquiry. He reports nothing but facts recorded or verified by himself. Here are some of the gruesome incidents related by him, many of them supported by the evidence of photographs:

"Near the Schtiplianz River the Austrians took prisoners about ten wounded men of the Third Supernumerary Regiment. The wounds of these men were dressed. When the Austrians found themselves obliged to leave their positions in consequence of an attack, they shot the wounded men in order not to let them be retaken alive by the Serbs. The wounded men were found with their wounds dressed, but dead."

"Corporal D. X. of the 28th Regiment of Landwehr deposes: At Chabaty the Austrians killed near the church more than sixty civilians, who had been previously shut up there. They were massacred with the bayonet to economise ammunition. The work was done by eight Hungarian soldiers. D. X. could not bear to see this sight and left the spot. The corpses remained on the spot for two days before being buried. Among the victims were old men and children. The order for the massacre was given by the General and the officers."

"The Hungarian Captain Baanai, of the 6th Regiment of Infantry, gave orders before crossing the frontier that everything living should be killed, from children of five to the oldest men. When the frontier had been crossed and the troops arrived at the first Serbian village the Captain gave orders that two houses should be burned and everyone killed, even the children in the cradle. About thirty women, children, and old men were taken prisoners and driven before the troops during the fight." The Austrian soldier who gave evidence saw these civilians being killed and wounded by the bullets of the two opposing forces.

"At Debritch, on the 16th and 17th of August, K. X. saw soldiers of the 37th Hungarian Regiment kill eleven or twelve children from six to twelve years of age with their bayonets. The order for the massacre was given by First Lieutenant Nagi. K. X. was fifty or forty yards from the soldiers who were carrying out the massacre. Lieut. Col. Piskor of the 16th Regiment passed by at this moment, and said to Nagi: "How can you be such swine?" The latter replied: "You can give orders to your own detachment, but not to mine. I have orders from my superiors."

The pamphlet is full of similar sworn statements and of incidents far more horrible than any recorded above, in which Serbian women were the victims. The mutilation of both men and women before they were killed was a common form of torture. Prof. Reiss, himself, opened one pit in which 102 peasants had been buried—many of them while still alive.

There is no good purpose to be served by a further recital of these horrors. They explain why the whole Serbian people have risen in arms. They battle, not for victory, but for self-preservation, for the lives of their children and the honour of their women. Even if the Allies fail to aid them with adequate military support they will fight on, preferring to die in the field rather than to surrender and trust to the tender mercies of captors with a record such as that of Austria.—The Globe.

German Chemists Find Outlet For Their Energies In Artificial Foods

LONDON, Oct. 13—Something instructive regarding the state of affairs in Germany always may be learned by a study of the advertisements in a widely circulated newspaper like the Berliner Tageblatt.

Taking them as they come:—Here a wholesale dealer in Frankfort-on-Main wants large consignments of wooden boot soles. He will pay cash for immediate delivery. The presumption is that leather soles are growing scarce.

The number of substitutes (ersatz) that are offered for sale is surprising. Artificial jam and marmalade are frequently advertised. A chemical factory in Dresden offers to supply fifteen tons of the stuff every week and seeks travellers to push it. But one is not told what the artificial jam is.

A substitute for whipped cream is advertised by another chemical factory in Berlin. The sale of the real cream is forbidden, and this enterprising chemist states that his "goods" have been tried in one of the largest and best cafes in Berlin "with brilliant success." He affirms there is neither cream, milk nor butter in his preparation, no chemicals, only pure natural products. The manufacture of it is "surprisingly simple and much cheaper than cream." He is doing a roaring business, he says, in cafes, hotels and restaurants and bakeries.

When the war began beans roasted in a certain way with coffee were largely used as a substitute for coffee. Making a virtue of necessity, the German dealers told how nervous persons might drink a decoction of bean coffee without ill effects. Now they have a substitute for bean coffee—beans being no longer procurable—called "Krieg-kornfranck," highly recommended as "going far" and being very cheap. "It is incumbent on us all to be economical," says the advertiser.

"Gondar" cheese, made of skimmed milk, is a substitute for real cheese. One dealer advertised fifty tons of it. It is "excellent for working people and the poorer classes generally, as it has quite a cheesy taste." A substitute for oil for polishing floors is not oil at all, but gives a high polish. The same dealer advertises substitutes for glycerine and other household oils.

One of the most pathetic of all advertisements is the cheap substitute for beer. And yet this is what "Kulmet" professes to be. There is no alcohol in it. It has a pleasant reminiscent taste of malt, and is the colour of the best Munich beer. When poured out it produces a beautiful white froth and "has already been sold in quantities to military canteens, hospitals and jails, also to military prisoners' camps, where it is highly esteemed."

String and cord in large quantities, made of paper, are extensively advertised. There is no more hemp or jute. And it is said of this paper cord that it is strong enough for tying up packages and for the ordinary purposes of the shopkeeper. The manufacturers also make packing canvas from paper, "which is easily handled and very cheap."

"Milk food" is advertised very largely. Whatever it may be, it is said to have been invented for the use of prisoners of war, and that an entire hundredweight may be had for $90, while a pound is enough to satisfy four to six men. Another class of the community for which "milk food" is recommended is "the half millian Russian harvestmen who half million Russian harvestmen who many since the outbreak of war."

GERMAN MENACE IN BRAZIL

Bishop Kinsolving Says in Address Brazilians are Alarmed.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Oct. 13.—German efforts to convert Brazil into a Teutonic colony were discussed today by the Right Rev. Lucien Lee Kinsolving, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Southern Brazil, who returned to the United States a few days ago and who is at the Laurel House here. In the course of an address on Brazil he said:

"I suppose you do not know that in every little town and hamlet in southern Brazil the German population have organized rifle clubs, so that they are armed with repeating rifles of large calibre. They are the best shots in the country, and the Government has made many efforts to break up these organizations, but without success. The newspapers of the country have been aware of this condition of affairs for several months, and the true Brazilian newspaper man is doing everything in his power to inform his countrymen of the German menace, and, at the same time, advise them of the sincere friendship of the United States toward all the South American Republics."

AUSTRALIANS MISS "MURPHY'S MULES"

There is many an Australian soldier at the front to-day who blesses "Murphy's mules." Murphy is, or was a hero of Anzac who never got mentioned in despatches, but he frequently figures in letters sent home by the Australians. His real name was Simpson, but for some unaccountable reason he got the nickname of "Murphy."

So many were the wounded who required to be taken to safety that Murphy commandeered a pair of mules, and officers connived at the "theft" when they learned the noble work he was doing.

He used to leave the animals just under the brow "Braund's Hill" and dash forward himself into the firing line to pick up the wounded.

Murphy's voice near them sounded like a voice from Heaven," the soldiers said.

Day after day he climbed the hill, smiling and chegry. But one day "Murphy's mules" did not come. The wounded cried out to the overworked stretcher bearers, "For God's sake send Murphy's mules."

The mules were found contentedly grazing in Shrapnel Valley, but Murphy had done his last climb.

"Where's Murphy?" cried one of the [illegible] Battalion.

The Connecting Link.

The connecting link between the merchant and his customer is the newspaper advertisement. In it the merchant may make plain to the housewife or the householder, the advantages of his store and the commodities he has to offer, in a way that would be impossible otherwise, because of the limited time, and the interruptions when the customer visits the store.

When people go out to shop, they want to get what they need, and go home again. They want the business news, but they want it when they have time at their disposal. You can give it to them through the advertising columns.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with no result.

Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of "GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS," and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old.

GRUESOME STORY OF ARMENIAN MASSACRE

Authentic Report of Committee of Prominent Americans—Women and Girls Are Brutally Murdered or Sold Into Slavery—Unspeakable Outrages Condoned by Germans.

Driven to Eat Grass.

"On the way," the report says, "we constantly met murdered men and youths. There were also women and girls killed near their husbands or sons. On the heights of the mountains and in the depths of the valley numbers of old men and babies were lying on the ground. During the night the caravan was not allowed to stop in the villages; they all had to sleep on the ground, exposed to the unwarrantable barbarism of the Turkish bands and peasants. The poor people found themselves in the necessity of eating grass. Among them is Mr. ——, president of the college of ——."

Quoting from a private letter the report states: "The Armenian population has been converted to Islamism; it was a means of escaping from the forced migration. Orthodox Turks are given the wives of absent husbands or their daughters. We have been told that, according to an order from the Padishah, every body must embrace Islamism.

"At Cesare, Sivas, Trebizond, Ordoo and many other towns and cities thousands have been persuaded by threats and abominable tortures to embrace the Mohammedan faith. In many cases the wives and daughters of Christians have been immediately compelled to marry Turks.

"All over the country leading Armenians have been shot or hanged. Leading merchants have been beggared and killed.

"Thirty thousand Mohammedan criminals have been released from jail and formed into bands under strict military discipline. One of the duties of these bands is to pillage villages and to rob and assassinate exiles.

"The Greek and Armenian Patriarchs have been refused audiences with the Ministers of the Turkish government.

"Foreign Ambassadors, among them the United States Ambassador, have been rebuffed and told what the Imperial government wishes to do with its subjects is none of their business. Turkish Ministers and other officials have repeatedly avowed the intention to smash the Christian nationalities and thus forever put an end to the Armenian question.

"In Constantinople we found," the report continues, "that the whole scheme of deportation is one of the central government and that no pressure from the embassies has been able to accomplish anything.

"We believe there is imminent danger of many of these people, whom we estimate for the Sivas, Erzeroom and Harpoot vilayets to be 600,000, starving to death on the road. They lack food for a few days but did not dare take much money, for if they did so it is doubtful whether they would be permitted to keep it.

"If it were simply a matter of being obliged to leave here to go somewhere else it would not be so bad, but everybody knows it is a case of going to one's death. If there was any doubt about it, it has been removed ties, aggregating several thousand people, from Erzeroom and Erzinggan. I have visited their encampment a number of times and talked with some of the people. They are, almost without exception, ragged filthy, hungry and ill. That is not surprising, in view of the fact that they have been on the road for nearly two months, with no change of clothing, no chance to wash, no shelter, and little to eat. The government has been giving them some scanty rations here. I watched them one time when their food was brought. Wild animals could not be worse. They rushed upon the guards who carried the food, and the guards beat them back with clubs, hitting hard enough to kill them sometimes. To watch them one could hardly believe that these people were human beings.

"As one walks through the camp, mothers offer their children and beg one to take them. In fact, the Turks have been taking their choice of these children and girls for slaves, or worse. In fact, they have even had their doctors there to examine the more likely girls and thus secure the best ones.

Most of the Men Killed.

"There are very few men among them, as most of them have been killed story of having been attacked and robbed by the Kurds. Most of them were attacked over and over again, and a great many of them, especially the men, were killed. Women and children were also killed. Many died of course, from sickness and exhaustion on the way, and there have been deaths each day that they have been here. Several different parties have arrived, and after remaining a day or two, have been pushed on with no apparent destination. Those who have reached here are only a small portion, however, of those who started. By continuing to drive these people on in this way it will be possible to dispose of all of them in a comparatively short time.

"Among those with whom I have talked were three sisters. They had been educated at —— and spoke excellent English. They said their family was the richest in —— and numbered twenty five when they left, but there were only fourteen survivors. The other eleven, including the husband of one of them and their old grandmother, had been butchered before their eyes by the Khurds. The oldest male survivor of the family was eight years of age. When they left —— they had money, horses and personal effects, but they had been robbed of everything, including even their clothing. They said some of them had been left absolutely naked and others with only a single garment. When they reached a village their gendarmes obtained clothes for them from some of the native women.

"Another girl with whom I talked is the daughter of the Protestant pastor of ——. She said every member of her family with her had been killed and she was left entirely alone. These and some others are a few survivors of the better class of people who have been exiled. They are being detained in an abandoned school house just outside of the town and no one is allowed to enter it. They said they practically were in prison, although they were allowed to go to a spring just outside the building. It was there I happened to see them. All the others are camped in a large open field with no protection at all from the sun.

"The conditions of these people indicates the fate of those who have left and are about to leave from here. I believe nothing has been heard from any of them as yet and probably very little will be heard. The system that is being followed seems to be to have bands of Kurds awaiting them on the road to kill the men especially and incidentally some of the others. The entire movement seems to be the most thoroughly organized and effective massacre this country has even seen.

"Not many men have been spared, however, to accompany those who are being sent into exile, for a more prompt and sure method has been used to dispose of them. Several thousand Armenian men have been arrested during the last few weeks. These have been put in prison, and each time that several hundred had been gathered up in that way they were sent away during the night. The first lot were sent away during the night of June 23. Among them were some of the professors in the American College and other prominent Armenians, including the Prelate of the Armenian Gregorian Church. There have been frequent rumours that all of these were killed, and there is little doubt that they were.

"All Armenian soldiers likewise have been sent away in the same manner. They have been arrested and confined in a building at one end of the town. No distinction has been made between those who had paid their military exemption tax and those who had not. Their money was accepted and then they were arrested and sent off with the others. It was said that they were to go somewhere to work on the roads, but no one had heard from them, and that is undoubtedly false.

Shot Down in Groups.

"The fate of all the others has been pretty well established by reliable reports of a similar occurrence on Wednesday, July 7. On Monday many were arrested both at —— and —— and put in prison. At daybreak Tuesday morning they were taken out and made to march toward an almost uninhabited mountain. They were about eight hundred in all, and they were tied together in groups of fourteen each. That afternoon arrived in a small Kurdish village, where they were kept overnight in the mosque and other buildings. During all this time they were without food or water. All their money and much of their clothing had been taken from them.

"On Wednesday morning they were taken to a valley a few hours distant, where they were all made to sit down. Then the gendarmes began shooting them, until they had killed nearly all of them. Some who had not been killed by bullets were then dispoed of with knives and bayonets. A few succeeded in breaking the rope with which they were tied to their companions and running away, but most of these were pursued and killed. A few succeeded in getting away, probably not more than two or three. Among those who were killed was the treasurer of the American College. Many other estimable men were among the number. No charge of any kind had ever been made against any of these men. They were simply arrested and killed as part of the general plant to dispose of the Armenian race.

"Last night several hundred more men, including both men arrested by the civil authorities and those enrolled as soldiers, were taken in a different direction and murdered in a similar manner. It is said this happened at a place not two hours distant from here. I shall ride out that way some day when things become a little quieter and try to verify it for myself.

"The same thing has been done systematically in the villages. A few weeks ago about three hundred men were gathered together at Hchma and Habossi, two villages four and five hours' distant from here, and then taken up into the mountains and massacred. This seems to be fully established. Many women from those villages have been here since and told about it. There have been rumours of similar occurrences in other places.

"There seems to be a definite plan to dispose of all the Armenian men, but after the departure of the families during the first few days of the enforcement of the order it was announced that women and children with no men in the amily might remain here for the present, and many hoped the worst was over. The American missionaries began considering plans to aid the women and children who would be left here with no means of support. It was thought that perhaps an orphanage could be opened to care for some of the children, and especially those who had been born in America and then brought here by their parents, and also those who belonged to parents who had been connected in some way with the American mission and schools. There would be plenty of opportunity, although there might not be sufficient means, to care for children who reached here with the exiles fro mother vilayets, and whose parents had died here on the way. I went to see the Vali about this matter yesterday and was met with a flat refusal. He said we could id these people if we wished to do so, but the government was establishing orphanages for the children and we could not undertake any work of that nature. An hour after I left the Vali the announcement was made that all the Armenians remaining here, including women and children, must leave on July 13."

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Modes of Today)

A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.

Another Remarkable Operation Performed

PARIS, Oct. 14.—An operation, unparalleled in surgical practice, for the removal of the splinter of a shell embedded the whole width of the vertebral canal, and the suturing of the completely severed spinal cord, has been successfully performed by Dr. Emil Giron.

In communicating the details of his achievement to the Academy of Medicine, Dr. Girou said he had undertaken the operation when the man apparently was dying, and that it had resulted in a manner exceeding his greatest hopes. The patient, Dr Girou said, was now able to move his legs, his sensory powers were gradually returning, and the wound, which ordinarily should have killed the man, was healing. The patient, the doctor added, was now entirely without fever.

It Pays to Cook with Crisco

It pays in money, because Crisco costs but half as much as butter and less even than the better grades of lard—yet it is as good for cooking as the best of creamery butter.

CRISCO
For Frying For Shortening For Cake Making

It pays in satisfaction, because Crisco gives better-tasting, more easily digested foods than lard can give. This economy of the digestion is one that cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents.

It pays in convenience, because Crisco will not "spoil", but will remain fresh and pure as long as you will need to keep it.

PILES FOR FIFTEEN YEARS

Cured by Zam Buk

To those who suffer from this painful malady the following letters will be of deep interest. Mr. J. McEwen of Dundas, Ont., writes: "For fifteen years I suffered with piles and could get no permanent cure until I tried Zam Buk. After having given Zam-Buk a fair trial I found I was getting better, and in the end it completely cured me."

Mr. James Ruddy of Killaloe, Ont., says: "I suffered greatly from piles. The pain from these, as anyone who suffers from them will know, was at times almost unbearable. I tried first one remedy and then another, but all without effect. The piles still continued as bad as ever. I heard about Zam Buk and commenced with the treatment. To my great joy, after perseverance, I obtained relief from the agonizing pain of the piles. Having been cured by Zam-Buk I heartily recommend the balm to all sufferers from piles."

Why not end your suffering? Take the advice of the hundreds who have done so and give Zam Buk a fair trial. This marvellous remedy quickly relieves the suffering, it soothes and heals the inflamed, irritated hemorrhoid veins and perseverance with Zam-Buk effects permanent cures.

SINGLE TAX ADVOCATE DELIVERS INTERESTING ADDRESS TO THE BOARD OF TRADE

Frederick J. Dixon is of the Opinion That it is Not So Much a Question of Getting the People Back to the Land as of Getting the Land Back to the People—The Absentee Land-owner—Fined For Improvements.

"The philosophy of a great many seems to be, something for nothing but if some get something for nothing, others must get nothing for something." The speaker was Mr. Frederick J. Dixon, Independent Progressive member of the Manitoba Legislature for Centre Winnipeg, who addressed the Board of Trade at a luncheon that was held last evening. Mr. Dixon's subject, "Taxation Reform, What It Is, Why We Need It," is one which the people from one end of the Dominion to the other are interested, particularly now that there must be some fair basis whereby the great sums required for war purposes shall be raised. The speaker is one of many who has made a study of the single tax system, and is therefore in a position to discuss the subject intelligently.

Mr. Dixon in his opening remarks said that the subject was too large to cover thoroughly in an address of half an hour, but he would first give a brief outline of "Why We Need Tax Reform," and the different methods of single tax with illustrations as to how it was working out in western provinces—the movement in the west and the significance of these movements.

Why It is Needed.

"Why do we need tax reform? If we looked over Canada today we could see many things much must be changed before we could have an ideal democracy. There must be equal privileges for all and special privileges for none. There seemed to be too much of the philosophy to get something for nothing, but it some get something for nothing others must get nothing for something.

All remembered the conditions in Canada last spring, and of the meeting of the Mayors of the cities of Canada in Ottawa when the question of unemployment was discussed. At that time it was estimated that there were 70,000 unemployed in the Dominion of Canada. While there were special privileges and uncultured land there would be unemployment. And there was the great cry, "Back to the land." In the opinion of the speaker it was not so much the question of getting the people back to the land but of getting the land back to the people.

Look at the conditions in the prairie provinces, said the speaker. In those provinces there were 153,000,000 acres of land which could be cultivated. Of that area 100,000,000 acres were in the hands of speculators. Before the people could be got back to the land it must be taken out of the hands of the speculators. In the prairie provinces one-third of this land was held by absentee speculators, in many cases men who had never seen the land they owned, but had made the purchase upon the recommendation of some land salesmen and they proposed to hold it until it became more valuable. Should therefore the man who did the most for his community be punished for being industrious? This was the case in most of the systems of taxation as were followed in the eastern provinces and many places yet in the west. That was, taxation on improvements and not on land values. The man who was doing the least for his community holding the land title, not even residing upon it, and expecting to reap the benefit of the industry of those who were there and making the land more valuable was rewarded by our present system of taxation. The values attached to the lands were increased by the increase in population and the industry of those in the community. The absentee speculators reaped the benefits but did not even pay towards the Federal revenue. The absentee land owner living outside the country did not pay one red cent of Federal taxation. Could it be wondered at that the men who lived on their land in the community should decide that those who were absent, yet benefitting, should have to pay?

Fined For Improvements.

"The man who uses his land is punished by our system of taxation today. It would seem peculiar to anyone making a visit from another planet to-day to see a man who improved his land, by even the erection of a box factory, and that he should be punished for being industrious and building up his community." And he would be punished by the present system of taxation." It was a system which said, "The less you do for the community, the more it will do for you."

Mr. Dixon took as an illustration police conditions. In Winnipeg a man who was convicted of having been drunk in a public place was fined three dollars and costs. Yet if this man were industrious and remained at home and improved his residence he would be fined every year in taxes.

Then business men were wanted, yet before a man commenced business the City Fathers would get together and ask him to pay for the privilege of giving the people what they wanted. Men were being penalized for being industrious. The present system of taxation was also encouraging greed. It paid better now to buy land and hold it without improving it. This was in many cases the cause of city debts. Sewers and improvements must be stretched for miles to serve people who were scattered over miles of the city, the land between those resident there being held by the non-resident speculators, while this same unimproved land was increasing in value by the work of those resident in the community. A man should be taxed according to what he got from the community and by taxation on land values this was in the opinion of the speaker, the system to accept to accomplish this.

Considering conditions in the west. Land had been boosted so high there that it had reached a point where no man could buy it and start a business by which he could ever hope to pay for it in a lifetime. There were now in the west, in places where the single tax system had been adopted, thousands of men who had formerly made their money out of land boosting, who had now left the real estate business and gone into some business or other occupation where they would be of some use to society.

Mr. Dixon believed in the single tax system for both Municipal and Federal purposes, but he thought it should be local option and that the people should have an opportunity to say what system they wished.

In the rural districts in provinces west of Ontario, the municipal revenue was raised on land values. Single tax and farmers were not taxed because they had improved their property. None of the cities east of Alberta had succeeded in adopting the system entirely, but it was coming.

The speaker quoted Vancouver as an example of the success of the single tax system, credited the impetus to building in the years 1910 and 1911 to the adoption of this system. Vancouver did not have a by-law which fixed their system, but the City Council passed a new by-law every year. In this way the people had local option as to their system of taxation.

In the province of Alberta the system was compulsory rather than arbitrary. Edmonton was the first city there to adopt the system. This was in 1904. One result was that the Hudson Bay Company which owned about ten acres in the centre of Edmonton found that it had to sell some of it because the taxes were too high to pay and still hope to make much profit on the deal. Now a great part of that property was built upon. Munson, Alta., was quoted as being a place where formerly the poor man was unable to buy a lot, so high was the price, but since the single tax system had been adopted the prices had decreased by two thirds. Now a lot could be bought in Munson, Alta., and a house built upon it for the price which formerly was asked for the lot alone.

Alberta Collects Surtax.

In Alberta there was also a surtax imposed by the government of 10 mills on men holding land for speculation. The Provincial Government also collected another tax in Alberta. This was a tax of five per cent. on the profit a man made when he sold his land. It was held there that as a man's property was increased in value by the expenditure of public money, guarantee of railway bonds, etc., he should pay a percentage of his profit.

In conclusion the speaker said it had been a satisfatcory system where it had been adopted and that it was continually growing in favour. Premier Sifton of Alberta was a very strong advocate of the system. Mr. Dixon claimed to be a follower of the Loyd George system which had been adopted in England. What single taxers asked was that the people be given local option in taxation and the single tax system could be tried.

Questions Answered.

Questions from his hearers were invited and many of those present availed themselves of the opportunity to have answered, questions on this subject which had puzzled them.

A question was asked, if two men each had a lot of equal value and the more wealthy of the two built a fine sky scraper and the other built only a modest building, should the man who erected the modest building be taxed the same as the other who was able to erect a sky scraper. The answer was that this brought them to the two schools, "which would tax a man acording to his ability to pay," and "which would tax a man according to what benefit he got from the community." The former was, in the opinion of the speaker, "The Robin Hood system." He believed that it should be on the basis that a man paid to the municipality according to what benefit he got from the municipality. The land registered the benefit a man got from the community. A man should be allowed to pay for his opportunity and then go ahead and make the best of it and should not be taxed for making the best of his opportunity.

To another question as to whether everyone in the city should be called upon to pay for added fire protection and police protection for the large buildings, the answer came back to the reflection in the value of the land. If there was added police and fire protection then the land would be that much more valuable for it.

As to the business tax it could not possibly be adjusted fairly. It was unreasonable and unfair. The income tag would fall most upon the honest man. It put a premium on deception and lying. We must get down to a basis of justice not only with our fellowmen but in taxation.

47th Norwood Fair Was a Great Success

Thousands of People From All Parts of the District in Attendance—Military Contributions to the Programme a Feature of East Peterboro's Big Annual Event.

Favoured by bright, warm, almost summery weather the forty-seventh annual exhibition of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society, held at Norwood yesterday, scored one of the biggest successes in the history of the Society. The attendance was estimated as one of the largest that ever attended the Norwood Fair. From far and near all roads led to Norwood yesterday. During the morning there was a steady stream of vehicles along all the roads radiating from the village, while the noon train brought three hundred visitors from Peterborough and a big delegation from Indian River. Motor cars from all parts of the district poured into Norwood in the early part of the afternoon, cars from north, south, east and west, all filled with Fair visitors.

At noon the rush into the ground commenced and at one o'clock the people were pouring through the turnstiles in a manner that brought a smile to the faces of President E. Hawthorne and his capable board of directors. At 2 o'clock the grounds presented a memorable spectacle. Everywhere there was a jam of people. The slopes of the hill overlooking the judging ring, the midway, along the race course, in every corner, the crowd had gathered a happy good natured crowd, out to enjoy themselves, and by their faces succeeding pretty well.

Military Features.

As at every other fair it was a khaki fair at Norwood yesterday, although it must be admitted that there were hundreds of husky young men walking around in civilian clothes who would look very well in khaki. In fact there were enough young men in sight to form a battalion, and it is expected that before long a number of them at least will find their way into the ranks of the Peterborough battalion.

The latter was well represented by Lt.-Col. Johnston, Lieut. Stewart, Sergt.-Major Miller and the band and physical drill squad. The squad, in charge of Sergt. Oxley, gave two exhibitions during the afternoon and their snappy work made a big impression on the crowd. The exhibition was performed perhaps better than on any previous occasion and the applause that greeted the squad as they marched off was well earned. "That was the best thing I have seen yet at the fair," the Examiner overheard one woman say. "Their mothers must be proud of those boys if they are here looking at them." To many of the crowd the machine-like way in which the khaki clad lads carried out the different movements was a revelation and the exhibition should prove a stimulus to recruiting.

The band of the battalion also won many laurels. "What a splendid band" was an expression frequently heard among the crowd. Bandmaster Hughes' organization supplied the music for the fair during the afternoon, contributing a splendid programme of marches and overtures that was greatly enjoyed. There was always a crowd in the vicinity of the band stand.

Another interesting feature was the drill of the Norwood High school cadets, who were inspected by Lieut. Stewart of the Peterborough battalion. The youngsters, neatly attired in khaki and wearing Stetson hats, went through their drill smartly. Lieut. Stewart who remarked that he himself had been a member of a Cadet Corps a year ago, congratulated the boys on their good work which was especially creditable in view of the fact that they had not had the advantage of having a qualified instructor. Lieut. Stewart took the opportunity to make a neat recruiting speech.

The Horse Races.

The horse races were unusually good and provided a lot of amusement and excitement for the greater part of the crowd. The green race was especially exciting, the crowd getting the unusual spectacle in the second heat of a dead heat between Jim Shell, the ultimate winner and Bourbon A. The two horses passed under the wire so exactly even that the judges could not pick a winner and called the result a dead heat. It took five hard fought heats to decide the green race, while the open trot also required an extra heat, so that the spectators had their money's worth in the nine heats that were staged. Following were the results.—

Open Trot—

Phil Ha Ha—R. Emhirst	2	1	1	1
Ora Tariff—Fife Bros.	1	3	3	4
Dr. Johnston—E. Jones	4	2	2	2
Luck Lou—S. R. McQuaig	3	4	4	3

Green Race—

Jim Shell, A. Walsh, Hastings	1	d.h.	2	1
Bourbon A., A. Elmhirst	2	d.h.	1	2
Bessie N., E. Hogg, Norwood	3	3	3	3

The showing in all lines of live stock, grains, fruits, vegetables, etc., was one of the best in the history of the fair. Especially was there a fine display of carriage horses. The judging of these which took place in a large ring, overlooked by the hill, which made a natural grandstand, was a feature that was enjoyed by many. The judges had their work cut out for them in many of the classes and they were loud in their praises of some of the horses shown.

On the Midway.

The midway was large, as it always is at the Norwood Fair, and the concessionaries all did a rushing business. Gile's United Midway Shows, and a wrestler who met all comers, were two features of the attractions. Many Peterborough men had concessions on the grounds and all seemed to be doing well.

OUTSIDE EXHIBITS

There was more "mid way" than outside industrial exhibits at the Norwood Fair. Agricultural implements and farm machinery were nowhere exhibited, not even a single cream separator. This does not speak well for the manufacturers or representatives of these products in this section. Among other outside displays, however, the following are deserving of special mention:

GRAFTON & CO'S CAPTIVATING DISPLAY.

This was the display of the whole park, and furnished an attraction which was unrivalled in its own class. The Manager of Peterborough's large enterprising branch store sent representatives to the air early in the morning, who secured the preferred space which the Directors have allotted to this firm year after year. The display made of the Grafton Company's high-grade clothing and outfittings for men and boys was generally admitted to have been "the best ever."

For the past 23 years Grafton & Co. have taken a practical interest in East Peterborough's big Fair. They have not only encouraged the Society by making a strong and attractive exhibit, but have, during all these years, contributed three special prizes for the best agricultural or general purpose horses, valued at $10, $5 and $3. The names of the winners of these prizes this year will be found in the prize list awards, in another column.

Satisfaction is the great feature in buying clothes. It was learned that, at Grafton & Co's. branch store, Peterborough, the salesmen never hurry buyers. They are instructed to wait upon them with civility and an honest desire to meet every wish. They consider that the three essentials of satisfaction are—highest-grade goods, newest possible prices, for reliable clothing, and a friendly, pleasing service.

The Grafton models of overcoats include the modified Raglans and Balmacaans, the straight-shouldered Glengarry styles, and full back effect—in either light or dark coloured tweeds. These coats are produced in their own factory. The tailoring is in accord with the best standard, and comparisons in prices will reveal a savings averaging $5 on the regular merchant tailor prices. The same can generally be said about Grafton and Co. suits. By selling direct to the wearer out of their own factory at one small profit, they aim to save the buyer the middleman's charges. Their $8.50, $10, $12, $14 and $16 suits are claimed to be $4 less than elsewhere.

THE SMUT KILLER.

Mr. E. Richardson of 228 Thomas Street, Peterborough, gave an interesting exhibition of the automatic seed grain pickler, known as "The Smut Killer." It is estimated that the yearly loss to farmers in Canada due to smut is over fifteen million dollars! It is claimed that every dollar of this loss might be saved if farmers had properly treated their seed grain.

The "Smut Killer" treats wheat, oats, corn, barley, rye, flax, millet, timothy, clover, alfalfa, onion, beet, and rice seeds. The capacity of this machine is 125 bushels an hour—and any child can operate it, because there are no cranks, cogs, pulleys, chains, belts, or oil required. It furnishes its own power by the law of gravitation and costs only $14.

McLEOD'S ABERDEEN ANGUS CATTLE

Mr. McLeod of the "Highland Home" Stock Farm, Plainville, sent sixteen head of his imported Polled Angus cattle. The herd shown consisted of five pure-bred bulls, three bull calves and eleven females. These cattle were a beneficent contribution to the cattle show, and were admired by hundreds of stock critics. The judges awarded them seven first prizes, six second prizes, and two thirds. Mr. McLeod, Sr., has been showing these cattle for the past two months at different Fairs throughout the Dominion, including Ottawa and Quebec, where they made their mark. The veteran of "Highland Home" Stock Farm is an enthusiastic cattle breeder, and it was learned that he celebrated his 80th birthday while at the Ottawa Exhibition and was still feeling as young as a two-year-old.

HOW THE FORD CAR NEIGHBORIZES THE FARMER

At this Fair, as well as at all the other district Fairs held this year, farmers could not fail to notice that the Ford motor car is a practical farm necessity. Car after car, filled with farmers and their families drove into the Exhibition Grounds, and it was worthy of notice that nine out of every ten of the cars were of the same make—they were Fords.

The Duffus Garage, 195 Simcoe Street, Peterborough, sent their representatives to Norwood with an exhibit of the Ford cars. It was in charge of Bert Duffus, who secured a prominent location for his display in front of one of the main entrances. He had plenty of callers and it was interesting to listen to the views which led up to some of the good prospects which Mr. Duffus secured.

"The Ford gets me through my week's work quicker. It gives me more time to rest and sleep. Besides, I find that it even gives me more time to get acquainted with my family. You ought to see my missus—she's beginning to blossom like a rose."

One thing another farmer wanted to impress upon the representative of the Ford car was: "Am I going to get value for my money?" His friend, who was a practical man, spoke up and said:

"Well, I have two Fords, because they seem well adapted for any purpose. The "Runabout" I use mostly for running round about my business. The "Touring" car, my wife and family use. And there is never a time either of us have to give up to the other. These two Fords cost me less than the price of a big heavy car, which I could not expect to get neither as much nor as good service out of as I get from my two Fords. They are light and strong. They work through heavy roads with scarcely any effort and climb hills without a hitch. They are easy on gasoline, easy on oil; parts are inexpensive, and can be replaced at the Duffus Garage, Peterborough, without much delay."

No one will deny that sensible motoring is a wonderful source of health for older people, and the expense much less than the upkeep of horses. There is no reason why people in the autumn of life should not feel the joy of living, as well as their boys and girls. Their limbs may not be as spry, perhaps, but their motor car will carry them just as far as they desire to go.

Then, again, one of the most social features about a Ford is that it neighbourizes the farmer. In the days when the motor car was in its infancy, the farms of the country were so many miles separated, far removed from the centres of population. But now the motor car has completely transformed farm life. It creates new rural neighborhoods here, there, and everywhere. Though it be half a day's journey to the Village or town, the farmer gets there in an hour. What car owner will deny that his time is worth so little that his car doesn't save a dollar's worth of it a day, no matter how little he rides? Just figure what a saving of a dollar a day means, apart from any other claim of the service of the car.

TYLER'S HAND-MADE HARNESS

Mr. Frank Tyler, harness maker of Hastings, put up a tip-top exhibit of his own make of farm and buggy harness. The several sets shown were carefully inspected by the crowds who passed in and out of the building. With so much factory-made harness coming into use, it was a treat to see such substantial workmanship put into good leather. The farmers, especially, who knew Tyler's harness from experience, could testify to its splendid durability, good service and good style. Mr. Tyler also showed some of his home made horse collars, so well built and so comfortable that they heal sores and make a collar work better.

THE MAXWELL 1916 CAR

All who saw the Exhibit of the Maxwell 1915 five-seat Touring Car were strongly impressed with its fine proportions, fully equipped with electric starter and electric lights, and all its other modern specification, the 1916 price has been whittled down to $325, entitling it to be called "The Wonder Car."

This Canadian-made car is designed for pleasure and for business. Everything that has been justified by experience in the past has been put in to this 1916 car. The concentrated energy of the Maxwell car appeals to all prospective buyers, and those who contemplate buying a car will be wise, to think well of the Maxwell. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. W. S. Northey, of the Heard & Northey Co., Agricultural Warehouse, 393 Water Street, Peterborough, who carry the district agency, in this section. They are a good live firm.

"Closing of Bars at 8 p.m. Will Encourage Bottle Drinking to Large Extent"

Mr. H. B. Cowan Points Out Omission in the Legislature's Attempt to Curb Liquor Traffic---The Example of Other Governments.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, President of the City Temperance League, said when interviewed by the Examiner, to-day, in regard to the closing of bars at 8 p.m., that he felt that the Government was to be congratulated on having taken the step it has, especially in view of the pressure that has been brought to bear on it to prevent any action at all. It is encouraging to note also that Premier Hearst announces that it is an experiment and thereby intimates that if the experiment proves successful further advances in the same direction may be expected. As every reform of this character has been successful this one also is bound to prove so, and, therefore, it will inevitably lead ultimately to the complete suppression of the traffic.

"It is not to be expected, however," said Mr. Cowan, "that the advocates of advanced temperance reform will untouched will encourage bottle be satisfied. The fact that shops are drinking possibly to a considerable extent. This will go far to offset the benefits of the reduction in hours of sale in hotels. This is a serious aspect of the new legislation. It is somewhat disturbing to find, also, that the license commissioners, who were supposed to have practically a free hand in these matters, have been overridden in their recommendation that the bars should all be closed at 7 o'clock, thus showing that the trade has enough power to override to recommendations of the Board to that extent at least. The Government also has shown a certain lack of courage in as much as Saskatchewan, months ago, closed all bars, and Prince Edward Island has done the same. In Great Britain, where the vested interests involved are much greater, the Government has reduced the hours of sale in large areas to only five and a half hours a day in Scotland, and to four and a half hours in England, and has closed the shops entirely on Saturday. The traffic in Ontario is still able to work damage to the community and no measures short of complete suppression will be satisfactory, especially in these war times when economy in manhood and money is so absolutely necessary.

Bell Telephone Poles Laid Low

This morning more daylight was let in upon Charlotte street and much street disfigurement eliminated by the removal of fifteen huge Bell Telephone poles from Charlotte street, between George and Stewart streets. They were sawed off close—but not too close—to the sidewalk, with which they have been encircled. The result is a great improvement of the appearance of the street and the convenience of traffic. This is in continuation of the crusade of the company against all of their poles in the central part of the city, which is in the plans of the company's line equipment to be carried out at no distant date.

We are grateful to the company for what it is doing and has done to remove the pole evil from our streets. As a result of the application of the policy of the company in this regard, our streets are free from huge telephone poles to this extent:

On George street, from Smith street to Wolfe street; on Hunter street, from Sheridan terrace to Reid street, on Charlotte street from George street to Stewart street, and on Aylmer street from Hunter street to Charlotte street, with promise of further removal till the whole central part of the city is free from the poles of the company.

It is now up to the Utilities Commission to follow suit and dispose of the poles over which they have control in the business section of the city especially. We are edging gradually towards a realization of the city beautiful, insofar as the removal of ugliness is effectual.

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR.

All Saints' Choir will hold its regular practice to-night.

DR. RYERSON AND THE WORK OF RED CROSS

The aim of the local branch of the Red Cross Society in bringing Dr. Ryerson to the city, is that the citizens may have the opportunity of hearing at first hand and from the highest authority, of the work of the Canadian Red Cross; of its aims and requirements; of what it is accomplishing, and of its mode of working. Dr. Ryerson is back in Canada after a very thorough and exhaustive investigation and enquiry into the work of the Red Cross on the battle line.

Special facilities and opportunities were afforded Dr. Ryerson, both by the British and French governments to see how things actually worked out, to discover where improvements, if possible, could be devised. He talked freely with the soldiers on the firing lines and in the hospitals, and his returns full of enthusiasm and glow to tell us of the noble work being carried on by the Red Cross Society and of the efficiency of its many and varied branches of service, all culminating in the one and only object, the relief of suffering; and of the splendid self-sacrifice and devotion of the doctors and nurses.

Dr. Ryerson is a man whom it honours us to do honour; he has sacrificed much for the Empire. His eldest son was killed in Flanders, his second son is invalided home, his wife lost her life when the Lusitania went down, and though carrying this great weight of sorrow, Dr. Ryerson has never faltered in the work which is so dear to his heart, but has found his greatest relief and comfort in "ministering unto others."

The local Society hopes the citizens will crowd the Collegiate Hall on Friday evening. The chair will be taken by Col. Walker at 8.15 prompt. Admission is free, but a collection will be taken during the evening.

A short musical programme will be given by Miss Dorothy Allan, who will sing "La Marseillaise," the French national hymn, composed by Rouget De L'Isle, to whose memory the people of France accorded such signal honours, when his remains were removed and re-interred a few weeks ago. Miss Lora Logan will give a violin solo, and Mr Douglas Carruthers will sing "Johnnie Canuck's the Boy," the words and music of which are composed by Mrs Jean Mulloy, wife of Trooper Mulloy.

PETERBOROUGH BATTALION WAS WELL ADVERTISED, ETC.

battalion is now at the 250 mark. This does not, however, represent all the recruits who have been accepted. A large number who have passed the medical examination, have not reported for duty, while there are a number of other recruits in the hospital undergoing minor operations.

Six recruits for the Peterborough battalion were successful in passing the medical examination yesterday. Five are residents of Peterborough, and the sixth hails from Burleigh Falls. The list is as follows:

Robert Sproats, 344 Stewart street.

Wm. McFarlane, 593 Chamberlen street, 1 year in the 57th Regt.

W. J. Hicks, Burleigh Falls, two years in the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons.

Albert Victor Dallin, 606 Water street.

Daniel McNamee, 319 McDonnel street.

Inoculation was the order of the day at the armouries this morning, the new crop of recruits receiving the first injection of the serum. Over 200 men have already had their first inoculation.

The band and physical drill squad of the Peterborough battalion are grateful to Lt.-Col. Birdsall and others connected with the Norwood Fair for a donation handed to Sergt. Major Miller to provide a treat for the boys.

Among the donations received for the band fund recently was one of $5.00 from a Lakefield lady, Mrs Winnifred Hewitt, whose kindness is appreciated by the band.

Gunner Godfrey Laplante has returned to Barrefield camp after spending the week end with friends and relatives in the city, and expects to leave in a short time for England.

LIGHTING AT THE CITY HALL

Question Was Discussed at Last Night's Meeting of the Utilities Commission

Ald. Green, chairman of the Board of Works, was one of a deputation that waited upon the Utilities Commission at a meeting that was held last evening to discuss the question of lighting at the City Hall and also the matter of power in connection with the construction of the outfall sewer. After some discussion the matter was referred to Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Commission. Some of the municipal legislators are inclined to believe that the cost of lighting the City Hall under the new arrangement is excessive, where as the Commission claim that a number of new lights have been installed which were never charged for, including the new addition to the police station.

Just to remind you that the tinsmithing department of Messrs. J. J. MacPherson & Co. can put your heating system into good running order for the winter. Book your order now.

Remanded For Seven Days

Light Grist for This Morning's Police Court

Two local men will experience the joy of living at a holstery where they serve meals for the colossal sum of three cents each, or at the flat rate of nine and a quarter cents for each individual guest. Police Magistrate Dumble presented each of them with a meal ticket good for seven days' board at the local bastile. One was charged with being drunk in a public place, while it is the intention of the police to charge the other with vagrancy.

Hot Biscuits Beneficial.

If you have been tortured by eating hot biscuits, pancakes, fresh bread, etc., try making same from Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. Because of the granular character of Roman Meal it will not ferment. NIGHT WEAVERS RESUME WORK AT AUBURN MILLS

Satisfactory Settlement of Recent Dispute Arrived at Yesterday Through Agency of Fair Wage Officer

Mr. E. N. Compton, Fair Wage Officer of the Department of Labour, effectually adjusted the differences between the night weavers at the Auburn Woollen Mill and the company. Yesterday morning he visited the factory and discussed the matter in dispute. As a result an agreement was arrived at in a friendly spirit at two o'clock. The company's offer of a ... per cent advance was accepted after Mr. Compton had met and duly explained ... Mr. John Bentley, ... the Auburn Woollen Company stated that the 10 per cent advance on the scale works out at considerably more than a bonus scheme in operation which will enable the weavers to earn it more easily.

Other subjects which the ... brought forward were adjusted in a satisfactory manner, and the men resumed work last night.

Mr. Bentley said that Mr. Compton met the employers and employees in a courteous and business-like way, and there was no doubt that the gentlemanly and considerate manner in which he met both parties helped materially to arrive at such a quick and satisfactory settlement.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

When World Series Drew Only 3,000

Back in 1884 Only Three Hundred at Final Game—Gradually Has Grown to Immense Proportion

Nothing shows the growth of baseball more than a comparison of gate receipts taken in during the different series played for the baseball championship of the world. The series of 1913 between the Boston Americans and the New York Giants leads all series for cash receipts and attendance. In the year 1884 about 3000 people attended the final game between the Province team and the Metropolitan Club, champions of their respective leagues, and the total attendance at all three games was less than 3,000. That amount of paid admissions at a dollar each would hardly pay the umpires of the present series. Radbourne and Keefe, the opposing hurlers, were at the height of their respective careers, but they failed to draw the throngs. However, the players did not worry, as there was nothing in it for them except glory.

In the season of 1885 the series was a failure from all standpoints. Only 6,000 saw the six contests between the men of Anson and the Browns led by Charles Comiskey. The series was marked by continual scrapping and at times real fighting. The series ended or broke up with honor in games won and verbal scraps "fifty and fifty." In 1886 the first real series for the world's championship was staged and pulled off in a successful manner. The six games drew out 40,000 and the net receipts were $16,-000, which was handed over to the St. Louis Browns as per agreement. Anson and his merry men did not get even a pleasant smile out of the encounter.

The series of 1887 was considered a wonderful affair at that period, with an attendance of 50,000, and gate receipts amounting to $49,000, which amount caused unusual amazement in baseball circles at that time. The teams traveled in special cars, and the whole affair was carried forward on a scale of magnificence never before attempted in baseball. Fifteen games were played and ten cities got the privilege of witnessing the two best team battles. Chicago had a "grouch," and when the Detroit and St. Louis played that city it sent out 385 spectators. Brooklyn turned out the largest crowd, 6,746. Detroit won hands down, with ten contests to their credit.

In 1888 the NewYork Giants and the St. Louis Browns were the contenders, ten games were played to an attendance of 35,000 people. Twenty-four thousand dollars was taken in and divided 60 and 40 per cent. between the owners, and players were promised $200 each. The hitherto grand organization under Comiskey made a sorry showing, and Owner Von der Ahe was so thoroughly disgusted that he refused to pay his men the promised $200. Arlie Latham got wise and drew his $200 before the series was half over. The other fellows had to wait many days before they received their share.

Perhaps the best series of all early day affairs was played in the season of 1889, between Brooklyn and the Giants. Forty-seven thousand fans saw the nine games and paid $46,-000 for the privilege. New York won in easy fashion.

The season of 1890 was a failure as a world's series year. One was played between the Brooklyn Club and the Louisville team, champions of the National and American Associations. The winners of the Players League, the Bostons, were by long odds the best club in the land that season, but they were regarded as outlaws, so the other law-abiding organizations ignored them entirely. The two above-named contenders played seven games out of the ten agreed upon, and the struggle ended in a tie, and the balance of the games for the supremacy of the baseball world were postponed until the next spring, but no record can be found where they met and settled their argument, and it is probable that it isn't settled yet. Seven games were played, one being a tie, and 18,800 people attended the entire series.

From the year 1891 until 1897 no real world's series games took place. Tilts were held between the winners of the first and second seasons of the big twelve-club National League, but they lacked the intense rivalry which exists to-day. For six years the fans of the country had to be satisfied with watching the annual struggle between the first and second contenders for the flag in their respective leagues. In the year 1903 the first big battle was staged for world's championship honors in baseball, and from that date the crowning event in the great national game has grown steadily, and to-day it is regarded as the greatest event in the athletic world.

FIRST RUN SCORED IN SECOND WORLD'S SERIES GAME—Picture shows Hooper of the Red Sox scoring the first run of the game in the first innings of the second game of the World's Series. Burns, the Phillies' catcher is seen on the ground as he cropped Niehoff's throw. Umpire Rigler is giving the decision.

Stock Markets

London.—The Board of Trade reports the imports of sugar into the United Kingdom during September as 114,000 tons of cane and 38,000 tons of refined sugar; stocks in bonds, 143,000 tons; refiners' stocks, 22,000 tons; out-turn of refiners during September, 63,000 tons; consumption, 124,000 tons; exports, 1,000 tons.

Private advices estimate the September consumption at 141,000 tons; as compared with the Board of Trade figures. There were 132,000 tons consumed in September last year.

Automobile Outlook.

Boston.—A Boston banker who has had close familiarity with the course of the automobile industry, says: "Six months ago I felt fairly confident that the end of the 1915 selling season would mark the high tide of automobile industry in this country. "To-day I have sharply revised my opinion, and believe that 1916 profits will so far surpass the 1915 record as to be little short of sensational. The well established companies have demonstrated the wisdom of their price cuts. They are getting through increased volume a sustained earning power which only an absolute slump in demand can interrupt."

Midvale Steel.

The Midvale Steel & Ordnance Co. has under negotiation additional large contracts which are expected to be closed in the very near future. The merger permits a large increase in bookings, which in rifles alone amount to close to $50,000,000. No official statement has been issued as to the prospective profits on the rifle contract, but it is understood that $10 per rifle, or a total of $20,000,000 is not far from correct.

With a profit of $20,000,000 on its rifle contract and a working capital of $15,000,000, the Midvale would show $35 a share on the stock in excess current assets, that is if the profits on the rifles come up to the profits on the rifles come up to expectations. One prominent steel manufacturer figures that if there is any "water" in the merger it does not exceed $5,000,000.

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Post and Flagg.—Industrials are again crowding the railroads for leading place in the popular favour, but it is noteworthy purchasers of the former group are becoming more discriminating and inclined to select only those of the better class.

J. S. Bache & Co.—The steel industry is pointing toward a runaway market. With so much steel going out for war purposes, there is not enough capacity to furnish a normal supply to domestic trade. Further advances in steel prices are probable.

Laidlaw & Co.—Underlying conditions continue to favour a broad and active stock market, and so far as the immediate future is concerned the element of accident seems about the only factor to counteract the effects of growing optimism.

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.—While looking for stocks to go higher, prefer to buy them on the dips rather than otherwise. We continue to favour the coppers and rails.

Shearson, Hammill & Co—Although liquidation is continuing in moderate amounts, all offerings are steadily absorbed. All indications point to a continuance of the upward swing, though stocks should be sold on the bulges as good reactions are sure to occur from time to time.

What the New York Papers are Saying.

Sun.—Encouragement is contained in the increasing favorable reports of progress in the iron and steel industry.

Wall Street Journal—The ease with which railroad stocks decline is interpreted as meaning that the upward movement has been due largely to short covering.

Journal of Commerce—Fundamental conditions are such that speculative investment enthusiasm seems likely to increase.

In connection with the offering of the French-British bonds, Harvey Fisk & Sons have prepared for free distribution a pamphlet giving information in connection with the resources of the borrowing nations and their bonded indebtedness.

Results of the fiscal year, the present earnings and the outlook for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, from a business point of view are discussing at length in a circular issued by A. A. Housman & Co.

The New York Stock Exchange admitted to the list the General Motors Company's $9,919,800 common stock and $3,731,300 preferred stock released from the voting trust agreement.

Charles E. Lewis of Minneapolis, says the Northwest never saw more prosperous than it is to-day. Wheat is so abundant there that warehouse accommodation is insufficient, and the farmers are getting an average of $1 a bushel for their product. When the people in the East realize what that traffic will mean to the railroads, he added, they will appreciate the bargains in those stocks at present quotations.

Contracts have been let by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for 500,000 tons of rails, the orders being distributed among the Maryland, Cambria, Carnegie and Illinois steel companies.

Although Monday was the last day for deposits of International Mercantile Marine Company stock with the Reorganization Committee representing the bondholders, no announcement was forthcoming as to whether an extension had been arranged for further deposits. The curb has admitted to its list the Wallace Committee's certificates of deposit for preferred stock.

On account of the change in the Mexican situation, the annual meeting of the stockholders of the National Railways of Mexico has been postponed until October 30.

The Public Library The Centre of Many Good Activities

The Public Library is becoming an important, intellectual and patriotic centre, the axis around which revolve great activity of gray matter and practical movements of patriotism. Besides being the workshop of Librarian Dela Fosse and his bevy of coadjutors, and the home of a most creditable and growing museum of objects of archaeological and natural history interest it is headquarters for many other organizations.

At the Public Library the doctors gather to regulate their co-ordinated movements and discuss the momentous things that affect the public health, and the "consideration" for their services. Here the Women's Art Association sketches the outlines of its artistic activities. Here the teachers "swap" experiences and hold consultation for the good of their profession.

Here also organizations that represent the inspiration of the patriotic spirit find a local habitation. The Red Cross has its quarters for the shipment of its healing supplies and comforts to the heroes at the front and in the hospitals. The King's Daughters have also their regular rendezvous under the roof of the Public Library building.

Next year the public meetings of the Library Boards of the Lindsay District representing sixteen public libraries, will be held here. All this work goes on without clashing, within the same walls, and without in the slightest way interfering with the regularity of the work proper of the Public Library, or the smooth operation of its well conducted activities. The Public Library in a score of senses always has steam up—always "something doing."

"And aren't ye afraid o' gettin' killed?" said Mrs. Murphy to Pat O'Brien, who had joined the Army. "Sure, an' phwat of it," he muttered proudly; "it's me livin', ain't it?"

Funeral of the Late Celia Black

Took Place Yesterday Morning —Floral Tributes Were Many

The funeral of the late Celia Black was held yesterday morning from her home to the C.P.R. station, thence to the Norwood cemetery, where interment took place. The Rev. R. B. Grobb of All Saints' Church officiated. Many friends of the deceased came to pay their last respects to the departed. The pall bearers were T. Webster, F. White, C. Might, W. Jeffries, A. McLeod, G. Lamb, boys from the II. form of the Collegiate Institute, of which Celia was a student. The other students of the form marched in a procession.

Amongst the beautiful floral tributes were a wreath from All Saints' Choir, from the Sunday School, and Bible classes a basket and wreath; Collgiate Institute, a sheaf; girl friends, a spray, Peterborough Lock Co., a wreath.

Hotelmen Regard New Closing Hour With Some Alarm

An inconvenience to the travelling public, a serious curtailment to the average daily receipts, and a large problem for the proprietors to deal with, were opinions expressed by local hotel keepers of the new 8 p.m. closing regulation.

One man laughed rather grimly as he said, "A couple of months from now I'll be out on the road with a pick and shovel."

Others regarded the change with alarm especially as a large part of their bar receipts were rung up between 8 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Hotelmen believe that the shops will reap considerable additional profit. They are closing at 7 p.m. but it is easy for a man to secure a bottled supply before that hour for later use.

The Investigation in Havelock

Provincial Police Are Still Working on the Lindsay Case—Have Left the Country

The Provincial police are still investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of May Lindsay, which is said to have resulted from a criminal operation. It is understood that the Lindsay family have left the community in which they resided up to the time of the young girl's death, and that steps will be taken to bring them back. Witnesses at the inquest, which was held in Havelock some weeks ago assert they have since been threatened by the father of the dead girl. One elderly woman in particular is said to be morally afraid as a result.

According to Crown Attorney Hatton, the authorities have experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining evidence. As matters stand one or more arrests may be expected any time.

Canadianizing The Foreigner

Enjoyable Address Last Night by Rev. B. M. Dickey

Last night at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Rev. B. M. Dickey, B.A., gave an illustrated address on the subject of "Canadianising the Foreigner," from personal contact.

Mr. Dickey, who is the secretary of the Reading Camp Association, traced the Association from its small beginning fifteen years ago, when Rev. A. Fitzpatrick and two students went out to work as lumberjacks in Algoma. In addition to their work these students spent their evenings in conducting classes for the other workmen and endavored in various ways to better the conditions of their life.

From this small beginning the work has spread to every province in the dominion, with the exception of Prince Edward Island.

The old-time lumber-jack has almost died away and their places are being taken by the foreigners. Because of the change, the Reading Camp Association has taken over in more recent years the work of Canadianising the foreigners. All the missionaries and the instructors live the same life and do the same work as the foreigners. The instructors find them very responsive and believe that by the method it may be possible to make the foreigners safe citizens of Canada and loyal subjects of the King. If on the other hand, we continue to neglect the foreigners they will, in the future, constitute a serious menace to the institutions and to the country.

A number of Peterborough citizens have for some years been contributing regularly to the fund. Those who wish to assist it this year may send their contributions to the Head Office, 43 Victoria Street, Toronto, Ont.

Single Tax Advocates Powerless Under Law

Mr. H. B. Cowan, when spoken to today in reference to the report that the believers in Single Tax were talking of putting candidates into each ward of the city, said that it was all news to him. As far as he knew there was no Single Tax Association or organization in the city, and furthermore, even should Single Tax candidates be elected from every ward, and to the Mayor's chair, they would have no power to accomplish anything until the Provincial Municipal Law is altered so as to give municipalities power to reduce taxes on improvements and increase them on land values. Not having this power now the advocates of the Single Tax are powerless to accomplish reforms such as are now proving successful in the three prairie provinces as well as in British Columbia.

Pte. Tom Jolly Wounded At Langemarck is Ready And Fit to Fight Again

A letter from Pte. Tom Jolly, who was injured in the engagement at Langemarck, has been received by Mrs. Dunkley, 240 Westcott Street, with whom he boarded prior to his enlisting with the Peterborough Company in the 2nd Battalion. He is now at Shorncliffe with the 12th Reserve Battalion, almost fully recovered and at least considered fit for duty.

The letter is as follows:

"It seems a long time ago since I wrote to you, so I thought I would write and let you know that I am still all right, but not back at the front yet. I am at the reserve battalion for the 2nd and 4th Battalions, and they are sending out drafts occasionally. I have come across many of the old Company fellows, and a few Peterborough fellows in the 39th Battalion. It is quite a treat to meet some of the old boys again. I was down at Folkestone every day last week with two of them. We just answer roll call three times a day here, and have a little light drill. After that we are free to go anywhere we like from 4 p.m. of 9 p.m.

"I stayed eleven weeks at Penarth, and was very sorry to leave. I was sent from there to the Canadian Convalescent Camp at Monks Horton, Kent. After five days there, they sent me to a private house taken over by two ladies from Ottawa and four Canadian sisters. I had my arm massaged once a day, and that treatment soon made it work freely. There were thirty patients and we had fine times together.

"While I was there, my mother and brother came down three days on August Bank holiday, and Dad came down on his bicycle for three days. I went with him one day to Canterbury, Horne Bay and Whitstable. After a month at that home, we went back to Monks Horton and they sent me back here 'fit for duty'. The third day I was here I got a sick furlough for seven days, went home, telegraphed for an extension, and got six days. Of course I had a fine time, having grand weather all the time.

"I went to see every one I got back a week ago.

"We are quartered in huts, twenty-six men in each, and get better food than we had at Salisbury. I found the bunks made my shoulder a bit stiff every morning, after being accustomed to beds. There are many Canadians here, and on Saturday night Folkestone is flooded with them. They had a big military display by the Canadians here on Saturday. The Zeppelins dropped bombs at Selling while I was in the home there, but only killed three chickens. They came four nights while I was in London. We could see them plainly. My father was out on duty until 3 o'clock every morning. Many thanks for the papers you sent me. I hear that Peterborough is very busy recruiting."

Private Jolly enclosed a photograph of a family group of three generations—his grandfather, his father and himself. His grandfather was through the Indian Mutiny, and his father is at present Sub-Inspector of Special Constables.

Private Jolly's address is Private Tom Jolly, No. 7643, 12th Reserve Battalion, No. 5 Company, Shorncliffe.

BRIDE BREAKS LEG ON WAY TO ALTAR

Trips on Wedding Gown and Falls Down Stairs at Foot of Bridegroom

YONKERS, N.Y., Oct. 15—Leaning on the arm of her father, her long bridal veil trailing out behind, Miss Ethel Petrick started down the stairs from the second floor of her home at No. 115 New Main street for her marriage to Louis E. Hann—the happiest moment in her life—when she tripped on her bridal gown of satin and tumbled headlong down the steps. She landed at the flower canopied altar, where the bridegroom and the clergyman, his attendants, the ushers and the hundred or more guests were waiting, causing, as may be imagined, somewhat of a commotion.

In the precipitous descent Miss Petrick's right leg was broken in two places and she was severely cut and bruised. Mr. Hann, who is a chief petty officer attached to the battleship South Carolina, and the waiting clergyman, the Rev. Dr. John M. Ericsson, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, picked the young woman up and placed her on a couch while physicians were summoned. The guests were informed that the wedding would have to be postponed and they left the house.

Miss Petrick was sent to St. Joseph's Hospital, where physicians worked with the broken leg, and at seven o'clock that night Mr. Hann was permitted to see her. She then was quite cheerful and without pain. Mr. Hann explained that he would have to join his ship within a few days and an immediate marriage was decided upon.

Dr. Ericsson was called to the hospital and the ceremony was performed at the bedside of the bride. Then followed an unusual scene. The nurses had provided rice and old shoes for all the other women patients in that part of the hospital, and while the shoe throwing was confined to the floor operations, the rice was showered upon the invalid bride. The flowers that had decorated the Petrick home were transferred to the hospital, and there were gay times in the hospital until late that night. The bride will not be able to walk for six weeks, it was said.

A Tommy on leave from the front had been given a free railroad pass to take him home, and he utilized part of his brief holiday in getting married. On the return journey when the conductor asked to see his pass, he produced by accident his marriage lines. The conductor handed the paper back to him. "This is the ticket for a very long and tiresome journey, young man," he said gravely; "but not on this line."—Exchange

TOBACCO FOR BOYS AT FRONT

Friends Can Save Money By Sending Through the Overseas Fund

If you have a brother, son, sweetheart or friend at the front and are sending him tobacco gifts you may save 40 per cent. by sending your gift through the Overseas Fund and be absolutely assured that your gift will get there quicker than you could send it any other way. This is because the Army Service Corps are delivering the Overseas Club parcels with the men's food. All you have to do is send your contribution to the Examiner with the name, regimental number, regiment etc., to which your friend belongs and the Overseas Club will attend to the addressing, packing, shipping and deliveries. In each package they send a postcard upon which they typewrite the name and address of the individual sending so that the soldier can acknowledge the gift direct.

The Overseas Club is a very influential organization and has been able to secure privileges granted to no one else, all duty and transportation charges being waived and the Government taking over the work of distributing the parcels. The Overseas Club are sending Canadian tobacco and cigarettes only to the Canadian troops. Gifts may also be sent to any one of the British forces on the Navy and to the unfortunate Belgians.

We appeal to our readers to give all they can spare to this fund for judging by letters coming back from the firing line our boys need the smokes and need them badly

MILLIONAIRES PLACED ON TRIAL

Former N.Y., N.H. and H. Railway Directors Face Charges

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Facing imprisonment of one year, a fine of $5,000, or both, if convicted, twelve multi-millionaires, former directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad were brought to trial on charges of conspiracy to form a monopoly, before Federal Judge Wm. H. Hunt. The defendants are:

William Rockefeller, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Charles F. Brooker, Charles M. Pratt, Henry F. McHargo, Frederick F. Brewster, George M. Miller, D. Newton Barney, Robert M. Taft, James Heaton Robertson, James S. Hemingway and Edward D. Robbins.

More than 100 attorneys represented the defendants.

Two hundred talesmen were on hand when court opened. The selection of a jury will take all of today and possibly longer.

Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven, will be the central figure in the trial; for he will be used as a witness by both sides. He obtained immunity from indictment last October by appearing before the Grand Jury which indicted twenty-one persons in connection with the alleged New Haven frauds.

The indictment returned against the defendants on trial charges conspiracy to monopolize by unlawful means and methods, part of the commerce of the United States. The indictment gave a list of some 160 corporations which, it says, had come under the ownership, management or domination of the New Haven Company.

Canada To Call 50,000 More Troops

Another Demand Upon the Young Manhood of the Country to Be Made Shortly---Another Seven and One-half Millions to Be Raised for the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—It is believed a call for fifty thousand more troops in Canada will be made shortly.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 15.—It is understood here Russia has requested the right of way through Rumania for Russian troops.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 15.—One German cruiser is reported sunk and another damaged in a fight in the Gulf of Finland.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—Canada will try to raise another seven and a half millions for the Patriotic Fund.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—President Wilson has approved of a plan for greatly strengthening the United States navy.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Kaiser is said to be trying to secure the support of Spain and Sweden.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—In the House of Lords to-day Lord Milner said troops should be withdrawn from the Dardanelles campaign for Balkan expedition.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—There is bitter indignation throughout Britain at the failure of London's aerial defences on Wednesday night, and drastic reprisals are advocated.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Sir Edward Grey assured Parliament to-day that Rumania favoured the Allies.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Allies' determination to push the war to ultimate victory has only been made firmer and fleeter by the Teutonic effort to crush Serbia, Lord Crewe declared in the House of Lords to-day.

The Serbian and Greek interests are identical, and in the end they must stand or fall together, said Lord Grey in the Commons to-day.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 14.—The German General Von Eichon has been suspended in disgrace says a local newspaper.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—British reports to-night say substantial gains made and retained around Loos by British forces.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 14.—Germany has suspended postal and freight traffic with Roumania and has demanded that this Government state what side it is on in the present war.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—All London was in extreme darkness to-night in expectation of more Zeppelin attacks.

BULGARS LACK SHELLS.

ATHENS, Oct. 13, via Paris, Oct. 14.—Bulgaria has in stock only 1,200 shells for each gun, according to information from Austrian sources, and it is absolutely essential for its troops to effect a junction with the Austro-Germans, who have invaded Serbia within a fortnight. It is reported from Sofia that German officers and a number of German workmen, who went there from Constantinople, erected a large munitions factory which now is working day and night.

TURKS TO FURNISH MUNITIONS.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 14, via London.—Semi-official announcement that a Turco-Bulgarian military agreement has been signed is made in the Lokal Anzeiger. Under the terms of the agreement Turkey places two army corps (40,000 men each) and her munitions factories at the disposal of Bulgaria, while the latter country agrees to supply Turkey with coal and railway materials. It is agreed that Turkey shall have free use of Bulgarian harbours.

Progress Made By British Forces

Offensive in the West Results in Substantial Gains---Allied Forces at Dardanelles Are Bombarding the Turkish Defences More Fiercely Than Ever.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Despite the suggestion in the House of Lords Thursday that the Dardanelles seige be abandoned, the Allied forces were bombarding the Turkish defenses there more fiercely than ever to-day, a news despatch said.

Whether or not this was a mere final effort the public had no means of knowing. There was no question that Lord Milner's insistance on the transfer of the Allies' troops from the Gallipoli Peninsula to some other field of the war had caused deep discouragement in England. His Lordship is considered one of the country's highest authorities on the Near East.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Answering the Bulgarian demand for a declaration of the Greek attitude, Premier Zaimis of Greece, has announced again that his country is neutral.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The casualties reported to-day are: 111 officers, 36 dead; 2,576 men, 475 dead. Regiments suffering: First Middlesex, Ninth Welsh Regiment, First of Seventh London Regiment, Second Welsh Fusiliers, First Royal Scots Fusiliers, Ninth Welsh Fusiliers, First Royal Irish Rifles, Second Royal Warwickshires, Sixth Wiltshires, Second York and Lancasters.

Lance-Corporal A. McLaren, Canadian Ambulance, has been gazetted Second Lieutenant in the North Scottish Garrison Artillery Territorials.

BERLIN'S CLAIMS.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—Correspondents of Berlin newspapers report that the fighting on Monday in the districts around Loos and Souchez was most bitter. An intense bombardment of 20 hours preceded the French attack, which began on Monday morning. It was directed against the hill near Vimy, as well as against the German positions further north, between Loos and Givenchy.

The particular object of the French onslaught was the elevation to the west of Vimy, which commands the flat land of Lens. The artillery battle was of such intensity that the guns could not be touched with the bare hand.

The French penetrated the German trenches in only one small section, where the defenders and their guns had been buried by the French artillery fire. Bavarian troops threw out the French, using knives and hand-grenades. The losses of the French are described as very severe.

FOLLOWING THE SAME PLAN

NISH, Serbia, Oct. 13.—The official story of the bombardment of Belgrade shows that the Germans are pursuing the same plan of extermination adopted in Belgium. Begun on the fifth, in the afternoon, the bombardment continued until the eighth without ceasing. Tens of thousands of shells of all calibres were thrown methodically, with the object of making as many victims as possible and creating a panic. Before the bombardment the enemy opened a barrier of fire on the roads leading out of the city, killing many persons who were fleeing. During the bombardment enemy aeroplanes flew over groups of refugees, signalling the range to the batteries. The southern part of the city, where the inhabitants had taken refuge, was bombarded all the night of the sixth. The number of victims was great. From a military standpoint the bombardment has had no effect on the plan of operations drawn up for the Serbian troops.

Edmund Andrews Says Skilled Workmen Were Guaranteed Work in England But Did Not Get It

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—That Canadian mechanics who left the Dominion to work in the ship-building yards at Glasgow, Scotland, were not given employment, is the assertion of Mr Edmund Andrews, who went with twenty others last August.

According to his statement Mr Andrews answered an advertisement inserted in the Canadian papers by the agents of the Beardmore Company, Shipbuilders, Glasgow. The advertisement called for various classes of skilled workmen.

"I was for 4fteen years employed as a ship's carpenter and after with Harland and Wolff, Belfast, so that I know a little about the trade," he said.

In response to a letter from Mr Andrews, the manager of the White Star Line at Montreal sent him a letter saying "The rate of wages is 9½ pence per hour, plus overtime and Government bonus for skilled workmen. The Beardmore Company (on the Clyde) advise us that good first-class mechanics can earn on an average as high as £6 weekly. The cost of living, everything found averages from 10 shillings to one pound per week. We supply rail and ocean fares both ways and guarantee at least one year's employment, part to commence three days after landing on the other side."

Went With Party.

"I at once made preparations to go," said Mr Andrews. "I was put in charge of a party of twenty men and received transportation for them. We sailed on the 3rd of August, and on arrival at Glasgow at once presented ourselves at the office of Beardmore & Company. I was told that no employment could be provided—in my line. There were some men from the U.S.A. in the party who had worked as rivetters. They were accustomed to handling small work and were useless when it came to the big shipbuilding work.

"My son obtained employment as a "holder up" with a Chicago man who for some time worked with the Riverdale Power Company in Toronto, was a native of Glasgow and knew the Beardmore Works from one end to the other. He was given a job alongside a fellow-Scotchman, who refused to work with him, saying he did not want to work with 'foreigners.'

"There was unpleasantness all the time between our men and the local workmen. I went to Mr. Cameron, the manager of the Beardmore Company, and asked him if he could not find employment for our small party in a yard employing 15,000 men.

Manager Feared Unions.

"He said: 'We have the unions to contend with. There are men now walking the streets idle and if we employ you before them we will get into trouble with the unions.'

"I was at the Beardmore office three times daily for 10 days, but the only satisfaction I got was to be told to go to the Government Labor Bureau to see if they wanted any men.

"Disheartened with the prevailing conditions I came home on September 17th, not having lifted one tool out of my chest or drawn a single day's pay."

CHAPTER XXV.

I Burn a Few Bridges.

We went over rife to the castle rather hurriedly, I thought, but he explained that Saks merely wanted a general idea of the structure; he would return another day to make a careful inspection.

"I dare say you are surprised that I should be willing to pay double your original price for Schloss Rothhoefen," he ventured, pausing in the corridor to light a cigarette. We were on our way to the top of the east wing.

"Oh, no," I said calmly. "I am aware that treasure is buried here. As a matter of fact, I've tried to unearth it myself, but without success. I wish you better luck."

"Thanks," said he laconically, after the first swift glance of inquiry. "It is doubtless a fairy tale, handed down by tradition. I take no stock in it. My principal object in acquiring Rothhoefen is to satisfy a certain vanity which besets me. I have it on excellent authority that my ex-father-in-law—the man Titus, you know—talks of buying the property and performing the stupendous, characteristic American feat of removing it, stone and timber, just as it is, to his estate north of New York city. No one but a vulgar, purse proud American would think of doing such a thing."

The news staggered me. Could there be anything in what he said? If it was true that Jasper Titus contemplated such a quixotic move there could be but one compelling force behind the whim—sentiment. But not sentiment on the part of Jasper Titus.

"I cannot believe that he considers doing such a thing," I said, rather blankly. "You see, if any one should know, I am that one. He has not approached me, of that you may be sure."

He did not appear to be interested.

"My information is not authoritative, Mr. Smart," said he. "It came to me through my representatives who conferred with his lawyers a fortnight ago in regard to certain difficulties that had existed between us. From what they were able to gather, the idea has taken root in the old man's head. Now, I want to buy this place for no other reason than to tell him that he hasn't enough money in his possession to purchase it from me. D'you see? Vanity, you may call it, as I do, but it pleases me to coddle it."

Very thoughtfully I strode along beside him. Would I be serving the countess ill or well by selling the place to Tarnoway? It was her whim, of course, and it was a foolish one.

"Suppose that he offered you twice what you are to pay me for the place," said I, struck by a sudden thought.

He laughed easily. "You will not, it seems, acquit me of cupidity, Mr. Smart. I should not sell to him under any consideration. That is final. Take it or leave it."

By this time we were in the rooms once occupied by the countess. He glanced about the apartment carelessly.

"Deserted, I observe," he remarked with a queer smile.

My heart almost stood still. "Eh? What do you mean?"

"If I am not mistaken, these are the rooms once occupied by your valet's wife. Am I right?"

I steadied myself. "She has gone away," I said. "Couldn't stand the climate."

"I see," said he, but he was still smiling. "How does your valet stand it?"

"Nicely," said I, with a conscious blush.

"I mean the separation, of course."

"Certainly! He is used to it."

"Isn't it rather odd that he should still think she is here in the castle?"

"Does he?" I murmured.

"I inquired for her when I encountered him downstairs. He said she was quite well this morning, except for a headache."

He Was Holding the Doll at Arm's Length.

"She is subject to headaches, I believe," said I, with the utmost nonchalance. He lifted his right eyebrow slightly, but said no more on the subject.

A pile of rubbish lay heaped in one corner of the room, swept up and left there by the big Schmieks to await the spring housecleaning season, I presume. Tarnoway at first eyed the heap curiously, then rather intently. Suddenly he strode across the room and gingerly rooted among the odds and ends with the toe of his highly polished boot.

To my horror a dilapidated doll detached itself and rolled out upon the floor, a well remembered treasure of Rosemary's and so unique in appearance that I doubt if there was another in the world like it. Indeed, I have a distinct recollection of being told that the child's father had painted in the extraordinary features and had himself decorated the original fifteen locks with singular stripes of red and white and blue, a sardonic tribute to the home land of her mother.

I turned away as he stooped and picked up the soiled, discarded effigy. When next I looked at him out of the corner of my eye he was holding the doll at arm's length and staring at it with a fixed gaze. I knew that he recognized it. There could be no doubt in his mind as to the identity of that telltale object. My heart was thumping fiercely.

An instant later he rejoined me, but not a word did he utter concerning the strange discovery he had made. His face was set and pallid, and his eyes were misty. Involuntarily I looked to see if he had the doll in his hand and in that glance observed the bulging surface of his coat pocket.

In silence we stood there awaiting the reappearance of Saks, who had gone into one of the adjoining rooms. I confess that my hand trembled as I lighted a fresh cigarette. He was staring moodily at the floor, his hands locked behind his back. Something —shocking of real intelligence ordered me to hold my tongue. I smoked placidly, yet waited for the outburst. It did not come. It never came. He kept his thoughts, his emotions, to himself, and for that single display of restraint on his part I shall always remember him as a true descendant of the nobility.

We tramped down the long flights of stairs side by side, followed by the superfluous Mr. Saks, who did all of the talking. He was, I think, discoursing on the extraordinary ability of ancient builders, but I am not absolutely certain. I am confident Tarnoway did not hear a word the fellow said.

In my study we found Poopendyke and the two strangers.

"Have you made out the papers?" demanded the count harshly. An ugly gleam had come to his eyes, but he did not direct it toward me. Indeed, he seemed to avoid looking at me at all.

"Yes, Count Tarnoway," said the lawyer. "They are ready for the signatures."

"Perhaps Mr. Smart may have reconsidered his offer to sell," said Tarnoway. "Let him see the contracts."

"I have not reconsidered," I said quietly.

"You may sign here, Mr. Smart," said the notary as he gave me the document, a simple contract, I found.

"Jasper Titus will offer more than I can afford to pay," said the count. "Please do not feel that I am taking an unfair advantage of you. I am absolutely certain that he wants to buy this place for—his granddaughter, a descendant of barons."

The significance of this remark was obvious, and it was the nearest he ever came to uttering the conviction that had been formed in that illuminating five minutes upstairs. If he suspected—and I think he did—he preferred not to ask the questions that must have been searing his curious brain. It was a truly wonderful demonstration of self restraint. I would have given much to be able to read his innermost thoughts, to watch the perplexed movements of his mind.

"Schloss Rothhoefen is yours, Count Tarnoway," said I. "It is for you to say whether his whim shall be gratified."

His lips twitched. I saw his hand touch the bulging coat pocket with a swift, passing movement.

"Will you be good enough to sign, Mr. Smart?" he said coldly. He glanced at his watch. "My time is valuable. When can you give possession?"

"The day the deed is transferred."

"That will be in less than three days I have satisfied myself that the title is clear. There need be no delay."

We signed the contract after I had requested Poopendyke to read it aloud to me. It called for the payment of 50,000 kronen, or a little over £2,000, at the time of signing. His lawyer handed me a package of crisp banknotes and asked me to count them. I did so deliberately, the purchaser looking on with a sardonic smile.

"Correct," said I, laying the package on the table. He bowed very deeply.

"Are you satisfied, Mr. Smart, that there are no counterfeits among them?" he inquired, with polite irony; then to his lawyer: "Take the gentleman's receipt for the amount in the presence of witnesses. This is a business transaction, not a game of chance." It was the insult perfect.

As he prepared to take his departure he assumed an insinuating air of apology and remarked to me:

"I owe you an apology, Mr. Smart. There was a time when I did you an injustice. I suspected you of keeping your mistress here. Pray forgive my error."

Five days later I was snugly ensconced in the ducal suit at the Bristol, overlooking the Kartnerringstrasse, herself or my betrothed personally was not at all sorry. My romance had been short lived. It is one thing to write novels about medieval castles and quite another thing to try to write a novel in one of them. I trust I may never again be guilty of such arrant stupidity as to think that an American born citizen can become a feudal baron by virtue of his dollars and casts any more than an American born girl can hope to be a real, dyed in the wool countess or duchess because some one needs the money more than she does. It would be quite as impossible, contrariwise, to transform a noble duke into a plain American citizen, as there you are, even up.

My plans were made. After a fortnight in Vienna I expected to go west to London for the autumn and then back to New York. Strange to relate, I was homesick. Never before had my thoughts turned so resolutely, so wistfully to the haunts of my boyhood days. I began to long for the lights of Broadway, which I had cordially detested in other days, and the gay peacockery of Fifth avenue at 4 in the afternoon. It seemed to me that nowhere in all the world was life so joyous and bizarre and worth while as in "old New York;" nowhere were the theatres so attractive, nowhere such restaurants. Even, in retrospect, the subway looked alluring, and as for the Fifth avenue stages, they were too beautiful for words. Ah, what a builder of surreal things a spell of homesickness may become if one gives it half a chance!

As for Schloss Rothhoefen, I had it on excellent authority (no less a person than Conrad Schmieks himself) that barely had I shaken the dust of the place from myself before the new master put into execution a most extraordinary and incomprehensible plan of reconstruction. In the first place, he gave all the servants two weeks' notice and then began to raze the castle from the bottom upward instead of the other way round, as a sensible person might have been expected to do. He was knocking out the walls in the cellars and digging up the stone floors with splendid disregard for that ominous thing known as a cataclysm. The grave question in the minds of the servants was whether the usual and somewhat mandatory two weeks' notice wouldn't prove a trifle too long after all. In fact, Hawkes, with an inspiration worthy of an office boy, managed to produce a sick grandmother and got away from the place at the end of one week, although having been paid in full for two.

The day on which I left for Paris still saw Tarnoway at work, with his masons, heroically battering down the walls of the grim old stronghold, and I chuckled to myself. It was quite evident that he hadn't found the hiding place up to that time.

After several days in Paris I took myself off to London. I was expecting letters at Claridge's, where I always take rooms—not because I think it is the best hotel in London, but because I am to some extent a creature of habit. My mother took me to Claridge's when I was a boy, and I saw a wonderful personage at the door, whom I was pleased to call the king. Ever since then I have been going to Claridge's, and while my first king is dead there is one in his place, who bids fair to live long, albeit no one shouts encouragement to him. He wears the most gorgeous buttons I've ever seen, and I doubt if King Solomon himself could have been more regal, certainly not Nebuchadnezzar. He works from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, and he has an imperial scorn for anything smaller than half a sovereign.

There were many letters waiting there for me, but not one from the Countess Aline. I had encouraged the hope that she might write to me. It was the least she could do in return for all that I had done for her notwithstanding my wretched behavior on the last day of our association. While I had undoubtedly offended in the most flagrant manner, still my act was not unpardonable. There was tribute, not outrage, in my behavior.

READ THE EVENING EXAMINER

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Gambling Episode.

[Original.]

Half a century ago what is now the middle west was the far west. Parts of Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky were inhabited by a very rough people. I went out there to sell goods when I was a very young man, being about the first salesman to visit the region. Of course I traveled armed and kept my money in a money belt strapped around my waist. I was rather a lively boy and not averse at times to a small game while traveling. Indeed, I carried a pack of cards and dice.

One evening I was on a stagecoach that pulled up at a tavern in a small town in Kentucky on the Ohio river. I had gone there to take the first steamboat that would pass up to Cincinnati, where I could take a railroad train for the east. No one could tell just when a boat would stop there, and I had the prospect of a dreary time ahead of me. In those days in that region gambling was open on the boats and in the taverns. During the evening of my arrival I watched a party of men shaking dice in the bar, which was in the same room with the office. The next day I spent my time watching for a steamboat. A number of boats passed, but none of them had freight or passengers for that landing, for they did not stop. In the evening I went in and watched the dice throwers.

Now, I defy any young man of ordinary spirit spending his time in such a place watching a game without longing to be in it. I resisted for some time, for the men were a bad looking lot, then pulled out some coins and called for the dice box in my turn. I played far into the night and when I got up from the table had parted with every cent of money I had for my expenses, some $300. I was not quite so much of a fool as this confession indicates, for I had noticed that my opponents knew exactly how to roll the dice so that the figures they wished should come up. Besides, I was not especially timid. When cleaned out I reached for the dice and put them in my pocket. The man who had won my money looked threatening, but said nothing. To object would have been to confess that they were loaded. I had no idea of recovering my money by an exposure. I wished to satisfy myself as to whether I had been swindled.

Taking my candle, I went upstairs and to bed. Undressing, I threw my trousers on the back of a chair, not thinking, since I had lost all my money, to take any precautions for their safety, but I didn't care to lose the dice till after I had a chance to break them, so I took them from the pocket and replaced them with my own set, then I went to bed and to sleep.

I was awakened during the night by some one tampering with my door. I lay still and presently heard the door open and a stealthy step in my room. A figure passed the window, and I could hear it searching among my clothes; then it went out. I got up, felt in my trousers' pocket for my dice, and they were gone.

The next morning I was not especially surprised to see some of the men who had my money still about the place. Had they not, as they supposed, secured the dice they would have got out of the way. After breakfast I told the landlord that I suspected that I had been swindled with loaded dice. He professed to be very indignant and swore that if such were the case he would make the men who had won my money disgorge. I told him to call them in and I would prove my charge.

They came, and I could see by their assumed indignation that they were confident that they had their dice and I could prove nothing.

After they had expended sufficient verbal ammunition they called upon me to give a reason for assuming that the dice they had played with were loaded. I asked the landlord for a hammer, and when he had produced it I put my hand in my pocket and pulled out the dice I had kept under my pillow.

"Hold on," said one of them. "Those are not the dice."

"Why so?" I asked.

"Because"— He stopped short. He couldn't own that I had been robbed of a set of dice.

"Crack 'em," I said to the landlord.

Reluctantly he put one of them down on the hearthstone and cracked it. There was the lead plain enough.

The men and the landlord stared at one another, surprised. Meanwhile I had backed to a safe position and had my hand on my pistol. Hearing the stroke of a steamboat bell—a signal to bank fires—I knew that a boat was about to land.

"You men produce my money," I said, "or I'll see what I can do when that boat lands."

The landlord was in no mood for the reputation such a charge would give his place, and after a few words with the others he returned me my losings.

I don't think I should have had the courage to demand my money had I not heard that stroke of a steamboat bell. It came in the nick of time. I stuffed the funds into my pocket, ran upstairs for my belongings and down again, keeping a sharp lookout and my hand on my pistol. Then before going to the landing I said: "You've done the right thing. Never fear that I'll peach on you." The men who had disgorged looked very ugly, but as I could be seen by those on the boat going from the tavern to the landing I felt safe to walk there with my back to those who I knew under other circumstances would shoot me.

DANGER SIGNALS.

No engineer would be mad enough to run by the flag which signaled danger. What the danger was he might not understand, but he would take no chances. It is different with the average man or woman. They attempt constantly to run by the danger signals of nature and that attempt costs thousands of lives every year. When the appetite becomes irregular or entirely gives out, when sleep is troubled and broken, when there is a loss of flesh, when there is a constant feeling of dullness and languor, nature is hoisting the danger signal. The stomach and its allied organs are failing in their work and the body is losing the nutrition on which its strength depends.

It is the world's great blood purifier. It's not a secret remedy for its ingredients are printed on the wrapper. Start to take it to-day and before another day has passed, the impurities of the blood will begin to leave your body through the liver, kidneys, bowels and skin, and in a few days you will know by your clearer mental power, stronger step, brighter eyes and clearer skin that the bad blood is passing out and new, rich, pure blood is filling your arteries. The same good things will cause pimples, sores, eczema and all skin eruptions to dry up and disappear. It's a tonic and body builder. Get it to-day in either liquid or tablet form or write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

ROMANCES OF PEERS WHO DIED FIGHTING

Heroic Exploits of Irish Nationalist Leader, Scottish Earl, Adventurer and Landlord Gone

Lord Congleton, of the Grenadier Guards, is one of the many members of the gallant British House of Lords who died for his country in the war. He was head of the house of Parnell, to which the late Charles Stewart Parnell, the celebrated Irish Nationalist leader, belonged. Lord Congleton had made all his arrangements to accompany Sir Ernest Shackleton on his expedition to the south pole. But on the outbreak of the war he cancelled his plans and joined his regiment for service against the Germans in France. He took his title from the town of Congleton in Cheshire, whence the Parnells hail and whence Tobias Parnell, once an Alderman of the place, migrated to Ireland and purchased an estate there in the reign of Charles II. Lord Congleton, who was fifth of his line, was succeeded in his honors and estates by his younger brother, a young lieutenant of the Royal Navy, serving on board the flagship of Admiral Sir David Beatty.

Sent Abroad

Another peer to give his life for his country was Lord De Freyne, a captain of the South Wales Borderers' Regiment. He had a most romantic career. Having given grave offence to his father by marrying the daughter of a Scotch innkeeper in the little Banffshire town of Rothes, the paternal allowance was stopped and the Hon. Reginald French, as he was then styled, went to America. He endeavored in New York to find some means of livelihood, but, having been educated only for the army, he could not easily obtain civilian employment of a remunerative character. He enlisted in 1900 in New York in the United States infantry, and was assigned to duty with his regiment in the Philippines, where he rose to the rank of sergeant. In course of time he left the American army, by means of an honorable discharge, and was living on the island of Mindanao, the largest of the Philippine archipelago, keeping a store, when he was notified that he had succeeded to his father's honors. Dying without issue, the late Lord De Freyne was succeeded in the family honors by his half brother.

Have Charmed Life

General Lord Longford, 5th Earl of his line, was killed at the head of his brigade in operations against the Turks. He was one of the great ground landlords of Dublin, in which city he owned some 100 acres, producing a rental of some £60,000 a year. He was the head of the house of Pakenham, which has been settled in Ireland since the days of Cromwell. An ancestor, Sir Edward Pakenham, commanded the British forces in the battle of New Orleans, where he was killed. Lord Longford, who leaves a 17-year-old boy to inherit his honors, was the younger of twins, and had been regarded as bearing a charmed life, having had the most miraculous escapes on several occasions.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS

Interesting Facts About Former Russian Army Chief

Grand Duke Michael, who has been a resident of England for many years, says of Grand Duke Nicholas, the late commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, whose masterful retreat from Galicia aroused the admiration even of his German adversaries, that in Russia he is described by those who know him well as "a man of pity and iron." He still lives the life of a simple soldier, while his men worship him. In times of peace Nicholas was intensely interested in the breeding of horses for hunting and possesses the finest stable of hunters in the world. His particular hobby is bear hunting and in his palace near Petrograd he has a wonderful collection of bears he has killed with his own hand. While hunting bears he has repeatedly found himself in danger of his life and only his coolness and presence of mind have saved him. His wife, one of the most beautiful women of the Russian court, is a daughter of King Nicholas of Montenegro and thus a sister to Queen Helen of Italy.

Berlin's Suicide Rate

Some light on Germany's behavior in starting the war is thrown by suicide tables for the past few years. Berlin shows a rate thr e times that of London, a half more than New York and a fourth more than Paris. Life is apparently so complete in Berlin that the happy inhabitants get through with it quickly, and now the entire nation has become so satisfied with its career that it wants to put an end to it in the same way. As the individual is bent the nation's inclined.

BOYS AS MEN SPIES

Record Exposed in the Friendly French Regiment—The Importance

There is evidence to show that the Germans are expecting more to spy for them. One of these boys has been caught, says a European writer. One came in the French army, by reason possibly of his favorable appearance, has done excellent work, and in that capacity in a regiment which has covered itself with glory so many times that all its Nationalists and captains have risen from the ranks. When this regiment reached a certain point, it encountered a boy who was in a starving condition. The officers were moved to pity, and the lad was adopted by the regiment. A uniform was made for him, and he became a general pet. He had funny ways about him, and when they were not fighting, the officers and men found amusement by watching his pranks.

Occasionally the boy would absent himself from time to time. When he disappeared the officers were not in the least alarmed, for they knew that he would turn up all right. One day an unpleasant surprise was sprung upon the regiment. An officer found the boy carefully measuring the emplacement of a heavy battery which had not yet entered into action. "What are you doing?" said the officer. The lad made no reply. Then the officer, realizing that the boy was engaged in spying, threatened to blow out his brains. Whereupon the youngster replied: "You cannot shoot me, as I have not reached the age of discretion." The boy was promptly taken to the rear where he was placed in safe custody. He was found to be the son of a German, who became a naturalized Frenchman and married a Frenchwoman.

Lanolins Waterproofing

Lanolin, the fat extracted from wool in the process of cleaning it for manufacture, is being used by the French authorities for waterproofing the clothing of their soldiers in the field. The wool fat is made liquid by dissolving it in benzine, naptha, or petrol. Underwear soaked for a short time in this liquid dry quickly when hung in the open, leaving the cloth impregnated with lanolin and practically waterproof. Neither the color nor the cloth is in any way affected by the treatment.

Growing Old by Degrees.

Growing old has many stages. You can remember the time when in reading your favorite author you were disgusted to find that he had made his hero forty years old, and you wondered how he could be guilty of imputing romance to such an unromantic age. By and by, even though you found forty years to be the old age of youth, you were solaced by the thought that it was the youth of old age, and still later you will wonder where youth ends and old age begins.—Neal Brown in National Magazine.

Tax Disastrous to Drama

The proposed extension of the amusement tax now levied upon variety houses, motion picture theatres and circuses, so as to apply to the dramatic stage, has evoked strong protests from many sides. The tax has already forced one circus to close its doors, after an existence of many years, and has driven a number of cinematograph houses out of business. The theatre managers declare the tax will be even more disastrous for legitimate drama.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

TORONTO WATER TURNED DOCTOR'S HAIR WHITE

"That d— stuff you put in the water has bleached my hair," was the vigorous complaint made to Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, M.O.H., by a Toronto doctor who has a dislike for chlorine. But Dr. Hastings was undaunted.

"Buck up man and admit the truth that you are getting old," he replied. "My hair was bleached 30 years ago, and chlorine did not do it. Don't let anybody hear you say that chlorine changed the colour of your hair.

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

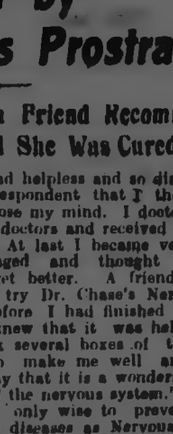
Mrs. Edith May Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.



A very dainty frock is this, and one which may be worn in the school room or at home with equal propriety. The yoke and sleeves are in one piece, the sleeves being either full length or shorter, as preferred, and with either a turnback cuff or a simple band finish. The yoke does not extend quite to the centre of the front, but leaves an open space, which is filled in with a plain vest extending from the neck to the hem of the garment.

The sides of the front are joined to the yoke without fulness and hang straight to the edge. The vest is left open and has a small, flat collar at sides and back.

This is one of the frocks which can be developed advantageously in two materials and suggests itself for a style when altering last year's garments. It is usually the centre of the front of a dress that is spotted or worn and this can be replaced with new material. The entire yoke and sleeves may also be in contrast with the rest of the dress, and here again is a help when remodelling.

Serge in one or two colors or combined with a plain or a striped silk will be serviceable, and, of course, the many wash materials offer a wide field for selection.

The dress pattern, No. 7,316, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires, as shown, 1⅞ yards of 36 inch figured material and 1¼ yards of 36 inch plain goods. In one fabric the dress will require 2½ yards of 36 inch width.

RUSSIAN ARMY AGAINST BULGARS

Three Greatest Allies in Complete Accord to Assist Serbs

PARIS, Oct. 12—Russian troops will be fighting in the Balkans to-morrow. There is a complete accord between France, Great Britain and Russia, and all have sufficient troops to throw into the Balkans without weakening any front.

These declarations were made in the Chamber of Deputies to-day by Premier Viviani, in reply to a resolution adopted earlier in the day by a committee, which read:

"The committee is convinced of the necessity of a complete and immediate explanation on the part of the Government."

Russ to Fight Bulgar.

"Our principal preoccupation is the defence of our front and the liberation of our territories," declared M. Viviani. "France and Britain, however, will go to the help of Serbia, and to-morrow Russia will throw her troops against Bulgaria.

"France, Great Britain and Russia are in complete accord. Sufficient troops are available without weakening any front.

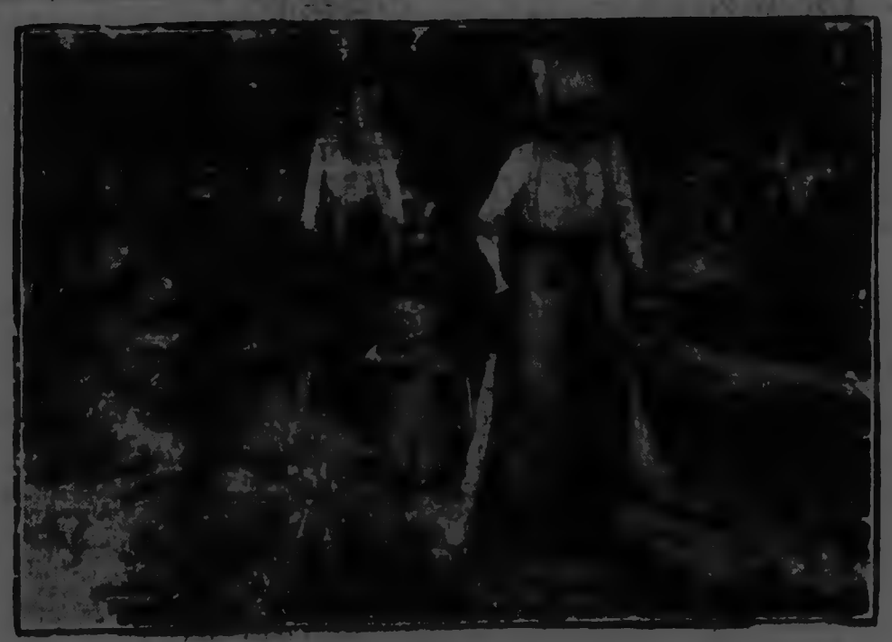
"The Balkan question was raised at the outset of the war, even before it came to the attention of the world. The Bucharest treaty had left in Bulgaria profound heart-burnings. Neither King nor people were resigned to the loss of the fruits of their efforts and sacrifices and to the consequences of the unjustifiable war they had waged upon their former allies. From the first day the allied Governments took into account the dangers of such a situation, and sought a means to remedy it. Their policy had proceeded in the spirit of justice and generosity which has characterized the attitude of Great Britain, Russia, Italy, as well as France.

TWO BLIND HEROES MARRIED IN PARIS

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Mr. Joseph Amar, of Washington, D.C., who enlisted in the French Foreign League and lost his sight in the early part of the war, married to-day Mlle. Madeleine Rosnau. The ceremony took place in the Mayor's office in the company of a large number of sightless companions of the American.

Immediately afterward Mr. Georges Artal, a hero of Les Esparges and also sightless, married Mlle. Amelie Margerie. The ceremonies were followed by a luncheon and a concert.

Mr. Lamar was at Lyons in connection with the exposition when the war broke out and he immediately enlisted. Since he has been at the soldiers' home he has learned to make trimmings for lace curtains.



SUFFRAGISTS OF LONDON GIVE TIMELY HELP IN TIMES OF STRESS—Large numbers of London ladies sent by the Women's National Political League are giving badly needed help to the Worcestershire hop growers. Camps are made right out in the fields, and a hospital provided to look after the ailments of any of the workers.

CULTIVATING CONTENTMENT

AMONG the many fables Tolstoy wrote embodying economic and moral truths, one is that about a Russian peasant who sold his soul to the devil for land. This peasant had never owned a foot of land. He thought that if he could only possess a certain field he had rented for years, he would be the happiest man in the world. So he made a bargain with the devil and got that field. After a while he coveted the field next to it, and got that. Then he wanted another piece to round out his holdings, and got it. Then he wanted a farm, and then a country estate, and got both. But still he was not satisfied.

One day he heard that a tribe over in the Tartar country, a man might buy for a little money, as much land as he could run around between sunrise and sunset. So he sold out his estate and journeyed there. His bargain was quickly struck with the Tartar chief and next morning the whole tribe gathered on a hilltop to see him start. He was stripped for running, and darted off in a straight line the moment the sun showed over the horizon. All day he ran and ran. He would come to a fertile valley and say, "I must have that," and run around it, or hurry out of his course to take in a piece of fine woods or meadowland. He ran and ran. By sunset he had to speed desperately to reach the sinking sun, but succeeded in reaching the hilltop and the waiting tribe just as it disappeared, completing his course. And then he fell dead with exhaustion, and the Tartar chief chuckled mockingly—he was the devil.

Conditions to-day are identical to those in the days when this fable was written. In the present-day struggle for wealth, power and greatness of all degrees, the spirit of contentment seems to have been lost. How often we set our hearts on something which we are fully convinced will bring us happiness, and we feel that we cannot rest until we have attained it. If we were to carefully weigh in the balance the fancied desires of this "hurry up" age, however, and find how little real hapiness these desires create for others, would we not strive more earnestly to cultivate a spirit of contentment in the things we now have? —M.M.R.

A well-known artist was once engaged upon a sacred picture. A very handsome old model named Smith sat for the head of St. Mark. Artist and model became great friends, but when the picture was finished they lost sight of one another.

One day, however the artist, wandering about the Zoological Gardens, came upon his old model, with a broom in his hand, looking very disconsolate.

"Halloa, Smith," said he, "you don't look very cheery. What are you doing now?"

"Well, I ain't doin' much, sir, and that's a fact. I'm engaged in these 'ere gardens a-cleanin' out the elephants' stables; a nice occupation for me as was one of the 12 apostles, ain't it, sir?"

Cramp is very common among pantry, yet there are many keepers who do not know how to deal with it. Cramp in the feet can be cured by the following method: Take a piece of tape, very narrow, two turns round the leg under the claw, pull it up tightly once round the leg, then the same under each claw, and fasten off. In two or three days the sufferers are cured.

Choice Recipes

NOW that the apple season is on, thrifty housewives will be taking advantage of their apple orchards and making all sorts of tempting dishes from this luscious fruit. Probably apple pie, apple sauce, and baked apples are the most common ways of preparing the fruit for the table. Below are a few dishes which may suggest variation in the menu:

Birds' Nest

Fill a pie tin which has perpendicular sides with apples cored and cut into lengths or sliced. Add a very little water, cover with a biscuit crust and bake 25 minutes, or until the apples are tender. When baked, turn the crust side down on a platter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, and serve with cream.

Apple Sauce Pudding

Cream one-quarter cup butter with one-half cup of brown sugar; add one beaten egg, two tablespoons of milk, one-half teaspoon of baking powder, and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Bake in two layers. Put together with apple sauce while hot, and serve with custard.

Apple Dumplings

Fill well-buttered muffin pans full of rather thick apple sauce. Rub two tablespoons of butter into two cups of flour, two teaspoons baking powder, and one teaspoon of salt. Add enough milk to make a soft dough, and drop one large tablespoon on top of each pan of apple sauce. Bake for twenty minutes in a rather hot oven. Serve hot with lemon sauce or maple syrup.

Date and Apple Pie.

Line a plate with a rather rich crust; fill it with a mixture of chopped dates and apples, sprinkle over half a cup of sugar and one teaspoon of cinnamon; add two tablespoons of water; cover with crust and bake in a moderate oven.

Baked Apples.

Six large apples, one cupful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of butter, quarter of a teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon. Round Red Northern Spies as perfect as possible are best. Wipe and remove the cores; then fill the centres with the following mixture: Cream the butter and sugar together; add the flour and cinnamon, and mix well. Bake in a hot oven until soft. Baste with the rest of the sugar stirred into a little hot water. There should be a rich thick gravy around the apples when done. They are delicious with or without cream.

Peach Conserve.

Five pounds peaches, five pounds sugar, five oranges, one and a half pounds walnuts and one pound seeded raisins. Slice the peaches, put oranges through the food grinder (peel included), break up walnuts coarsely. Boil until thick, stir to prevent burning. Seal in jelly glasses with melted paraffine.

WHY REMAIN POOR

Incorporate for two years only, with capital 1,000 geese—$1,000.

Each goose lays an average of three eggs per week, or 156 per year. Do not sell any eggs, but incubate them, thus raising in the first year 156,000 geese.

Statistics show that of this number 77,000 will be ganders, which will be sold, leaving with the original capital a total of 80,000 geese. These will lay 156 eggs each, which will be incubated, giving at the end of the second year 12,481,000 geese plus ganders sold first year, 77,000; total, 12,558,000.

Each goose will produce 2 lbs. feathers, 25,116,000 lbs. feathers, at $15 per lb.	$376,740,000

HON. MR. WHITE'S RECANTATION.

Finance Minister W. T White sees more than a mere business transaction in the new half billion loan floated by the Allies in the United States. "A loan of such magnitude could not be arranged without a lot of international good will behind it"; he says, "and this to me," he adds, "is one of its most gratifying features.' No objection can be taken to such a statement. It is fair and reasonable, and fully justified by the evidence available. But what a commentary it is upon the campaign in which Mr. White and his friends were found in 1911, when the mere suggestion of a little extension of trade with the people of the United States was treated as treason to Canada and the British Empire.—Brantford Expositor.

SIMPLE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, gloss, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

All the New Ground Won By the British Forces Held Firmly

No Important Changes Reported To-day--All German Counter Attacks in the Loos Region Repulsed---Fierce Artillery Fighting at Many Points Along the Western Battle Front.

BRITISH SUB SINKS GERMAN DESTROYER

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The retention against all German counter-attacks of all the ground gained by the British in Wednesday's fighting in the Loos region was claimed in despatches from the Western front to-day. No important changes were reported along the Franco-German front.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—A violent bombardment raged throughout Thursday night before Loos, announced the French official statement to-day. A fierce artillery fight progressed also north-east of Souchez. There were hot grenade exchanges in the trenches south of Bolsen-Hache. At Lihon, between the Oise and the Aisne, and all along the Champagne front, the Germans directed an intense cannonade against the French front, the Gallic batteries replying energetically. The statement mentioned concentrated artillery firing east of Auberive.

The French silenced a violent artillery bombardment and repulsed an infantry attack before Letricourt in Lorraine, the statement said, and directed an effective fire against the German works north of Reillon. Trench engine fighting was reported in the Vosges near Chapelotte, and at the summits of the Linge Hills and Barrenkopf. Heavy cannonading was reported at Hartmannsweilerkopf and Fudle.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Austrians and Germans were desperately engaged with the Serbians south of the Serbian northern frontier town of Semendria to-day. Fighting is heavy in the Morava Valley, four miles from the Danube.

Another battle raged between the Serbians and the Bulgarians on the Serbian eastern frontier. From all the Allied capitals came statements indicating that a huge British, French, Italian and Russian force would be sent to oppose the Teutonic advance.

The Germans were not more than holding their own against the Russians in the north-east.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 15.—Attacking a German cruiser and two destroyers at the south entrance to Oer Sound to-day, a British submarine torpedoed one destroyer, which sank, exploding, according to advices from Falsterbo, Sweden. The cruiser and second destroyer escaped it was stated.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The loss by the Russians of some of the ground they recently gained against the Austrians in Galicia was admitted in Petrograd messages to-day, but it was asserted the Czar's forces still retained many of their positions in the Strypa region. The Berlin version was that the Austrians had driven the invaders back across the river.

MILAN, Oct. 15.—An Athens despatch to the Corriere Della Sera says that in exchange for armed neutrality, the Entente will furnish Greece with funds for keeping up its armaments, and that the National Bank of Greece already has received a credit of six million dollars from London and Paris.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The British casualties at the Dardanelles up to Oct. 10th was 96,899. Of this total the number of men killed was 18,957, of whom 1,185 were officers. The casualties of the Australian and the New Zealand contingents were 29,121.

BERLIN, Via London, Oct. 15.—"The Russians have pierced our positions north-east of Wessolowo," an official War Office bulletin admitted this afternoon.

BERLIN, Via London, Oct. 15.—The Bulgarians have captured the passes between Bjelogradcik and Knjazevac, announced the War Office to-day.

Knjazevac is a Serbian town about thirty miles north-east of Nish, the present capital. Bjelogradcik is opposite it, on the Bulgarian side of the frontier, which is midway between them.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Believing that six German officers of the interned German cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, at Norfolk, have escaped on the yacht Eclipse, and may be trying to damage British commerce in the South Atlanti, the Navy Department to-day revoked leave for all Germans on the Kronz Prinb and also the Prinz Eitel Fredrich.

The German seamen and officers will be kept prisoners in their ships until it is positively determined whether the six officers have violated their parole.

BIG CAMPAIGN FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND NEXT MONTH

$7,500,000 Is the Amount Announced by St. Herbert Ames as the Figure Aimed At—2,000 Families Are Now Assisted

AND THERE WILL BE MORE

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—A campaign for $7,500,000 is to be instituted by the Canadian Patriotic Fund on November 1st it was announced by Sir Herbert Ames here to-day. During the year ending Sept. 1st the Patriotic Fund succeeded in raising $5,[illegible],000. Some 20,000 families are now being assisted by the fund, and by next year it is anticipated this number will be increased to 25,000. As a result of the greater number of calls now being made the expenditure is now exceeding the revenue.

Figures were issued to-day showing the per capita and total contributions of the different provinces. The average was 70 cents per head, while Manitoba contributed $1.42 per capita. The lowest rate was in the Maritime Provinces, which contributed 36 cents per capita. Quebec was above the average with 89 cents, while Ontario was below with 68 cents per head.

Requirements From Provinces.

The amounts raised by provinces were as follows: Quebec, $1,675,000; Ontario, $1,750,000; Maritime Provinces, $325,000; Manitoba, $750,000; Saskatchewan, $240,000; Alberta, $220,000; British Columbia, $870,000. The estimated requirements for the year, commencing Sept. 1, based on enlistment by provinces, are as follows: Quebec, $1,250,000; Ontario, $2,400,000; Martime Provinces, $550,000; Manitoba, $1,000,000; Saskatchewan, $600,000; Alberta, $1,000,000; British Columbia, $850,000. Head office, etc., $50,000. The total is $7,500,000.

The figures show that Quebec, Ontario, and the Maritime Provinces need less than $1 per capita on a basis of enlistment, while Alberta, which has per population enlisted more soldiers than any other province, will require about $2 per head. However, each province will not be called upon to raise its own needs, although such a plan has been advocated, but the funds will be pooled.

Some Ontario counties have done well. Halton County raised $25,000 by special tax, and with it met the demands of all soldiers' families within its limits for the period of a year, while in addition $37,000 was raised for the Patriotic Fund. The German-Canadian County of Waterloo has contributed no less than $120,000 to date, the best showing of any county. Other counties promise to do as well, and it is not expected there will be great difficulty in raising even the large sum of $7,500,000 required through the response of Canadians to the patriotic appeal to be made to them.

THE SEPARATION ALLOWANCE CHEQUES ARE COMING SHORTLY

Patriotic Society Officially Advised of That Fact From Ottawa---Good News For Married Men of Peterborough Battalion --- New Marching Song Adopted---To-day's Military News.

There still being a feeling of uncertainty among the wives of the enlisted men who are drilling in Peterborough, as to the non-arrival of the separation allowances, the Militia Council at headquarters was communicated with, and the following reply received at the Patriotic [illegible]-day:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of Oct. 7th, with reference to the separation allowance for the company of the 80th Battalion, which is quartered in Peterborough. In reply, I am to say that I have been to Barriefield, and an officer has been to Peterborough and obtained the separation allowance cards for all men who are entitled to same, and these are here now at Ottawa. Accounts are being opened and cheques will be forwarded with as little delay as possible.

"If after the month there are any cases which are not adjusted, I will be glad to have details of the same and will immediately take up the matter." Yours truly,

A. Raven, for A. & P. M. G.

PARCELS RECEIVED.

The 57th Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, have received the following letter from Gunner Bruce Sloan, one of the Peterborough boys at the front with the 4th Battery, 1st Canadian Artillery Brigade:

Belgium, Sept 9th.

Just a line to let you know I have just received a parcel containing 84 tins of chocolate from Miss Mary Plummer, Shorncliffe. This is the fourth parcel we have received from you, one containing socks, one tobacco and cigarette, and two of chocolate. It certainly pleases the boys very much to think that they are so well remembered by the Daughters of the Empire. We also received a box of chocolate from the Progressive Club of Peterborough. I am sure that those two societies have done all in their power to help the boys along out here, and I am sure we all feel deeply indebted to you. Thanking you once again.

Gunner Bruce Sloan,
4th Battery, 1st Brigade,
1st Canadian Division, B. E. F.

Five members of last year's Port Hope Junior O. H. A. team have enlisted. They are Jack Edmunds, R. Bennett, Lorne Emmerson, P. Darch and Cyril Brown. Sandercock, last year's Lindsay captain, enlisted some time ago. Two members of Peterborough's last year's juniors, Harold Knapman and Harold Morrow, are now wearing khaki, as are Maurice Park and Skid James of the Intermediates.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—Enlistment figures show that 164,000 men have been enrolled in Canada for overseas service since the beginning of the war. Of these 85,000 have been sent across the Atlantic. Another 50,000 men will be enlisted as soon as the War Office gives the word.

Men enlisting in Canada for overseas service are distributed as follows: London camp, 4,425; Niagara camp, 12,634; Barriefield camp, 3,946; Ottawa, 1,814; Montreal, 872; Valcartier, 6,365; maritime provincet, 2,985; Sewell, Man., 7,148; Port Arthur, 1,116; Brandon, 747; Winnipeg, 601; Saskatchewan, 337; Prince Albert, 112; Vernon, B.C., 4,480; Vancouver and Victoria, 1,897; Calgary, 6,646; en route overseas, 1,586. The First Contingent and reinforcements totalled 76,195 and the Second Contingent and reinforcements totalled 69,495.

The enlistment constitutes about 2 per cent. of the total population (men, women and children).

The names of 12,000 Canadians have appeared on casualty lists, and of these a third have returned to the firing line.

BARRIEFIELD WAR CAMP, Oct. 14.—The conference to be held in Ottawa on Friday between all the officers commanding divisions and districts and the militia staff with Major-General Sir Sam Hughes will be one of the greates importance to the military affairs of Canada for the balance of the war. Recruiting will be one of the subjects under discussion, and it has been suggested that a recruiting bureau should be organized and given charge of all work connected with the securing and distribution of recruits. The question of wintering troops in Canada is another question that will come up in the conference. Many are of the opinion that the billeting system would make it impossible to train men efficiently for overseas service, and that the maintenance of discipline would be impossible in this way. The concentration of complete units in cities where they can be properly trained is favoured by most military men. It is also claimed that the breaking up of battalions into companies, widely distributed for training, destroys the esprit de corps of the best unit, and should be discountenanced.

Pte. Harold Mollon, now in training with the local Overseas Battalion, was the recipient of a beautiful present from his former employees, the Cressman Co., and staff. Below is the address:

Mr. Harold Mollon, City.

Dear Fellow Worker,—We are sorry indeed to see you leave us, but we know you are doing what you see to be your duty. Please accept these small tokens of our esteem, and hope you may be spared to come back to us safe and sound. Wishing you good luck. We remain, Cressman's Employees and Staff.

Pte. Mollon wishes to express his thanks for the splendid gifts.

He was one of the best players on "Billy" Duncan's team for several seasons, but was an absentee last winter, which he spent in Montreal. Ernie had been back in Midland since last spring, and his services were being counted upon for the coming season. RECOMMEND $5,000 TO BRITISH RED CROSS

And Citizens Who Met Last Night Will Wait on Council Saturday Night to Urge This Contribution From Peterborough—May Be Raised by Debentures.

SERIOUS ATTITUDE NEEDED

That Peterborough contribute not less than $5,000.00 to the British Red Cross Society and that the City Council be asked to provide this sum was the resolution considered at a largely attended representative meeting of citizens in the Council chamber last night.

Mayor Buller, who had been chosen as chairman, promised to call a meeting of the Council on Saturday night when the City Fathers will consider the question of raising their original grant of $500.00 to $5,000.00. Five of the aldermen were present last night, Aldermen Green, Edgar, Dobbin, McIntyre and Weir, and they practically gave their approval to a $5,000.00 grant, providing the money was obtained by means of debentures extending over a period of years. Mayor Buller, Ald. Green, Ald. Edgar and Ald. Weir expressed their willingness to support this method, but Ald. McIntyre preferred to withhold his intentions until he had given the subject further thought.

The assembly was composed largely of professional and business men, and there was also a considerable representation of ladies.

Mayor Buller was appointed chairman, on motion of Mr. Walter Stocker, seconded by Mr. J. A. Aylmer.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin was appointed secretary.

Mayor Buller read a telegram from Lieut.-Governor Sir John S. Hendrie, conveying Lord Lansdowne's appeal to Canada for generous support to the British Red Cross Society.

Among the objective set out by various municipalities as contributions to this fund, the Mayor mentioned the following:

Brantford, $5,000.00
Stratford, $10,000.00
Woodstock, $3,513.00
Brock township, $1,500.00.

"South Monaghan," said the Mayor, has already made a splendid gift according to to-night's paper."

Various Views Held.

Naturally there was a divergency of opinions upon various aspects of the requested contributions to the British Red Cross, but on one point there was an unanimity reflecting the swelling determination of Peterborough's citizens to bear their share of the burdens and sacrifices confronting the Mother Country in the crisis. The meeting dealt gently with the Council's proposed contribution of $500.00 but they did not conceal their belief that the entire city was dissatisfied with the Council's decision.

Judge Huycke's View

Mr. B. F. Ackerman remarked that the Council should set an example by rescinding their $500.00 motion.

His Honour Judge Huycke said that he had great admiration for the Mayor and the Council, but he was ashamed of it the other night when he learned of their action. He felt that the people were ashamed of it, and best of all he was led to believe that Mayor Buller was ashamed of it. He said he did not forget that there were many calls being made, but this and the Patriotic Fund were the particular calls.

DOUBLE DROWNING OF TWO LINDSAY MEN LAST NIGHT

Mr. Allan Gillies, Proprietor of the Daily Warder, and Mr. Chas. W. Hall Thrown From Launch in Collision With Stump.

BROTHER IN PETERBORO'

Examiner Special:

LINDSAY, Oct. 15.—Mr. Allan Gillies, proprietor of the Lindsay Warder, and Mr. Chas. W. Hall, a local barber, were the victims of a double drowning, which occurred last night in the lower Scugog River, near No. 12 lighthouse.

Mr. Hall is a brother of Mr. Vincent Hall of Peterborough, who is employed with Mr. Archie Campbell, a George street barber.

The two men set out from Lindsay yesterday afternoon in Mr. Gillies' launch for a trip down the river. When twilight began to settle they turned the launch homeward, but in the gathering darkness lost the boat channel near the lighthouse.

Collided With Stump.

Shortly after six o'clock the launch, moving at its customary speed, collided with a stump with a force sufficient to practically capsize the vessel. Its hull was punctured on either side of the bow, and both Mr. Gillies and Mr. Hall were thrown into the water by the impact of the collision.

Farmers Heard Shouts.

Farmers residing nearby heard shouts and cries for help. They hurried to the water and shoved out logs toward Mr. Hall who was swimming toward a crib.

Their efforts were fruitless, however, for Hall must have died from exhaustion and shock almost at that in most. His body was found floating on the surface shortly afterwards.

Although a searching party worked throughout the night and this morning they have not yet recovered the body of Mr. Gillies. The launch was found shortly after the accident in three feet of water and about sixty feet from the regular channel.

Fatality Casts Gloom.

This double fatality spread a deep gloom over the townspeople as the news of the accident became known. Both men were widely known, and Mr. Gillies was particularly prominent in many of Lindsay's activities. Eight years ago he came here from Stratford, where he had been busine a manager of the Stratford Herald. He took charge of the Warder, which was then a weekly paper and established the Daily Warder. He was a prominent member of the Canadian Press Association and was recognized as a newspaperman of all-around abilities. He was identified with various fraternal organizations and was president and organizer of the Advancement Club. He leaves a wife and four small children.

Mr. Hall who was born near Omemee is survived by his wife and infant son, his widowed mother, one sister, Mrs. Cote, of Lindsay, and one brother, Mr. Vincent Hall of Peterborough.

CHILDREN'S AID TAG DAY.

This is by way of reminder that to-morrow is Children's Aid Tag Day, in behalf of one of the greatest interests that can enlist our substantial support. There are two reasons why we should respond to the appeal—the need for funds is great, and the duty of supplying them is great. It is hoped that no one from want of thought will be unable to respond to the appeal. Thought of the occasion must lead to action, and general action will lead to good results. Unless there is generous contribution, the society will be still greatly lacking in funds to carry on effectively its important work.

THE RED CROSS.

The Red Cross work, its needs and its obligations are always in our minds, if our minds are right. But they will be especially present with us to-night when Dr. Ryerson, president of the Canadian Red Cross, will deliver an address in Collegiate Hall. His subject will take him again over the ground he has recently traversed—the trenches where wounded soldiers meet their misfortunes, and the hospitals where they are treated. The pictures he will present, and the needs he will make plain, will quicken our moral sympathy and stimulate to practical action. There should be a large attendance on this important occasion. In addition to the most interesting address, the viva voce pictures of war scenes, especially associated with Red Cross interests and activities, there will be an excellent programme of patriotic music, and although incidentally mentioned, what is very much to the point, a collection, instead of a fixed admission fee.

OFFICIAL STUPIDITY.

A report from Ottawa gives us a striking instance of official stupidity, or the wrong point of view of patriotic duty, and common fairness. An engineer of the Waterworks Department enlisted for active service and was given the munificent bonus of two weeks' pay. His position is not to be filled, and the committee uses the money saved by not having to pay his salary to increase the salary of remaining officials of the department. This is in effect encouraging recruiting by bonusing men to stay at home. Logically the man who stay at home, who are in effect doubly benefitted, by increased pay and the protection afforded by the enlisted men, who are unwilling to enlist—if they do not fight, should pay, so that the burden of patriotic sacrifice for the country and cause, should in small degree be equalized. It is not equalized when the salary forfeited by one patriotic man, to engage in higher service, is used to reward with substantial increase of salary, the men who won't enter the higher service. The sacrifice is all on one side. If the Ottawa Waterworks committee had turned over the salary saved to the patriotic fund, or the Red Cross fund, there would be some sense and fairness in their action; but to use it to reward shirkers is adding insult to injury. Their action is in line with the sharks who would, as many have done, make money out of the agony of this war. They profit while others sacrifice. While the hearts of wives and mothers are broken in the noble sacrifice of giving their all to the war, these bandits practically rob the country and the cause, by scheming and getting extra profit out of the country's extremity, literally seizing blood money. We have not all of us come to the proper point of view in regard to our responsibility of sacrifice in saving Canada and the Empire, and humanity. Where all are benefitted by the sacrifices necessarily made in waging a righteous war, all should suffer in some way or other in the sacrifice necessary to win the victory.

LIQUOR RESTRICTION AND FAIR PLAY.

There are no two opinions, regarding the wisdom of shortening the hours of sale of strong drink in licensed bars. We spend much money and apply stringent regulations to make the soldier physically fit; and, to take no higher ground, it stands to reason that any cause that makes the soldier not only physically unfit but impairs his morale, should be removed; or lessened, if it cannot wholly be removed. On this ground the action of the government in decreeing the closing of all bars throughout the province at 8 o'clock, is amply justified, as an earlier hour of closing would have been justified.

But there are two aspects to this question, one of which there is a tendency to ignore. We should not to effect good commit injustice, should not do a wrong thing in doing a right thing. The British Empire is a fair play empire; Canada, as a part of it, is a fair play country. On economic or moral grounds, the liquor traffic hasn't one claim to existence. It is not a productive industry, but a destructive industry, outside of the comparatively limited area of its operation as applied to industry and art. But with all this, it must, in fairness, be remembered that it is a legalized, if it is not, morally and economically, a legitimate, industry. It has the protection of the law. Parliament has legalized it, and under this legalization men have invested money and secured a perfect legal right to conduct the liquor business. The government receives a large revenue from it; our penny-wise Provincial Government is really in the business itself,- through exacting a share of the direct profits of the bar. Legally and in fair play the government is bound to protect the liquor traffic in the exercise of its legal rights.

The early closing of the bar stands to largely diminish the profits of the bar, and to this extent the license holder is entitled to compensation; to the benefit of business fair play. He has paid a heavy license fee for permission to do business within prescribed hours. He has upon this understanding, made large expenditures and contracted to pay heavy rental. In justice and fair play he is entitled to a proportional reduction of his license fee, if not, indeed a reduction of rental. The government is not doing right in connection with its reduction of the hours of sales of liquor. Shops are closed at 7 o'clock; and bars after November 1st must be closed at 8 o'clock; but clubs are not interfered with; they virtually stay wide open every hour of the day and night. The bar is regarded as the poor man's club, and though he would be infinitely better without it, he should not be discriminated against by a government which is supposed to hold the balance even as between all classes. There should not be one law for the rich and another for the poor. We are fighting in this cruel war for the good involved in the principle of democracy, the supremacy and equality of the rights and privileges of the people. We are fighting for the principle of fair play and just dealing as between individuals as well as nations. We do wrong, if by law or government decree, or regulation, we discriminate in the matter of rights and privileges between classes; if we favour the well-to-do and relatively penalize the man or class of men, with less means.

HIGH WAGES, NATIONAL GAIN.

British railway employees have secured wage advances aggregating 60 million dollars a year. In Britain money paid as wages is not regarded as a loss to the nation. On the contrary it is regarded as the most profitable payment.—The Globe.

THE NECESSITY AND DUTY OF MAKING SACRIFICES FOR WAR

Every citizen ought to be prepared to put no less than half his current income at the disposal of the state, either by tax or loan.—Mr. E. S. Montague, financial secretary of the treasury in the British House of Commons.

Before the war is ended the government may find it necessary to take, not 50, but 100 per cent. of those extra profits, (made as the result of war conditions and if they do I hope that none of us will complain.—Chairman of the Steel Company of Scotland at annual meeting of stockholders.

Statements like these should give Canadians food for serious thought. We here in Canada are just as vitally interested in the result of this awful conflict as the people of the United Kingdom, but because we are 3,000 miles away from the actual scene of the fighting, and because, as a producing country, we are positively benefitting in a material way through the sale of our products to the belligerents, it is difficult for us to continually retain that point of view.

For instance, how many of us have reached the frame of mind of the chairman of the Scottish steel company quoted above, who, in addressing his shareholders, declared that "there is something absolutely revolting in the idea of anybody making profits out of the nation's agony"? The declaration, we are told, was greeted with applause by the people whose prospective dividends he was suggesting should be materially cut or entirely wiped out. A few months ago we had evidence that there were even members of Canada's Parliament who not only had no such perception of patriotic duty, but who were of the opinion that war time provided a legitimate opportunity for raiding the public coffers. The exposure of these greedy ones did some good, but is there not reason to believe that their sentiment is still being put into practice beneath the surface?

In Britain the government, taking the bull by the horns and determined that the present generation shall set an example of sacrifice to the generations to follow that must continue to bear the heavy burden of a war with the making of which they had nothing to do, is imposing very high taxation on all classes of the population. And not only that, but it broadly hints that this taxation must go still higher until every citizen is putting at least half his current income at the disposal of the state either by tax or loan.

What is being done with this money that, apparently with very little complaint, is being taken from the people of the United Kingdom. Mr. Montague said:

"We have had to keep and continue to keep an impregnable navy. We have paid and continue to pay for an army which has increased from a few thousands of men to an army which runs into millions. We are financing by means of loans to our great dominions part of their expenditure on the contingents which are helping us to fight. We are paying, as regards India, the whole cost of the Indian contingents, except their normal peace expenditure. We have advanced to the allies such a sum as it was estimated would equip and maintain in the field three million of their soldiers. We have a right to be proud of our share, and we ought to be proud of the way in which the proposals for meeting the war expenditure have been received by all classes."

Hitherto, Canada has been one of the "great dominions," enjoying the benefit of these moneys so raised. How long can that continue? How long shall we be content to throw upon our descendants the burden that someone must bear?

There is good reason to believe that already Canada has been notified she must in future take care of her own financial part of the war—which is her war just as much as it is the war of the British people. Canada will have to do this by raising a domestic loan—that is a government loan to which Canadians, themselves must subscribe—and by greatly increased taxation.

The Free Press believes that Canadians are just as ready as the old country people to bear a proper share of taxation for the conduct of the war; but only if they get assurance that the taxes they are compelled to pay all go into the state treasury and not into the pockets of selfish contractors and manufacturers who have not yet risen to the heights of the Scottish steel manufacturer. The contractors must be made to return to the state, as in England, a portion of their extra war profits; and manufacturers who benefit from the increased protection supplied by higher customs duties must be compelled to contribute their extra profit to the public war chest.—Ottawa Free Press.

GERMANY'S INFAMOUS ALLIANCE.

We need not emphasize too far the anomalies of the Teuton-Turkish Alliance, but a German alliance with a Government that is systematically engaged in destroying a Christain folk must fall sharply even on a world's conscience hardened by many disillusions. So far as sentiment in this country is concerned, Germany's moral battle-front has been irreparably damaged on its northern flank in Belgium. It cannot be that Berlin is content to allow another Belgium to develop on its southern flank in Armenia.—New York Evening Post.

A WARNING.

It is not Dreadnoughts, but just such cruisers as the Australians built, and just such cruisers as the Canadian navy would have included, that meets Germany in the only kind or warfare she makes at sea. Her Dreadnoughts are safely herded inshore. It is her submarines that have to be fought, and it is not Dreadnoughts that can fight them. The enemy has to be fought at sea, has to be watched for, and there is no telling where he may strike. Even off our own coasts he has to be guarding. Those newspapers which, presuming on the general desire to adoid the discussion of politics, continue at intervals to speak of the tinpot navy would do well to drop it. If the question is forced to a full discussion it will be found to have a number of interesting features.—Toronto Star.

THE LONG VIEW.

There can be no illusion now as to the length of the war. It will, moreover, be very costly in men. We shall have to raise still more armies and make good the terrible wastage. The spirit of the people is admirable. The number of those who talk mischievously of peace is negligible. There is no sacrifice which the vast majority will not be prepared to make, if only they be pursuaded that it is necessary and that success cannot be attained without it. It may be said that those who are not pursuaded by the present posture of events will never be persuaded. But let us have patience. Let us make allowances for suspicion however unreasonable; for prejudices, however out of date; for ignorance, however abysmal. Even now, thousands of people in this country understand very little of this war. It is still remote from them; "its ghastlier workings" are unknown to their experience. But knowledge is spreading, and will continue to spread, if no artificial obstacles are created. The Government must carry the people with them, and that can only be done by persuasion. Patience, therefore, will serve us better than impatience.—London Daily Telegraph.

Manitoba's Methodical Way of Spending Money

New Government Stops All Loopholes for Waste or Diversion of Public Money

The new Government of Manitoba has put into force a financial system which should do much to prevent any such financial crimes as were perpetrated in the Manitoba Parliament buildings in the past. A capable and well-qualified man has been appointed as Comptroller-General of the Province, by a Bill in the House. He cannot be dismissed except by a two-thirds vote of the House, thus, to that extent, being independent of the prevailing Government. Before money can be expended by the Province, the Comptroller must be approached for approval. He has to satisfy himself that the proposed expenditures are legal and the prices quoted fair. If regular, the matter then goes back to the Government department having the particular expenditures in hand. Later, the vouchers come to the Comptroller for payment, so that he has a check upon the expenditures of all the departments at various times, and what is more important, before the proposed expenditures are made. Under his jurisdiction are auditors of receipts, expenditures and purchases. As a further check, a quarterly audit of the accounts of the Comptroller-General will be held by outside, independent auditors. The Province will issue a statement of its purchases and expenditures every month.

This is a brief outline of some of the safeguards which have been adopted by the new Government of a Province which is shaking itself of an unsavoury reputation gathered by its predecessors. It is a real beginning, and will do much to help restore the good name of Manitoba's credit in the world's money markets. —The Monetary Times.

New Corps Troops To Number 10,000 Men

Will Bring Canadian Forces at the Front Up to 40,000—25,000 More Going

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 13.—Particulars of the composition of the new Canadian corps troops which have been added to the two Canadian divisions at the front were received by the Militia Department this morning. The two corps troops which total about 10,000 men and bring the Canadian forces at the front up to the very considerable total of nearly 40,000 men.

The corps troops, commanded by Brigadier-General Mercer, of Toronto, are composed as follows: Canadian cavalry brigade, with a signal troop of about 1,500 men. Field engineer troop of 600 men. Brigade of Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, about 1,700 men. 1st and 2nd brigade mounted rifles, about 3,300 men. Royal Canadian Regiment, 1,000 men. 42nd Montreal Highlanders and 49th Edmonton Battalion, and Princess Patricias, about 4,000 men. Also a troop of engineers, a signal unit, army service corps, and supply and ammunition column.

In addition to the 40,000 men now at the front, upwards of 25,000 men are in training in England.

WAR PRISONERS IN HOLLAND

Camps and Activities of 35,000 Interned Soldiers

More than 35,000 soldiers of three nationalities—Belgian, German and English—have fallen from the skies or have been driven across the frontier into Dutch territory since the outbreak of the European war. For the 32,000 interned Belgian soldiers, there are two types of camps. In one, of which Harderwyk with its 13,000 men may serve as an example, the administration is entirely in the hands of Dutch officers with General H. Loke at the head; in camp of the other type, as to Oldebroek, there is a system of self-government, the Dutch commandent merely supervising.

Life inside the camp is by no means dull. The big circus tent at Harderwyk hints at one form of amusement. Bowling alleys with "homemade" pins furnishing another. Then there is shot putting, and discus throwing, and wrestling and boxing. The camp also includes a moving-picture theatre and a vaudeville house, in which performances are given about three times a week, partly by outside performers but more frequently by home talent.

Wives, Mothers and Sweethearts

Even feminine company is not wanting. Nunspeet, a Belgian refugee camp is near Harderwyk, and the wives, mothers and sweethearts of the interned soldiers are allowed in the camp between 8.30 a.m. and 5 p.m. At Oldebroek, where there are 8,000 soldiers, the Dutch government has erected barrackes for the wives and children of the soldiers immediately outside the camp, and during certain hours the families are allowed to roam about by themselves in the neighborhood woods and fields.

The living accommodation at the camps consist of barracks of rough timber housing about 200 soldiers each. A camp bed, folded back during the day, is constructed of boards. Adjacent to the barracks are washing rooms with running hot and cold water. In addition, there is usually a spacious bathhouse with hundreds of shower baths.

The camp at Harderwyk enjoys the distinction of harboring a hundred professors who in better days lectured at Brussels, Ghent, Antwerp and other Belgian seats of learning. I observed many a professor throwing himself whole-heartedly into the task of teaching elementary geometry, astronomy or agriculture, yes even the mysteries of the alphabet. At Oldebroek, a special effort is now being made to provide vocational education.

Amateurs in Art.

The German camp is in general similar to the Belgian both in equipment and activities. A dilettante artist and sculptor was among those interned. He was forthwith dubbed "Herr professor," and pressed into service to teach the others how to draw portraits of Hindenburg (every barrack had at least one picture of this popular idol), and how to carve wooden objects of art.

A German without music is almost unthinkable. It was not long before a phonograph arrived from Germany, and a Bergen resident loaned her piano. This is not all. It so happens that the wife of the burgomaster of Bergen is a German woman. Frau Van Reenen will never be forgotten by these sons of the Fatherland. From time to time she arranges for out-of-town musicians to furnish a program. She has also made it possible for the soldiers to attend chapel on Sunday where the pastor from Amsterdam preaches to them in their native tongue.

It is typical of the sympathetic nature of the Dutch that arrangements have been made for a number of wives of the married soldiers to come to Bergen as domestics. Their husbands are allowed to visit them, and in one case, when the arrival of a baby made it difficult for the mother to do the housework, a special permit was granted the soldier to come to the family daily from 6 in the morning until 7 in the evening and to perform the duties of nurse while his wife fulfilled her obligations.

By far the best appointed of the camps is that of the 1,500 British prisoners—mostly marine, with a fair sprinkling of Royal engineers—at Groningen. This need not cause surprise when it is remembered that the British subsidized the camp with 90,000 gulden (about $36,000) in addition to the money spent by the Dutch. The interned themselves admit that they are being spoiled by the amount of money and supplies from across the channel.

"We smoke far more than is good for us," runs the general comment.

"Timber Town"

The exterior of the camp presents a finished appearance. The barracks are constructed like those for other nationalities, to be sure, but at Groningen the coat of green and white paint gives this "timber town," as the English "navy" fondly calls it, a more homelike appearance than have the other camps. Window-boxes here and there and gardens throughout the camp add further to the comfort of the place. Even the shamrock is blooming before the mess of the Irish marines, who have as a matter of course been assigned to duty as cooks.

As might be expected, the English at once turned to sports as their principal diversion, or, as one of them put it, as "the brightest side of camp life." Chiefly through the instrumentality of the chaplain, himself an ardent sportsman, an athletic club, a boxing club, a class in gymnastics and a tennis club was formed. Through an arrangement with the Dutch government some 200 of the men are permitted to attend Dutch universities.

As in other camps, the arts and crafts play an important part, the British government furnishing an unlimited supply of leather and fancy woods. Net-making has also been undertaken, and orders have already been received and executed for trawl and herring nets, hammocks, football and tennis net and small string bags. A description of the life at Groningen would be incomplete without mention of the "Timber Town Follies"—amateur theatrica's which afford two jolly hours on three separate nights.

Assisting Ambition

Men of ambition—with the desire to forge ahead—need revitalizing food to help them to compel success.

Grape-Nuts

(Made in Canada)

is a success food. It is made from whole wheat and malted barley and, pound for pound, contains far more "go" and "get there" than ordinary foods.

It retains all the nutriment of the grains, including their mineral mineral salts—Phosphate of Potash etc., often lacking in ordinary food, but essential to thorough upbuilding of sinew, brain and nerves.

Grape-Nuts is practically predigested and agrees with all. It's the ideal vigor-food for child and adult.

YOUR SOLDIER BOY NEEDS ZAM-BUK

Read How They All Ask For It

In your next parcel to your soldier at the front be sure to include a few boxes of Zam-Buk. Remember, they can't buy it out in the trenches, and depend upon you to supply them. Read the following to see how they need it!

Private E. Westfield writes: "We find Zam-Buk very useful. It is the best remedy for sore hands after trench-digging, and for frost-bite cracks and cold sores, which are very common out here. The man who has a box of Zam-Buk is very popular."

Private J. R. Smith, of the "Princess Pats," writing to a friend in Ottawa, says: "Tell the friends if they want to help me, Zam-Buk would be useful indeed."

Private Johnson writes: "Mrs. —— offered to send me a rug. I have written to tell her to send out some Zam-Buk instead. It will be of more use than all the blankets in creation."

Another says: "Advise every one of the boys to bring with him a box of Zam-Buk; it is better than a loaf of bread to a starving man out here."

For sore feet, chafed places, scalp sores, barbed wire scratches, cuts, abscesses, cold sores, chapped hands, etc., Zam-Buk is a veritable marvel. It stops the pain and heals so rapidly. Here is costs but 50c. per box. Out at the front, to your friends in the trenches and engaged on communications, it is priceless. Send a few boxes in your next parcel. Remember also that for similar injuries sustained at home it is just as good.

Recommend $5,000 To British Red Cross

"The people, I think, are behind you in this matter. They are just beginning to wake up to the necessities of the war. This, we hope, is not to be a yearly thing, and the taxpayers of 1915 should not be called upon to pay all of it next year."

Judge Huycke moved that $5,000.00 be the sum decided upon as Peterborough's donation to the British Red Cross Fund. Mr. F. D. Kerr seconded it.

Question of Method.

At this stage was introduced the question of the method to be employed in raising the $5,000.00, but in the end it was decided that the Council be asked to raise this sum in view of the fact that an appeal is expected before the new year for $50,000.00 for the Patriotic Fund and it was believed that a general appeal now might be detrimental to the raising of the Patriotic Fund money later on.

Nearly Half Mill on Dollar.

In reply to Judge Huycke, City Clerk Armstrong stated that a half mill on the dollar would raise $6,000.00 in Peterborough.

Mayor Buller observed— "We are used to people asking for money. Don't be nervous."

Ald. Green, referring to the $500.00 grant, said that the Council had done what they saw fit with the funds at their disposal. If the amount was to be increased it must come out of another year's taxes. He felt that all should get an opportunity to give.

"I understand," he said, "how easy it is to tell us what to do, but we have to carry the responsibility. We have to be careful; we are not free to hand out money in a reckless manner. I don't think $500.00 was a reckless donation."

A Business Consideration.

A premium for the defence of our homes and our cities was Mr. J. A. Aylmer's manner of explaining that the grant and other patriotic contributions could be regarded as plain, business proposals. And as a form of insurance the city should pay the premium.

"We haven't done anything like what we should in men and money as our share in this war," he said.

He suggested that next year the Council appropriate a mill, a mill and one-half, or whatever it was felt would be needed for patriotic purposes. The Financial Secretary to the British Treasury said recently that the man who did not have in view the placing of one-half his income to the use of the state was not doing his duty.

"The Council must take a liberal and broad view of our duty in this work. As to the means of raising this money, whether by taxation or debenture, the Council must decide. One mill is very little on each man when spread over a few years.

Aldermanic Opinions.

Ald. Edgar supported Ald. Green's suggestion of raising $5,000.00 by means of debentures.

Ald. McIntyre said he was prepared to vote for one or two thousand dollars.

Ald. Weir—Give $5,000 and be done with it. If we give $1,000 or $2,000 and the rest be collected by a public appeal we are going to spoil the patriotic subscriptions.

Mr. W. S. Robinson, who considered the Red Cross work next in importance to that of the men in the trenches said that there was a large body of batchelors who were escaping their share in the financial support the taxpayers were giving. He proposed that a canvas be made of all persons not freeholders or ratepayers. Mr. Robinson believed there would be no demur from the people in the support of the Red Cross.

A Scarborough Man.

Mr. John Bentley of the Auburn Woollen Mills, reminded the gathering of what his home town, Scarborough on England's east coast, had suffered, and remarked that we were getting off lightly. Because Brantford had set $5,000 as their contribution was no reason for Peterborough adopting that amount. He would be ashamed to vote $500.00 for an object like this one.

Mr. Bentley moved, seconded by Mr. Ackerman, that $10,000 be the city's contribution.

Mr. Aylmer interposed with a reminder that at least $50,000 would be required for the Patriotic Fund.

Rev. Canon Davidson, Rev. R. G. Peever and others, expressed opinions as to the method of raising the local contribution, and Mayor Buller struck the keynote of the meeting when he endorsed the idea of raising the money through a grant from the Council.

"The most of the people will be in accord with it. There may be a few kickers, there always have been and always will be. But let them remember what I recall having read of the Germans' demands from the Belgians. They made levies upon many towns saying we want so much. There was no question of willingness. If these armies came here and impressed their demands upon us there would be no question of how or where we would raise the money. We would simply have to get it."

Rev. Canon Davidson regretted that since the donations are being made on Trafalgar Day the memories of that event and the impulse it gave the British people was not emphasized to a greater extent. He urged the public subscription plan with its advantage of representing the hearts of the people. The other method was coldly business like.

Rev. Mr. Peever questioned whether one per cent. of the people knew anything about Trafalgar.

Mr. W. Stocker observed that the people are not Sacrificing enough at this time.

"They are better educated as to the necessity of giving today than they were a year ago," commented Mr. Aylmer, who said that a gift is not a gift unless it touches the heart and we are far from the real thing yet.

The discussion simmered on and gradually worked toward the decision that was arrived at. The main opinion was that this contribution should be a general one and should not be made up by those citizens who can always be relied upon when appeals come in for a general subscription.

It now remains for the Council to consider this resolution from the citizens' meeting last night and it is almost assured that this contribution representing Peterborough will be accepted and adopted by the City Fathers.

It has been estimated by the United States Geological Survey that North Dakota contains 697,000,000,000 short tons of lignite in beds more than three feet thick.

BRITISH LAUNCH A NEW OFFENSIVE ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Considerable Success Crowned Sir John French's Attacks in the Loos District—Under Cover of a Cloud of Gas and Smoke the British Assault Was Made.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The British forces in Northern France launched a new and vigorous offensive to-day, which, according to Sir John French's report, received here to-night, was crowned with considerable success. They took the main trench of the Hohenzollern redoubt, west of Hulluch, which once before figured as one of the chief objectives in a battle that lasted several days, and after being captured by the British was wrested from them by the Germans. The Teutons [illegible] two communication [illegible] the redoubt and the [illegible]

On several [illegible] Hulluch-Hohenzollern [illegible]

British Commander-in-Chief reports the capture of trenches behind the Vermelles-Hulluch road, and others around the quarries which abound in that region.

Sir John French reports for the first time that a British attack was made "under cover of gas," which proves that he has followed the German example of employing asphyxiating gases in storming positions. The path or the infantry advance was blazed by the British heavy guns. South-west of Hulluch a thousand yards of a trench were gained, but had to be given up under the rain of the big German shells.

The Official Story.

The British official statement issued to-night, telling of the latest offensive by the British troops between La Bassee and Arras, reads as follows:

"Yesterday afternoon, after a bombardment, we attacked the enemy's trenches under cover of a cloud of smoke and gas. [illegible] Hohenzollern redoubt. We gained about 1,000 yards of trenches just south and west of Hulloch, but were unable to maintain our positions there owing to the enemy's shell fire.

"South-west of St. Elie we captured and held the enemy's trench behind the Vermelles-Hulluch road, and the south-western edge of the quarries, both inclusive. We also captured a trench on the north-west face of the forest. We captured the main trench of the Hohenzollern redoubt, but the enemy is still in two communicating trenches between the redoubt and the quarries."

Tag Day For The Children's Shelter

To-morrow is Tag Day for the Children's Shelter. Remember that citizens are giving their time to providing this home for children who need it, but they require the financial assistance of the citizens.

Let every one give something, and the threatened shortage of funds occasioned indirectly by the war will be circumvented.

Ten wards of the Peterborough Society have already enlisted, thus indicating that the children are guided into the paths that make good citizens.

If you have been generous before to this work for the children, be a little more generous this year, and especially let every person give something.

ACQUIT GIRL WHO KILLED FATHER

CROTON, N.Y., Oct. 15.—"Justifiable homicide" was the verdict of Coroner O'Shay after an inquest into the death of Edward Tice, who was shot and killed on Saturday by his daughter, Eva, thirteen years old. The girl testified that she used a revolver to protect her mother from her father's attack. Tice came home intoxicated, it was testified, and after words with his wife began to choke her.

"I didn't think the gun was loaded," Eva told the Coroner. "It had been in the bureau a long time and nobody used it before. As I held it in my hand to frighten papa it went off. I don't know what happened after that."

After the tragedy Eva was taken to the home of B. F. Decker, Justice of the Peace, to await the Coroner's inquest. The news of the death of her father was withheld from her. There are six children in the Tice family.

RELIGION IN ARMIES.

Italian Soldiers Devote Leisure Time to Singing and Praying.

The great extend to which warfare proves an incentive to religious devotion has been noted in correspondence from other belligerent countries, and Italy furnishes considerable more testimony to the same effect. Indeed, with but little exaggeration it may be said that the Italian army divides its spare moments between singing and praying. It is believed in Italy that King Victor's troops are the gayest and most light-hearted in all the war, for they always go into battle singing. Their first thought on returning from a struggle, however, is a mass for the repose of the souls of comrades whom they had to leave behind on the field. The most popular song in the camps, after the devout services are over, is "Addio Mia Bella" (Good-bye, My Love).

The religious enthusiasm in the army is also reflected in the fact that so many of the Roman Catholics clergy have rallied around the flag. The military authorities have expressed themselves as greatly pleased over this, for some of them had entertained doubt that the clergymen were staunch patriots, but they have proved that they are ready to give their lives as willingly for their country as any other class of citizens.

$500 FOR RED CROSS IN A UNIQUE WAY

The Melba concert in aid of the Red Cross Society last night was undoubtedly a gigantic success and it transpires that a donation of five hundred dollars found its way to the society in a rather unique way the committee under the presidency of Lady Shaughnessy wife of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the C. P. R. organized a party of young ladies who were busy disposing of small Union Jacks and Red Cross emblems for the benefit of the society. One of these little flags was bought by Mr. J. E. Aldred, who is very well known in Montreal financial circles, and later in the evening Mr. Aldred returned it to Lady Shaughnessy with these words written in one corner of the flag "On demand I promise to pay to the Red Cross Society $500 (signed) J. E. Aldred" Through the press the Red Cross Society wish to thank Mr. Aldred and to show their appreciation of his generosity.

"PREPAREDNESS" MOVEMENT IN U.S. REFERRED TO BY MR. BURNHAM

An Evidence That the Evil of Armaments is Not in Sight and Every Canadian Might as Well Realize the Real Trend—Good Meeting at Young's Point.

Col. Johnston, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Col. J. W. Miller were the representatives of the Speakers' Patriotic League at a meeting held in Young's Point last night. There was quite an encouraging attendance, and marked attention to the addresses.

Col. Johnston pointed out the call for men to fill the ranks now, and the necessity of eligible men giving serious thought to their duty, wherever they perform it.

Col. Miller made a rousing speech, indicating the need of money as well as men and the assistance of the women in Red Cross and other work of that nature.

Mr. Burnham began his remarks by calling attention to the fact that Young's Point had already shown its mettle in the conflict. He had been informed by an officer lately returned from the trenches that young Mr. Brooks, son of Mr. W. E. Brooks of Young's Point, has proved himself a man of the first class. He had been in almost every fight, had been favoured by fortune in escaping serious wounds, had shown remarkable courage and resource, and had already been raised from the ranks, receiving his stripes on the field of battle.

The speaker called attention to the remarkable change in the opinions of the people of the United States during the last few days. Since the beginning of the war the United States has advocated peace and has acted as if nationally speaking it preferred peace, and intended to set the example by means of a very mild form or armament, but that has all been changed in the twinkling of an eye. Not only has the navy been very greatly enlarged, but the President has approved of the resolution passed by Congress to spend $75,000,000 a year more on the Army, which means an immediate increase of the regular army by five times its present number, and also means that whatever is necessary to render the U.S. an effective fighting power will be done. Any Canadian, therefore, who thinks that European wars are a relic of barbarism remaining in Europe, will find poor consolation for his lazy theories in the United States. He might as well make up his mind at once to put up a respectable fight for the Old Empire for no source of comfort will remain open to him after the United States gets ready.

The Americans have manufactured $2,000,000,000 worth of munitions for the Allies. As the Allies did not wish to ship gold to America for various reasons, they borrowed $500,000,000 in America to pay for munitions. The Germans have floated two great war loans in the United States, and are now floating a third, so that the United States is not missing any opportunities, nor allowing sentiment of any kind to interfere with the almighty dollar. There is grave danger that the struggle in the present conflict will be between militarism and the almighty dollar. France and England stand for the highest type of modern civilisation, whether that type is as high as it might be or not and, we Canadians should prize more than ever the fact that we belong to an Empire that has not become sodden with indifference that could have kept out of this conflict, but did not do it for the highest kind of reasons. The history of this conflict will redound to the credit of the Allies, for it will appear when the conflict is over and the victory won, how near a thing it was for civilization between the triumph of materialism and brute force, the dollar, and the saving remnant of civilisation.

Mr. Burnham called attention to the motto of the German war god, which has subsisted throughout Germany from the earliest time. The English translation is:

"Force rules the world still,
Has ruled it, shall rule it;
Meekness is weakness,
Force is triumphant
Over the whole earth,
Till it is Thor's Day."

Notwithstanding her philosophy and her science, Germany has still remained the worshipper of her barbaric idol—the War-God of Thor.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lenell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Pleaded Guilty and Named the Man Who, It is Alleged, Supplied the Liquor—To-day's Police Court

In Police Court this morning, Joseph Beauregard named Arthur Corbin as the man, who he believes supplied the liquor that enabled him to attain a degree of intoxication. As Beauregard is on the black list, the Court imposed a fine of ten dollars. His hand was so shaky that he was unable to attach his signature to the deposition. Beauregard claimed relationship with General Beauregard, a noted American warrior.

BRAND WHITLOCK ILL OF MEDIATION STRAIN.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 13.—Letters from Brussels say Brand Whitlock, American Minister of Belgium, is confined to his bed. His illness is due in part to the strain as mediator between Belgians and Germans.

Although advised to leave Belgium for a rest, Mr. Whitlock declines to do so. Belgians from all parts of the country are constantly going to him for assistance.

Baptist Convention Opens in London—Local Delegates—Opening Address

Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray street Baptist church, Mr. and Mrs. John Galt, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Harding, and Mr. John Riddell, are in London attending the 27th annual Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec. Rev. Mr. Webb has been named a member of the Nominating committee.

Inaugural Address.

The inaugural address of President James Ryrie, of Toronto, a masterly effort, was the outstanding event of the opening session.

In an original and forcible manner Mr. Ryrie dealt with "The Problem of the Rural Church," manifested by the short and unsettled character of rural pastorates. While there have always been short pastorates, he pointed out that only within the past few years has this condition become serious and prevalent to an extent which makes it an issue to be classed in importance with the down-town problem of the cities and the open door of the foreign field. The two latter, he reminded directly and indirectly depend largely upon the success of the former. He did not believe that all the fault is with the congregation or with the pulpit. There were always these exceptions, but for the general condition he would lay the responsibility upon the depopulation of the country, and the consequent widespread rural conditions, which tend to disheaten, and, unconspicuously perhaps, irritate all concerned. The country life and the life of the rural church, it is recognised, are inseparably connected, and act and react upon each other as do the heart and lungs of the human body.

Temperance Resolution.

The convention expressed its views on the temperance question in no uncertain terms. Rev. W. T. Graham, D. D., Toronto, chairman of the social service committee, brought in the following resolution which was enthusiastically sustained:

Resolved that the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec in session in London, Ontario, respectfully and urgently press upon Premier Hearst and his Government the immediate necessity of dealing with the liquor traffic in an official way, and that the minimum action which will satisfy the people of this province and effectually deal with the menace of the province alike to our soldiers and civilian population is the immediate prohibition of the retail sale of liquor within the province as a war measure, and later allowing the electorate the opportunity by referendum of expressing their desire as to the future action in this regard, and that a copy of this resolution be sent immediately to Premier Hearst.

Charged With Theft of a Bank

Denham Jones Elected to be Tried by Magistrate Dumble

Denham Jones appeared in this morning's police court on a charge of theft. The complainant, Thomas Blunt, who resides at 221 Division street, alleges that the accused broke into his house and removed a child's savings bank said to contain seven or eight dollars. Through his counsel, Mr. J. A. New, Jones pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by Police Magistrate Dumble. Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared for the Crown.

The defence sought to prove that the evidence offered by the police was inadmissable upon the grounds that Jones was not possessed of a normal mind.

His Worship reserved his decision.

Hastings En Fete For Anniversary of Parish Church

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, Oct. 15.—To-day was the 50th anniversary of the dedication of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, and in the celebration of the event not only did the entire Catholic congregation share, but practically the whole Village. Business was suspended during the morning, and the Reeve and Council and other prominent citizens were present at the Pontifical High Mass, sung by Archbishop Gauthier of Ottawa, who was one of the priests who assisted at the dedicatory ceremonies fifty years ago. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was present, and some twelve members of the clergy of the diocese. The anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore. The present pastor, Rev. Father Bretherton, who has been parish priest for the past ten years, is the present incumbent of the position held by Rev. Father Quirk, who was parish priest when the Church was built in 1865. The anniversary proved a most happy event, and was probably the most important occasion in the past fifty years' history of the congregation.

CHILD BORN LEGLESS IS ONE OF WARDS AT CHILDREN'S SHELTER

One of the children for whom Tag Day has been arranged to-morrow, is a bright little four-year-old boy who was legless when born. He has learned to walk, if such be the term, on mere stumps. His case is exceptional among the Society's wards, but it illustrates one feature of the work which the Children's Aid Society is performing.

PADLOCK THAT HELD AUSTRO-GERMAN LINES BROKEN BY RUSSIANS

PETROGRAD, Oct. 14.— There is little new to note on the Russian front, but that little is very important. All that is happening here now tends to show that the magnetic centre of the war is transferred to the south, where the Russians are continuing their attacks in an effort to clear the Austrians from the Roumanian frontier and prevent them from sending any further reinforcements against Serbia.

The enemy's flanks have been strengthened at the expense of the centre, which for days past has been almost passive, but on the northern flank the Russians are not only holding the Dvina line, not only resisting German attacks on Dvinsk, but are actually beginning to advance from Dvinsk, and are clearly outlining the possibility of raising the siege. In any case the German plans here are robbed of offensive power. In the south painful piecemeal operations in the swampy region between the Kovel-Rovno and Rovno-Sarny railways have been thrown into the shade by the conspicuous success of the Russians in Galicia.

Pushing Up Armies.

The Austrians and Germans have been laboriously moving troops by roundabout routes; pushing up armies here, blinding Germans with Austrians there, fortifying Austrians with Germans, calculating the narrow possibilities of waging a cheerless offensive against the weather, Cossacks and quagmires, only to find their strategic frustrated away in a vain struggle.

General Mackensen was called away to the Serbian front and took some of his troops with him. General Linsingen took his place as commander of the group of armies and had to do his best with what was left, filling up the gaps with Austrian reserves and hampered by the necessity of keeping a strong force in Galicia in view of the Balkan situation. But just at the critical moment Gen. Ivanoff wrested the initiative from his hands and pierced his front on the Styrpa at the most important point, where the armies of Bothmer and Pflanzer join hands at a distance of about 60 miles from Lemberg.

The Padlock is Broken.

The padlock that held together two lengths of chain of the Austro-German armies in Galicia is broken. The Russian cavalry have rushed into the breach and galloping through three lines of German trenches and hacking about with sabres put the defenders to flight. General Linsingen now has no choice. He must use all of his available forces to prevent a defeat turning into a disaster and to check the outflanking of Bothmer's and the isolation of Pflanzer's army.

There can be no question for the present of further attempts to advance on Rovno and what is more important no more troops can be detached from the Galician front for the Serbian. It may even be necessary to despatch the Austrian reserves destined for Serbia to the Galician front. Thus, apart altogether from the direct aid which Russia will give Serbia in conjunction with the allies, she is rendering in Galicia a very important indirect service towards the elucidation of the Balkan situation.

After a short stay at Tsarskoe-Selo, the Russian Emperor left to-day for the crown. He was accompanied by Crown Prince Alexis.

"What's Professor Diggs doing these days?" "He's trying to decipher a Babylonian tablet." "Any results so far?" "Yes. Mrs. Diggs has nervous prostration and the children have been sent to the home of a relative."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BOSTON'S GREAT OUTFIELD WON THE SERIES FOR THEM

Eighty thousand dollars were rolled up in the ball that Harry Hooper drove into the centre field bleachers and won the world's championship for the Red Sox. The drive cost Hooper's employer, Joe Lannin, $40,000. The money represents the receipts of what would have been yesterday's game in Boston, in which the magnates would have got all except the ten per cent. for the National Commission.

Boston's outfield trio—Harry Hooper, Tris Speaker and Duffy Lewis gave Boston another world's baseball championship. Before the series which Hooper drove into history, the Boston outer defence was rightly called one of the greatest in the game. The title is now absolute. It is now the greatest outfield of all time. And the figures prove it.

All three played the series through. Hooper batted .350, Lewis slugged .444 and Speaker trailed along with .294 for a combined batting average of .363 in money ball. Of the twelve runs Boston scored in the five games, ten of them crossed the plate on hits made by "Spoke" "Hoop" or "Duffy." Of Boston's twelve runs, this trio itself scored seven of them. Of Boston's 43 hits, the outfield made 20—and among them were no scratches.

But for what is generally taken as a "bloomer" ruling by the official scoring board, this outfield would have fielded perfectly. The "bloomer" was the decision which gave Hooper an error after it had first been credited to Gardner. Larry himself probably will admit that it was his mistake.

No outfield in baseball's history ever played such a game under "money conditions," which ball players themselves contend is the acid test. There was not a game in which one member of this record-shattering crew did not pull a fielding stunt that had the stands on their feet. They pulled 'em when it meant cutting off alien runs.

Boston's pitching staff is going to get most of the credit, because it's a habit of fandom to remember the name of the winning twirler longer than it remembers the man who drives in the runs earlier in the game, and longer than it remembers the circus catcher by probably the same man who shut off two or three runs along in the fifth inning.

Boston's pitchers deserve a lot of credit. But take an ordinary outfield and stick in the places of Hooper, Lewis, and Speaker, and Boston's pitchers would have lost every game with the exception of Saturday's which little George Foster won single-handed.

With all the sparkling play, however, the finish of Wednesday was all that saved the series from going down in history as a drab-colored affair. There wasn't enough extra base hitting to make it spectacular to the bleacherte. Harry Hooper saved it. He provided a sensational finish. That homer left a good taste in everybody's mouth.

Johnny Evers and Matty May Coach Colleges

BOSTON, Oct. 12.—National league stars may be matching their wits against each other when Harvard meets Yale in the annual baseball series next June. Yale is making overtures to Captain Johnny Evers of the Braves to get his name on a contract to coach the Ellis, and the Harvard management has Christy Mathewson, the Giants' pitcher, under consideration for the berth at Cambridge. The deals will either be closed or called off as soon as the world's series flurry subsides.

Strong for Evers.

Yale is exceptionally keen to have Evers for coach. His reputation for brains in baseball has impressed the New Haven authorities, and they are anxious to have a leader like him at the head of their coaching system in baseball. Last year Yale suffered from fractions in baseball which did not tend to help the team in its big series, and the result was that Harvard won the first two games from a nine that on paper was a superior combination.

Yale agents have already got in touch with Evers, and the hero of Troy will be able to name his own terms. Inasmuch as Evers has already publicly declared that he wants to quit major league baseball at the end of the present season, in spite of his contract with the Braves, it is thought that the Yale offer will be attractive to him.

The Harvard coach has yet to be decided upon. More than 25 aspirants have put in a claim for consideration at Crimson headquarters. "Chick" McLaughlin, a former Harvard player, was said to have clinched the contract, but the Harvard management says it is still on the lookout for a coach. Mathewson is known to be under consideration, and in view of his comparatively poor success with the Giants this past season there is a chance that McGraw might let him go to Harvard if Big Six asked him to.

Old Country Football Notes

The appearance of Sergeant James Galt, the Everton captain, in the Fulham team against Croydon Common, has given rise to some comment. Galt is at a military encampment in Surrey and has charge of a motor machine gun section. He appeared at Selhurst to see the game and found Fulham in a dilemma through the non-appearance of G. F. Cannon, J. Bellamy and Private Bullock. According to an official explanation it was only an urgent appeal from a Scot to a Scot that caused Galt to step into the breach. "Don't see us stuck, Jamie," beseeched Walter White, and the Everton captain could not resist the temptation.

Albert Evans, the old Aston Villa and West Bromwich Albion full-back, who broke his leg under such peculiarly sad circumstances while wearing the colours of West Bromwich Albion — the accident happened on Christmas morning—lost no time in joining the 3rd Birmingham City Battalion when the war broke out, and at present he is a lance-corporal in what is officially known as the 16th (Service) Battalion Royal Warwickshire Regiment.

About Wedlock.

Up to recently Wedlock was a professional cricketer during the summer months and a professional footballer during the winter months. He is now employed at Fry's, but cannot say what he did before becoming a professional footballer. He was born in Bristol, and will be 33 years of age next month. He played occasionally for Bristol City in their Southern League days, but went to Aberdare, and returned from there to his present club.

"THE RIGHT WORD IN THE RIGHT PLACE"

We often talk of the right word in the right place, but it is not always forthcoming. We all know, for instance, that it it right to say "A swarm of bees," yet it isn't, after all. We say "A swarm of flies," but "a hive of bees."

Similarly, we say "A shoal of herrings," "A school of whales," "A string of horses," "A brood of chickens," "A pack of hounds," "A litter of pigs or puppies." But you don't say, or ought not to say, "A litter of foxes."

The right way to say that is, "A skulk of foxes."

We say "A gang of prisoners," and "A galaxy of beauties or stars," and "A crew of seamen," and "A fleet of ships," and "An army of soldiers." Yes, we know all those.

But how would you describe a lot of goats, or lions, or hounds, or partridges, or curs? You would probably be wrong every time, perhaps with one exception of "A covey of partridges." And you might be forgiven, for the right way of it is, "A tribe of goats," "A pride of lions," "A mute of hounds," and "A cowardice of curs."

Inanimate things are just as queer. We say "A pencil of rays," "A batch of bread," "A pile of books," "A clump of trees," "A bunch of grapes," "A set of china," "A collection of pictures," "A flight of stairs," "A row of pillars," "A stack of corn," "A shock of hair," "A pack of cards." No wonder the foreigners look upon the English and Chinese as about equal in difficulty.

Yet it is the right word in the right place which makes the difference betwixt Shakespeare and the rest of his countrymen.—Answers.

KINGSTON CURLERS CUT OUT LIQUOR

KINGSTON, Oct. 13.—The Kingston Curling Club, at its annual meeting, with the president, W. R. Givens, in the chair, unanimously passed a resolution, not only forbidding the serving of alcoholic liquors on the premises, but refusing even to allow them to be brought upon the premises. The membership is one hundred and fifty. Prof. Goodwin, Dean of the School of Mining, was elected president.

GOLF

Mr. Sam Ray is to be congratulated on winning the Golf Championship of the City for the sixth time. The final game was played against Mr. Percy Bond, who has developed fast as a good golfer, but the experience of Mr. Ray in the game no doubt helped greatly in winning.

The Separation Allowance Cheques

Capt. Kennedy of the 77th Battalion, Ottawa, and formerly of Peterborough, was a visitor at the armouries yesterday afternoon.

This morning Majors Eastwood and Cameron were busy giving the second innoculation to the members of the Peterborough Battalion, who received their first injection of the serum some weeks ago.

To-day is pay-day for the members of the Peterborough Battalion. This time it came along as a sort of recompense for the innoculation which many of the men underwent this morning.

Preparations for the minstrel show to be given by the Peterborough Battalion in aid of the Band Fund and the Kitchener Red Cross League are already under way. The performance from the opening chorus to the final number of the olio will be given by members of the Battalion, while the orchestra, etc., will be composed of active service men. There is all kinds of talent in the Peterborough battalion and the public is advised to watch for the dates of the performance.

An Ottawa dispatch to the Mail and Empire says:

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Mr. John Hampton Burnham, M.P. for West Peterborough, is the eleventh Parliamentarian to get into khaki. It is stated here that Mr. Burnham has offered his services for overseas duty and is likely to cross the ocean in the not very distant future. He is the seventh Conservative member to offer for overseas service.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—The Commanding officers of the various military divisions and districts of the Dominion are arriving in Ottawa to-day to attend a conference with the Minister of Militia and Militia Council in connection with general plans for recruiting, mobilization, training, etc., of Canadian soldiers during the coming winter. The officers expected to attend the conference include Col. Logie, Toronto; Col. Shannon of London and Col. Hemming of Kingston.

ASHBURNHAM RED CROSS SOCIETY

The contributions to the "one cent a day club" of the Ashburnham Red Cross Society for the month of September last amounted to seven thousand, six hundred and ninety-nine (7,699) cents, making a total to date from this source of twenty-six thousand six hundred and seventy-three 26,673) cents.

This statement should have been read out by Mrs. W. H. Pretty at the Wednesday afternoon meeting of this week, but was apparently overlooked in the pressure of other business. Ladies will kindly accept this notice.

An Unfortunate Accident.

"Goodness, little boy!" exclaimed the kindly old gentleman to the weeping youth, "What on earth is the matter?"

"I had a turrible accident," bawled the boy.

"Gracious, what was it?"

"I met pop when I was a playin' hookey."—Ladies' Home Journal.

President is Haunted

By Entertaining Ones Who Advise Him on Honeymoon

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Winter resort agents, secretaries of Chambers of Commerce of towns whose existence is unknown to the average reader, and socially ambitious personages of more or less renown, are flocking to Washington. All have one purpose in view—securing the presence of President Wilson and his bride-to-be in the city, town or "estate" which they represent for the honeymoon next month. The majority have the backing of locally ambitious politicians and statesmen with the result that the lives of the President's personal staff are being made miserable by their importunities.

Stock Markets

The new method of trading in so-called half stocks, or shares of $50 par value, provided for in an amendment to the constitution of the New York Stock Exchange adopted last Monday, was used yesterday for the first time. Under the new order of things these stocks instead of being quoted on a percentage basis were quoted on a dollar basis— that is, at the actual selling prices of the stocks instead of the percentage prices.

Among Stock Exchange houses the change caused many comments. Much criticism was heard because the half stocks are now computed for commission purposes on the dollar basis instead of the old percentage basis. Thus, shares like Westinghouse, Reading, Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley, which formerly called for a commission of $12.50 par for each one hundred shares bought or sold, now require the payment of the same amount of commission for 100 half shares. To this fact was attributed the decline in prices of some of the more active issues.

Following is a table of some of the more active half shares, with yesterday's closing prices on the new basis, Monday's closing prices on the percentage basis, and the net change, reckoned on a percentage basis:

	Mon. Close.	Wed. Close.	Net Chge.
Lehigh Valley	155	77	—1
Long Island	54⅞	26¾	—1⅛
Pennsylvania	117	58	—1
Philadelphia Co.	94½	47	— ½
Reading	161⅝	79½	—2⅛
Westinghouse	138	68¾	—1⅝

Financial Notes.

The American Railway Association reported a net surplus of 78,399 idle freight cars on lines in the United States and Canada on October, as compared with 185,000 on September 1st last, a decrease of 106,710 in the month, and about 25,000 less than on the corresponding date last year.

David A. Thomas, the agent appointed by the British government to supervise the purchases of war munitions and other supplies in this country and Canada, returned to town yesterday from Ottawa.

An order for 3,000 tons of steel for bridge work was placed by the Philadelphia and Reading Railway with the Pennsylvania Steel Company.

Contracts for the new stocks to be issued by the Wabash Railroad under the reorganization were listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Unfilled orders on the books of the Lackawanna Steel Company on September 30th aggregated 395,094 tons, an increase of 126,740 tons.

According to the annual pamphlet report of the Illinois Central Railroad, the company on June had 10,963 stockholders, as compared with 10,640 on June 30, 1914.

In its report for the year ended July 31 the Pullman Company showed gross revenue of $41,519,884, a decrease of $3,212,631. Balance available for dividends was $10,546,849, equal to 8.79 per cent on the company's stock, as compared with 9.04 per cent earned in the preceding year.

BUGLE CALLS.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life is but an empty dream!
For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem

Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined end or way:
But to act, that each to-morrow
Find us farther than to-day.

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of Life,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle!
Be a hero in the strife!

WEDDING BELLS

STEWART—MITCHELL.

The marriage took place at Granby, Ont., on Oct. 6th, of Miss Florence Louise, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mitchell, to Mr. C. K. Stewart of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. F. Pollock.

The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. Wm. Smithson. She was gowned in ivory duchess satin, with pearl and lace trimmings, and wore a veil arranged in mob cap effect caught with orange blossoms and sprays of the valley. Her only ornament was a sapphire ring, the gift of the groom. Miss Kathleen Wilkinson, of Montreal, was bridesmaid, and wore a dainty gown of pink taffeta silk with large black velvet hat and carried pink roses. Mr. Kenneth Mitchell of Ottawa, acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart will reside in Peterborough.

McCONNELL—ELLIOTT.

The home of Mrs. H. Elliott was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, October 6th, when her eldest daughter, Mabel Edythe, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Chas. McConnell of Belmont. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., B.D., in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

At eleven o'clock a.m. to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal march played by Miss Ina McConnell, sister of the groom, the happy couple took their position, under a beautiful arch of evergreens, adorned with white bells. They were attended only by the bride's little sister, Miss Verna, who made a charming flower girl, dressed in pale blue brocaded silk.

The bride was beautifully attired in a dress of white silk, trimmed with baby Irish lace and pearl trimming and bridal veil, caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations.

After congratulations, all repaired to the tastefully decorated dining room where a delightful wedding dinner was partaken of. The many presents received, among which was a handsome cheque from an aunt of the groom, evinced the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls, to the flower girl a gold bracelet, and to the organist a gold brooch.

The happy couple left amid showers of flowers and confetti on the afternoon train for Toronto and Niagara and on their return will reside in Belmont.—Norwood Register.

DON'T LIKE BALKAN MOVE.

Austro-Hungarians Fail to See Benefit Except for Germany.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 14.— There is no enthusiasm in Hungary, and even less in Austria, for the fresh enterprise the joint military headquarters have undertaken from strategic or political reasons in the Balkans.

The people are, of course, delighted to have Bulgaria on the side of the central empires, but they are concerned to see their own people employed in an adventure which may interfere with their one hope and ambition — the destruction of Russia's armies.

This has not been accomplished, as every sane-minded person now realizes, and, as they cannot see in the new enterprise anything else but German political ambitions in the Near East—ambitions with which Hungary has nothing in common—those representing public opinion in Hungary outside the limits of the army are not only enthusiastic, but somewhat weary.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

No Terrorism in London Over The Last Zeppelin Raid

NEW YORK, Oct 15.—The London correspondent of the Tribune cables under yesterday's date:

The censorship strictures, which forbid publication of any details as to damage or location, necessarily prevent me from giving a comprehensive story of last night's Zeppelin raid over London, but it is possible to relate some of a hundred and one incidents showing the futility of such a form of barbarous attack on non-combatants.

The official statement says: "The material damage was small." This is quite right; nevertheless, it was enough to congest the streets as they had not been since the early days of the war, to bring out dozens of recruiting bands, to send hundreds of young men into the ranks and to make the city the busiest place in Europe.

Didn't Terrorize London.

In Berlin they say the raids are for military purposes, and also to "terrorize" London. Perhaps the German general staff is satisfied with the extent of military damage done by this raid, which killed fourteen soldiers. And terrorized people are supposed to rush away in a panic or hide in their homes.

To-day you must push your way through the streets, as on election night on Broadway. But for the absence of confetti, ticklers, and cowbells, it might be the same crowd as you will have next month in front of the newspaper bulletin boards of election night. If you could read its mind, you probably would find a feeling of bitterness and contempt.

A few demolished buildings, broken windows, and bomb holes—that's the visible extent of damage to be found to-day. This raid came earlier than the others, and, naturally, more people were about the city. If the Zeppelin pirates aim to kill, they have poor luck, as shown by the official statement.

Freaks of Bomb Damage.

The freaks of the bombs are as odd as those of lightning. In one building every windows was broken, in another alongside not a pane was smashed. In one block all extension signs except one were wrecked.

A bomb burst within fifty feet of where the member of the Tribune staff sat, reading a paper. A piece of it came crashing through the window at his back, passed over his shoulder and buried itself in the wall. Glass and windows sashes fell about him, but he was not touched. The same bomb wrecked a taxicab.

An English crowd is the sanest and coolest in the world. No one could dispute this now. The Germans might just as well try to frighten mummies in a museum with Zeppelin attacks, for the English seem devoid of fear.

Charlie Chaplin was cutting up on a screen in one cinema when a bomb fell near by. The commissionaire, one of those uniformed ex-soldiers, full of red braid and authority, walked in and, raising his hand, said: "Don't get excited." The audience walked out without the slightest sign of a panic and probably sorry to dessert Chaplain for a Zeppelin.

Business Goes On.

Americans are not ashamed to admit that the Zeppelins take the starch out of them, for a moment, and then the next they wish they had a gun to shoot, even though they fully realize the futility of rifle fire against a Zeppelin. But the Englishman merely looks on with the keenest curiosity.

As I write, sandwich men march by with boards reading, "—— Theatre open as usual to-night." Posters were put up overnight to the effect.

"Business as usual; join now." Buses are doing a land office business to-day for a seat on top of one of them is an excellent place to see the sights.

Canadian Crop Is An Immense One

The Total Wheat Crop is Placed at 336,258,000 Bushels--More Than Double That of Last Year

BARLEY AND OATS LESS

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—The immensity of Canada's wheat crop this year is shown by the report out to-day. For wheat, oats, rye and flax the yields are even higher than those reported a month ago, but in the case of barley and oats the present estimate is less than that of August 31st.

The total wheat crop of Canada is now placed at 336,258,000 bushels from 12,986,400 acres, representing an average yield per acre of 25.89 bushels. This total is 174,978,000 bushels more than last year's inferior yield of 161,280,000 bushels, the crop this year being, therefore more than double, or 108 per cent. more than that of last year. It is 104,541,000 bushels, or 45 per cent. in excess of the previous highest yield of 231,717,000 bushels in 113, and 140,232,000 bushels or 72 per cent. in excess of the annual average yield of 196,026,000 bushels for the five years, 1910 to 1914.

Of oats, the revised total yield is 481,035,500 bushels from 11,865,000 acres, an average per acre of 42.38 bushels.

Barley comes out at 50,868,000 bushels from 1,509,350 acres, an average per acre of 33.70 bushels.

Rye is now 2,478,800 bushels from 112,300 acres, or 22.07 bushels per acre, and flaxseed 12,604,700 bushels from 1,009,600 acres, or 12.48 bushels per acre.

In the Northwest.

In the three northwest provinces the estimated yield of wheat is 305,200,000 bushels, and of oats 305,680,000 bushels.

The remaining grain crops of Canada, whose yields are now reported on for the first time this year, are as follows: Peas, 3,240,400 bushels, beans, 594,000 bushels, buckwheat, 8,101,000 bushels, mixed grains, 17,128,500 bushels, and corn for husking, 14,594,000 bushels.

The condition of wheat, oats, grain varies from 80 and 93 per cent. of the standard quality fixed at 100.

CANADA IS TENDERING ON FROZEN MEATS

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 14.—A very important conference has been held here, in which the Canadian meat packers discussed with the Minister of Agriculture and his officers the question of securing sale, to the British War Office, of large quantities of frozen beef which will be available for shipment within the next three or four months. Owing to shortage of refrigerator steamer ocean space, Canada has been practically unable to take advantge of the European markets for dressed beef, and has been obliged to permit the export of her surplus cattle across the American border, at a price discouraging to the producer. As it has been impossible to secure an outlet, through the shipment of live cattle to Great Britain, either in a finished or an unfinished condition, the endeavour to secure sale for the surplus product as frozen beef has received general support.

As has already been announced, the Minister, through Sir George Perley, the Acting High Commissioner, has learned that the British War Office would consider tenders from Canada and Mr. Burrell is, accordingly, making strong representations to the Imperial Government, with the view of obtaining a satisfactory outlet for our available supplies.

The packers in conference are determining upon what basis of operation tenders may be presented, and it is expected that the offer will be made subject to delivery at the Canadian port where the meat may be loaded on refrigerator steamers. This would relieve the trade of the worries and anxieties of transportation risks and charges, and would, it is believed, impart confidence to the business which might develop as a result of these negotiations. If, as is hoped, a contract is secured for Canadian meats, it would relieve the pressure on our surplus cattle, and at the same time it should serve to establish business relations with the Mother Country and her Allies which will fully justify steadily-increased production of high-class cattle in this country.

Representatives of the packing firms in conference to-day were: E. C. Fox and R. N. Watt, Wm. Davies Co Limited; J. S. McLean, Harris Abattoir Co., Limited; C. S. Blackwell and W. E. Matthews, Matthews-Blackwell; John Taylor and F. M. Moffat, Gunn's, Limited; L. A. Mecker, Armour & Co.; Robt. C. Fearman, F. W. Fearman & Co., P. IN BIRD HEAVEN.

Two children, a little boy and girl, brother and sister, had been bereaved. They had lost by death a pet parrot. Of course, when their first grief had subsided they turned the sad occasion to good account, as is the way with children, and had a grand funeral. The boy, Tommy, was a gravedigger, and the girl, Annie, wrapped the poor brilliant corpse in a silk scarf ready for interment. And it was a mournful occasion.

When the grave had been duly patted down with a small spade, the little girl said:

"I s'pose Polly's 'n h'v'n now."

"I 's'pose so," said Tommy, "but I don't know."

"He's got wings," said Annie, "but he won't be an angel, would he?"

"Only folks is angels," said Tommy.

"Well, then, what is he?" asked the little girl.

"I s'pose," said Tommy, "he's a bird in bird heaven."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

GIRLS! HAVE WAVY, THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die, then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it, no dandruff, no itching scalp and no more falling hair, you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Poopendyke fidgeted a good deal with the scanty results of my literary labors, rattling the typed pages in a most insinuating way. He oiled his machine with accusative frequency, but I failed to respond. I was in no mood for writing. He said to me one day:

"I don't see why you keep a secretary, Mr. Smart. I don't begin to earn my salt."

"Salt, Mr Poopendyke," said I, "is the cheapest thing I know of. Now, if you had said pepper I might pause to reflect. But I am absolutely inexorably opposed to rating anything on a salt basis. If you"—

"You know what I mean," he said stiffly. "I am of no use to you."

"Ah," said I triumphantly, "but you forget. Who is it that draws the salary checks for yourself and Britton and who keeps the accounts straight? Who, I repeat? Why, you, Mr. Poopendyke. You draw the checks. Isn't that something?"

"If—if I didn't know you so well I wouldn't hesitate to call you a blooming fool, Mr. Smart," said he, but he grinned as he said it.

"But he who hesitates is lost," said I. "This is your chance. Don't let it slip." He looked at me so steadily for a moment that I was in some fear he would not let it slip.

Before I had been in London a week it became perfectly clear to me that I could not stretch my stay out to anything like a period of two months. Indeed, I began to think about booking my passage home inside of two weeks. I was restless, dissatisfied, homesick. On the ninth day I sent Poopendyke to the booking office of the steamship company with instructions to secure passage for the next sailing of the Mauretania, and then lived in a state of positive dread for fear the confounded American tourists might have gobbled up all of the cabins. They are always going home it seems to me, and they are always trying to put on a single unfortunate ship. In all my experience abroad I've never known a time when Americans were not tumbling over each other trying to get back to New York in time to catch a certain train for home, wherever that may be. But Poopendyke managed it somehow. He must have resorted to bribery.

CHAPTER XXVI.
I Change Garden Spots.

I AWOKE one morning to find a long and—I was about to say interesting—letter from the countess! It was a very commonplace communication I found on the third or fourth reading. The sum and substance of its contents was the information that she was going to Virginia Hot Springs with the family for a month or two and that Lord Amberdale was to join them there. It appeared that her father, being greatly overworked, was in need of a rest, and as the golf links at Hot Springs are especially designed to make it easy for rich men, his doctor had ordered him to that delightful resort. She hoped the rest would put him on his feet again. There was a page or so of drivel about Amberdale and what he expected to do at the New York horse show, a few lines concerning Rosemary, and a brief, almost curt intimation that a glimpse or two of me would not be altogether displeasing to her if I happened to be coming that way.

It may be regarded as a strange coincidence that I instructed Britton that very evening to see that my golf clubs were cleaned up and put into good shape for a little practice on a course near London, where I had been put up by an English author, and who was forever dingdonging at me to come out and let him "put it all over me." I went out and bought a new brassie to replace the one destroyed by the experimenting Rockworth youth, and before I got through with it had a new putter, a niblick and a spoon, neither of which I needed, for the excellent reason that I already possessed a half dozen of each.

Keyed up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, I played golf for ten days and found my friend to be a fine sportsman. Like all Englishmen, he took a beating gracefully, but gave me to understand that he had been having a good deal of trouble with rheumatism or neuritis in his right elbow. On the last day we played he succeeded in bringing me in two down, and I've never seen neuritis dispersed so quickly as it was in his case. I remember distinctly that he complained bitterly of the pain in his elbow when he started out and that he was as fit as a fiddle at the eighteenth hole. He even went so far as to implore me to stay over till the next sailing of the Mauretania.

But I took to the high seas. Mr. Poopendyke cabled to the Homestead at Hot Springs for suitable accommodations. I cannot remember when I had been so forehanded as all that, and I wonder what my secretary thought of me. My habit is to procrastinate.

I almost forgot to mention a trifling bit of news that came to me the day before sailing. Elsie Hazzard wrote in great perturbation and at almost unfeeling length to tell me that Count Tarnoway had unearthed the supposedly mythical Rothhoefen treasure chests and was reputed to have found gold and precious jewels worth at least a million dollars. The accumulated products of a century's thievery! The hoard of all the robber barons! Tarnoway's!

Strange to say, I did not writhe nor snarl with disappointment and rage. I took the news with a sang froid that almost killed poor Poopendyke. He never quite got over it.

Nor was I especially disturbed or irritated by the telegram of condolence I received on board ship from Tarnoway himself. He could not resist the temptation to gloat. I shall not repeat the message, for the simple reason that I do not wish to dignify it by putting it into permanent form.

We were two days out when I succeeded in setting my mind at rest in respect to Aline, Countess Tarnoway. I had not thought of it before, but I remembered all of a sudden that I held decided scruples against marrying a divorced woman. Of course that simplified matters. When one has preconceived notions about such matters they afford excellent material to fall back upon, even though he may have disregarded them after a fashion while unselfishly thinking of some one else. As I say, the recollection of this well defined though somewhat remorseless principle of mine had the effect of putting my mind at rest in regard to the countess. Feeling as strongly as I did about marriage with divorcees, she became an absolutely undesirable person so far as matrimony was concerned. I experienced a rather doubtful feeling of relief. It was not so hard to say to myself that Lord Amberdale was welcome to her, but it was very, very difficult to refrain from adding the unamiable words "damn him."

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bicknell, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. ELMER WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE FIRST particular principle of mine, however, did not declare against the unrighteousness of falling in love with a divorcee.

If I have by any chance announced earlier in this narrative that the valley of the Danau is the garden spot of the world I must now ask you to excuse the ebullience of spirit that prompted the declaration. The Warm Springs valley of Virginia is infinitely more attractive to me.

I arrived there early one bright November morning three days after landing in New York. You will be rendered unhappy, I fear, by the announcement that I left Mr. Poopendyke behind. He preferred to visit an aunt at New Rochelle, and I felt that he deserved a vacation.

Before leaving New York I had a rather unpleasant encounter with my publishers. It was in the nature of a luncheon at which I was led to believe that they still expected me to supply them with the manuscript of a novel at a very early date. They seemed considerably put out when I blandly informed them that I had got no farther along than the second chapter.

"We have been counting on this book of yours for January publication," said they.

I tried to explain that the muse had abandoned me in a most heartless fashion.

"But the public demands a story from you," said they. "What have you been doing all summer?"

"Romancing," said I.

I don't know just how it came about, but the suggestion was made that I put into narrative form the lively history of my sojourn on the banks of the Danube, trusting implicitly to the imagination yet leaving nothing to it.

"But it's all such blithering rot," said I.

"So much the better," said they triumphantly—even eagerly.

"I don't suppose that you, as publishers, can appreciate the fact that an author may have a soul above skittles," said I indignantly. "I cannot, I will not, write a line about myself, gentlemen. Not that I consider the subject moved, but"—

"Wait!" cried the junior member, his face aglow. "We appreciate the delicacy of—er—your feelings, Mr. Smart, but I have an idea, a splendid idea. It solves the whole question. Your secretary is a most competent, capable young man and a genius at a typewriter. I propose that he write the story. We'll pay him a lump sum for the work, put your name on the cover, and there you are. All you will have to do is to edit his material. How's that?"

And so it came to pass that I took myself off that evening for Hot Springs, secure in the thought that Poopendyke would attend to my literary estate far more capably than I could do it myself and that my labors later on would be pleasantly devoted to the lazy task of editing, revising and deleting a tale already told.

If you are lucky enough to obtain rooms in the Homestead looking out over the golf course, with the wonderful November colorings in the hills and gaps beyond; over the casino, the tennis courts and the lower levels of the fashionable playground, you may well say to yourself that all the world is bright and sweet and full of hope. From my windows I could see far down the historic valley in the direction of Warm Springs, a hazy blue panorama wrapped in the air of an Indian summer and redolent with the incense of autumn.

Britton reminded me that it was a grand morning for golf, and I was at once reminded that Britton is an excellent chap, whose opinions are always worth considering. So I started for the links, stopping first at the office of the hotel on my way out, ostensibly to complain about the absence of window screens, but in reality to glance over the register in quest of certain signatures.

A brisk, oldish little man came up beside me and rather testily inquired why there were no matches in his room; also why the hot water was cold so much longer than usual that morning. He was not much of a man to look at, but I could not fail to note the obsequious manner in which the two clerks behind the desk looked at him. You couldn't possibly have discovered anything in their manner to remind you of hotel clerks you may have come to know in your travels. A half dozen boxes of matches were passed out to him in the twinkling of an eye, and I shudder to think what might have happened if there had been a hot water faucet handy, they were so eager to please.

"Mr. Brewster gone out yet?" demanded this important guest, pocketing all of the matches. I could see at once that he was a very rich man. "Did he leave any message for me? He didn't? He was to let me know whether he could play golf with—eh? Playing with Logan, eh? Well, of all the— He knows I will not play with Logan. See if Mr. Scott is in his room. Tell him I'd like to take him on for eighteen holes this morning."

He crossed to the news counter and glanced over the papers while a dusky bellboy shot off in quest of Mr. Scott.

"They all hate to play with the old geezer," said one of the clerks—a young one, you may be sure—lowering his voice and his eyebrows at the same time. "He's the rottenest player in the world."

"Who is he?" I inquired, mildly interested.

"Jasper Titus," was the reply. "The real old Jasper himself."

Before I could recover from my surprise the object of my curiosity approached the desk, his watch in his hand.

"Well, what does he say?" he demanded.

"The—the boy isn't back yet, Mr. Titus," said one of the clerks, involuntarily pounding the call bell in his nervousness.

An English professor, travelling through the hills, noted various quaint expressions. For instance, after a long ride the professor sought provisions at a mountain hut.

"What d' yo'-all want? called out a woman.

"Madam," said the professor, "can we get corn bread here? We'd like to buy some of you."

"Corn bread? Corn bread, did yo' say?" Then she chuckled to herself, and her manner grew amiable. "Why, if corn bread's all yo' want, come right in, for that's just what I hain't got nothing else on hand but."—Boston "Herald."

The holiday traffic was at its height and there were the usual piles of passengers' luggage on the platform of a great London terminus. In the usual way, the porters were hanging it about, while the owners mournfully look on.

Suddenly the station-master appeared, and, approaching one of the most vigorous baggage-bashing porters, shouted in stern tones:

"Here, what do you mean by throwing those trunks about like that?"

The passengers pinched themselves to make sure that they were not dreaming, but they returned to earth when the official added:

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

Tending the Baby

But He'll Never Repeat the Performance

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was in one of the waiting rooms of the Grand Central depot. I was sitting beside an honest faced, motherly woman of thirty-five, who had a baby about eight months old asleep in her lap. She had asked about the train up the river, when she suddenly cried out that she had lost her portemonnaie. She felt in the pocket of her dress and in the pockets of her cloak, and she shook out the baby's clothes, and by and by she said:

"I remember now. I left it at my sister's, in East Thirty-sixth street. My ticket and all my money are in it."

"Madam," said I, "you have fifty minutes before train time. You can easily go back and get your purse."

"But the baby?"

"He's asleep, and if you dare trust him with me I'll take care of him."

"I've most a mind to do so."

"Come on with him, and you needn't hurry a bit on my account. We'll both be right here when you get back."

She gave me a long, lingering look, so as to be able to swear to me in court, and hurried out, and she was scarcely out of sight when a "Rock-a-by Baby" woman about four seats away, who had heard and seen all and was no doubt jealous, got up and walked around and said:

"That shows how much mothers think of their offspring! Do you suppose I'd ever leave one of my children that way? Not much!"

She was still walking around with her nose up in the air when an old man with a cane and a satchel stopped to yell at me:

"Do you know if this is the New Haven depot or not?"

"No, sir, it isn't," I replied as I held up my hand warningly.

"Young un asleep, eh?" he shouted in still louder tones.

I nodded and cautioned him again.

At that moment the baby's eyes opened. I rocked him to and fro and crooned to him, and he'd have slept again but for a woman who came up and loudly inquired:

"Did you notice a hand bag on that seat when you sat down?"

"No, I didn't see any hand bag, and you woke this baby up!" I shouted at the woman.

"Oh, I have! State prison offense, I suppose!" she sneered as she made off.

By this time the baby's eyes had got below my hat, and they began to betray a great deal of anxiety. I kept my knees moving and sang to him. I had sung about a rod of "The Old Oaken Bucket," which I have always found to have a soothing effect, and he was looking at me with great curiosity, when a fat woman came sailing along and stopped to exclaim:

"Kitchee, what a sweet little baby!"

Walking about with a baby in your arms is rather monotonous on the spine and knees and shoulders, but was invented as an offset for paregoric. I lifted up the baby and took a walk-a-by-baby walk. As I walked I tried to divert his mind into a new channel by telling him a bear story. He was gradually becoming interested and had probably made up his mind that I was at least his stepfather when a little old man who hadn't the slightest excuse for living blocked my way and shrilly observed:

"My wife died and left a baby about as big as him on my hands, and I know how to pity you. Are you raising him on the bottle?"

I went on with the bear story, but it was no use. The baby began to grow red in the face and to kick and claw, and he finally yelled out at the top of his voice. I changed him to the other shoulder, but it was no good. I got him down on my arm and tossed him up and down, but he piped the harder. No fewer than six full grown people at once gathered around to discuss the case, and because I couldn't stand still to answer their questions I heard them say that I was a heartless father and that the Humane society ought to station an agent at the depot.

I carried him over to the ticket office and the information bureau, but he was not in want of anything in that line. I walked and waved him to and fro; then I stood still and tossed him up and down; then I sat down and bounced him on my knee until his first tooth was almost shaken out. He had made up his mind that things were not according to Hoyle, however, and he stuck to his tune.

I don't remember all that was said by the waiting passengers, but here are a few sample specimens from the stock:

"No one can make me believe that he is that child's father."

"He doesn't seem to have a spark of love for the poor little thing."

"It's curious that the police haven't interfered before now."

"Dear me, but if he knew anything at all about children he'd know that a pin was pricking the poor thing to death."

There was just one faint hope left, and I seized upon it. I cantered the child out of doors, and the sudden change shut him up. Then I walked along until I got the sun in his eyes, so he could no longer see me, and he got a new train of thought and stopped kicking. While he was wondering who had been elected I began to sing "Old Uncle Ned" and gave him my finger to chew on, and when the mother returned he had both eyes squinted up, a smile all over his fat face and was as content as a pumpkin in a cornfield.

ARTOIS INCLUDES ANCIENT PROVINCE

"The Artois, the region mentioned continually in the dispatches as that where the heaviest fighting in Northern France is taking place, includes the territory of an ancient province of France and corresponds to the present department of Pas de Calais, minus the arondissements of Montrueil and Boulogne," begins a war premier just issued, by the National Geographic Society. "Reports of attacks by the Allies in the Artois mean attacks against the north-and-south German trench line, on its section extending from Armentiers, on the Belgian frontier south of Ypres, to the neighborhood of Bapaume, which is about 16 miles southeast of Arras. This line is a little more than 40 miles long.

"The Artois is a rich, well-watered country, dotted with industrial towns, but chiefly known as a pasteur and farm land. Its larger farm produce an abundance of grain and hops, while the smaller holdings grow great quantities of fancy vegetables for which France is famed above every other land with the exception of Belgium. The captial of the old province was Arras, the name being a corruption of 'Artois.' Among the important towns in the region are Bethune, Aire, Bapaume, Lillers, Saint-Pol and Hesdin. The great battle of Agincourt, between the French and English, was fought here on October 25, 1415.

"The Counts of Flanders ruled the Artois from the ninth to the twelfth century. In 1180, the land was bestowed upon the King of France, Philip Augustus, as the dowry of his bride, Isabella of Hainaut. In the fourteenth century, Artois passed to the house of Burgundy, and a marriage of a daughter of this house to the Archduke Maxmillian brought it under the banner of the Habsburgs. The French contested the claims of the Austrians, and finally conquered the province from Spain, to which it had fallen in 1684, in 1659. The province has since remained in the possession of the French."

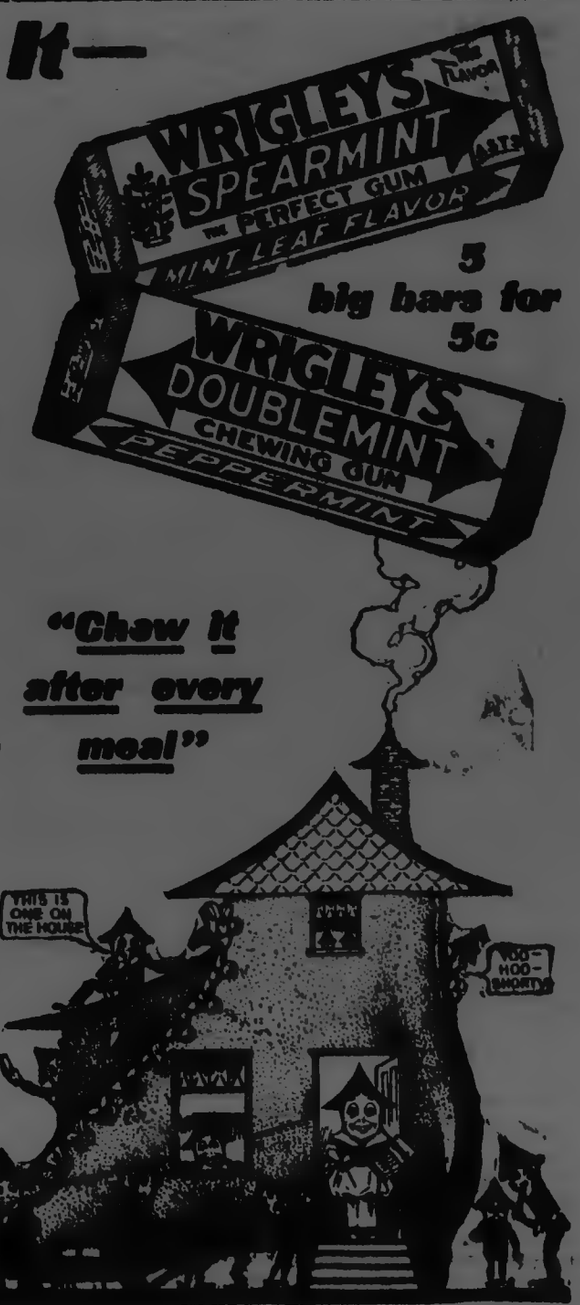
MADE IN CANADA



GOT A NEW FACE.

Horribly Disfigured Woman Was Finally Made Presentable.

Surgery has progressed to the point where it can supply new nerves, blood vessels, bones and even new faces to men and women who have been maimed and mutilated by accident or disease. European specialists have described to the congress of the American Surgical Association many examples of the wonderful results obtained in reparatory surgery. Dr. Erich Lexer of the University of Jena, Germany, showed a once beautiful woman whose face he practically remade in two years. She had been disfigured in the explosion of an automobile.

First she was shown without a nose and with the vestige of a chin, with part of an ear and without eyebrows, and with her eye lids drawn down in hideous fashion. No more unpromising subject could have been presented. First the surgeon made a nose for her out of cartilage and fat and skin which he had obtained from other parts of her body. After awhile he saw that the nose was shaped up and molded anew. He made a chin for her, revised the disfigured mouth and put some artistic touches on the remains of her ears.

He finished with a portrait of the young woman in gala dress and smiling. She had not been restored to her former pulchritude, but, taken all in all, the surgeon had performed a most remarkable feat.

Then came a hare-lipped young man with a decidedly unprepossessing face. The surgeon literally transformed him in a few months into a Prince Charming and induced him to raise a moustache to cover the lip line. The final state of the youth was almost handsome enough for him to qualify as a riding master or a tango teacher.

From a surgical point of view one of the most brilliant operations, which was shown by Dr. Lexer in color photographs on the screen, was the transplantation of fat and part of a bone into a shattered patella, so that the free action of the knee was restored to the patient. The surgeon demonstrated also how he would obtain quantities of fat from legs and insert them under cheeks to fill up hollows or to smooth out foreheads in which there were unsightly cavities. For a patient who had no external ears he built two perfectly good ones with graceful, scroll-like effects. A young girl whose face was her misfortune was changed into an attractive miss.

Dr. H. Morestin of Paris told the congress that graftings and transplantations of tissues had considerably enlarged the limits of reparatory operations.

"They have enabled us," he continued, "to remedy under better conditions many grave deformities and to lead to many other restorations hitherto almost unattainable."

He spoke of the use of small fragments of skin, of cutaneous transplantation in two distinct times, of the grafting of eyebrows and moustaches and of the strengthening of the broken and mashed nose by grafting cartilage.

Played a Dual Role.

"Now," said a newly made husband, "I am your captain, and you must let me command you through life."

"You have a dual capacity," replied the former widow, "because you are my captain and my second mate also."—London Telegraph.

Safe Offer.

"Your Scotch friend asked you to have a cigar, but I notice he didn't offer me one."

"Ah, you see he knows I don't smoke."—London Tattler.

It is not the strength but the duration of great sentiments that makes great men.—Friedrich Nietzsche.

THE ERA OF THE SILO

In the evoultion of American agriculture the years between 1910 and 1920 will probably be designated as the era of the silo. Until this source of cheap feed supply came into use livestock as a factor on the farm depended largely on producing cheap corn. But corn at 60 cents a bushel or more is too much of a luxury for feeding and fatening animals on the farm unless their destination is the market where prices must cover the cost of production. The silo not only takes care of the corn which does not reach the normal grade of maturity, but it releases millions of bushels more for the market. It turns the millions of waste fodder into feed of highly fattening quality. In other words, the silo is the fortress by which the American farm restores and develops the fertility of the farm acres to pristine productiveness.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

BEDTIME.

Wee Golden Hair is sleepy,
As tired as can be,
So she says, with many a sigh
And climbs upon my knee.
She coaxes for a story,
In drowsy tones and sweet,
I hug her close up to my heart,
And oft-told tales repeat
Ut last the joyous laughter
Is hushed in dreamless rest,
I clasp the little dimpled feet
That no rough path have pressed.
I smooth the tangled tresses,
I kiss her cheek and brow,
And I pray life's evening time may come
As peacefully as now.

SWEET MINDED WOMEN.

So great is the influence of sweet-minded woman on those around her that it is almost boundless. It is to her that folks come in seasons of sorrow and sickness for help and comfort, one soothing touch of her kindly hand works fonders in the feverish child; a few words let fall from her lips in the ear of a sorrowing sister do much to raise the load of grief that is blowing its victim down to the dust in anguish. The husband comes home worn out with the pressure of business, and feeling irritable with the world in general; but when he enters the cozy sitting room, and sees the blaze of the bright fire, and meets his wife's smiling face, he succumbs in a moment to the soothing influences which act as the balm of Gilead to his wounded spirits, that are wearied with combating with the stearn realities of life. The rough school boy flies in a rage from the taunts of his companions to find solace in his mother's smile; the little one, full of grief with its own large trouble, finds a haven of rest on its mother's breast; and so one might go on with instances of the influence that a sweet minded woman has on the social life with which she is connected. Beauty is an insignificant power compared with hers

Never carry your business home with you. Transact it at your store or office, and leave its cares, perplexities and trains there. Do not let its worries influence you at home, to fret yourself and those around you. The mind at home should be drawn away from business cares and directed in a channel to interest and instruct and freshen and strengthen and prepare it for the duties of the morrow. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, and all business and no recreation lessens the capacity, power and strength of the mind to do the necessary thinking for conducting business successfully.

REAL HOMES.

There are husbands and wives, whose love is so deep that each cares only to have what will go best for the other and for the children These men and women belong to no particular class; they are to be found among the highly educated and luxurious classes, in the great middle classes and among the laboring people. Such folks are honest in their affections, honest with each other and honest with the world. Their homes are not places to show, but what the name implies—place of rest, happiness and inspiration of good work. These homes may consist of only two or three rooms or they may be palaces, yet the influence is always good. It is such homes that make the world sweeter and better, and experience shows us that they are common in our country.

Oftentimes the most discouaging criticism is received at home, the very last place from which it should come. As a flower loves the dew, and as it turns its face to the sun, so the soul seeks appreciation and yearns for sympathy. No one can do his best work unless there is some one believes in him. Encouragement is the best known tonic. It strengthens the soul as well as the body. Then never be afraid, oh woman, of being too lavish of praise of husband or children. If a loved one does something well, do not be afraid to say so, or if you must criticise do it gently, lovingly, at the same time showing him that you believe he can do better.

Remember, when assailed by affliction that every cloud has a silver lining, and, could we but see aright, many apparent calamities are but blessings in disguise. Hope is a better companion than fear, and morning is ever the daughter of night. Whatever is, is right; presumption alone would avert the hand of Providence Give us, oh, give us, the man who sings at his work. Be his occupation what it may he is superior to those who follow the same pursuit in silent sullenness. He will do more in the same time, he will do it better, he will persevere longer. One is scarcely sensible of fatigue while one marches to music. The very stars are said to make harmony as they revolve in their spheres.

It is hard for a mother to believe that her children are made of the same kind of clay as those across the street.

No household is complete without a sister. She gives the finish to the family.

HOW SHE ACQUIRED "FEMININE CHARM"

A nicely dressed woman sat beside me in the train. Everyone stared at her It was not her beauty of feature that held our eyes, nor her costume. But there was something about her face and expression—I risked it and asked: "Would you mind telling me how you keep your complexion so dazzingly pure? Don't think me impertinent, but you seem over 30, yet haven't a line in your face, and your cheeks are quite peach like. How do you do it?"

Laughing, she said: "That's easy: I remove my skin. Sounds shocking, doesn't it? But listen. Instead of cosmetics I use only pure mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's. I apply this nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings. This gently absorbs the soiled, weather-beaten film-skin, without pain or discomfort, thus revealing the fresh, clear underskin. Every woman has a beautiful complexion underneath, you know. Then to ward off wrinkles I use a face bath made by dissolving powdered saxolite (one ounce) in one half pint of witch hazel—a harmless astringent which 'tones' the skin wonderfully. Very simple, isn't it?" I thought so. I'm now trying her plan, and like it immensely.—Millicent Brown in The Story Teller.

HINTS ON STYLE

Applique trimmings, the fashion prophets tell us, are to be in favour this season.

Serge with tartan silk collar and cuffs is an excellent scheme for a country coat.

Leather belts appliqued with leather of a different color are a Paris novelty.

It should be remembered that lingerie waists are not correct as part of a calling custom.

There is simply no appeal from the high straight collars or those of the huge muffler type.

Checked material is used for furlined coats and their collars are apt to be the big Russian ones.

THE IMPORTANT TOP COAT

For Dress in Velours or Velvet, for Sports in Leather or Tweed

FUR A FAVOURED TRIMMING

NEW YORK, April 16—Early in the season when Paris placed her stamp of approval on the frock of taffeta and then a little later adopted the one-piece frock of serge and gabardine, on Princess and semi-Princess lines, for almost every occasion, a demand was straightway created for the separate coat. Designers are now giving much of their attention to this important garment.

A Season of Separate Coats.

It is essentially a season of separate coats. At any public gathering the predominance of the one-piece dress with its accompanying coat, is very noticeable. Princess and semi-Princess frocks of serge or gabardine, braid trimmed, and rather severe, are preferred for mornings; to wear with these frocks Paris has given us an all-enveloping coat, also of serge or gabardine, called the coat dress. Then there are many other models on the Redingote order, with revers extending from collar to hem; one or two designs showing the Louis XVth influence, and the 1870 period, with slender, fitted backs and waists, and full circular, flaring basques.

Frocks of taffeta and faille are accompanied by harmonizing coats of velours de laine, velvet, or plush, cut Redingote fashion, or on short, tight-fitting lines. Velvet is one of the smartest coat materials of the season. On the Avenue, and in the tea rooms every afternoon, one may see any number of smart little frocks of taffeta or faille, with short, full skirts and harmonizing small coats, or basques of velvet or plush. Some of these chic velvet basques, fitting snugly over the bust, curving at the waistline, button from the top of the high choker collar to the pointed lower edge, often forming panner-like draperies over the hips. There is no material richer or more becoming than velvet.

The Russian Influence.

In the more dressy coats, one notices a decided leaning toward the Russian. There is something smart and youthful about the double-breasted, high collared Russian coat, with its trimming of fur which makes it appeal to many. These models are made in various lengths, according to the purpose for which they are intended. One of the smartest coats of the season was developed in Petrograd green velours de laine, on Russian lines, collared, cuffed, and banded around the lower edge with beaver Large crocheted buttons of antique gold cord closed the coat and finished the wide girdle of green velours. A smart little turban of the beaver completed a most attractive ensemble.

The Collar Makes the Coat.

It appears as if all the designers' ingenuity has been centred on the collar of the cost. There are wide cape collars, Chin-Chin collars, Quaker collars, wide crush collars, "A" collars, collars dating from the time of Incyables, high Directoire collars, and many others. Often these are of fur, one of the short haired pelts, preferably, beaver, nutria, seal, or krimmer, and then again they are of the material of the coat, elaborately trimmed with braid embroidery, or a smartly worked-out design in Angora wool. This latter is a very new and effective touch brought out at the early Paris openings. Cuffs, too, come in for their share of attention. Some flare, some are made gauntlet fashion, some are cut to fit the forearm snugly from elbow to wrist, where they flare slightly, and others are merely straight bands of the same, or a contrasting material.

Sleeves on both coats and frocks are varied most attractively, the models being taken from a number of different periods.

Fall skirts are short, but not too short, which means that for the street they cover at least the upper edge of the buttoned boot Dancing frocks, worn with slippers, may be a trifle shorter. In many instances outer tunics of chiffon or indestructible voile, fall several inches below the foundation skirt or silk or satin and the ankle appears to be covered until one glimpses the smart buttoned boot through the tran-parent tunic.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S MIDDY BLOUSE.

By Anabel Worthington.

It is astonishing to see how the Middy blouse holds it own. Throughout the summer this was not so wonderful, as it is an ideal garment for sport and for warm days. Even now, however, it is much worn and is made in silk and in velveteen, with sleeves of something fairly sheer and a shirt of altogether different material.

The model shown is made with a plain square yoke below which both front and back are gathered and quite full. The gathers may be converted into smocking with very little trouble and with excellent effect, and patterns of this new ornamentation can be obtained in any line of transfer patterns.

The neck of this blouse is open and has a collar of moderate size as a trimming. There is just a little slash below the yoke to give space enough for slipping on the blouse over the head. The sleeves are loose and plain, and may be gathered at the wrist, or cut off and finished with a cuff facing turned on the right side of the material.

Two roomy pockets trim the lower front of the garment and a wide belt is worn rather low down on the figure.

For gymnasium use these blouses are liked in Japanese silk and in flannel, but for other occasions serge, taffetas, velvet and various dress materials are preferred, sometimes with sleeves and contrasting color and fabric.

The blouse pattern, No. 7,309, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2⅝ yards of 44 inch material, with 1⅝ yards of 36 inch contrasting goods.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES CONTINUING

THE BRITISH GAINS ALL MAINTAINED

RUSSIANS ON OFFENSIVE AT MANY POINTS IN THE EAST

War Situation Brighter Than For Some Days Except in Serbia Where Gallant Serbs Are Being Hard Pressed---In the West General French Announces That the British Have Held all the Ground Recently Gained

MAY GIVE UP DARDANELLES TASK

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Desperate Austrian attempts to resume the offensive in Galicia have failed, Petrograd despatches said, to-day. The Austrians were declared to have been driven back in disorder west of Trembowla, and to have lost the fight for the railroads west of Tarnopol. Farther north, the Russian version said the Germans have been driven back across the Pripet Rive., and have lost their defences west of Lake Oboie.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Except in the Balkans, the war situation was regarded here to-day as having materially improved in the past few days, especially on the Eastern front. Even Berlin claimed no German gains at any point in Russia. Near Wessolowo, where the Kaiser's War Office admitted his line had been broken, the Germans were counter-attacking at the latest accounts, but there was no indication that their attempts had any prospect of success. The Russians had lost a little of the ground they had gained in Galicia, but not all of it. General French denied the German claims of progress near Vermelles, saying the British held all their positions. The Paris War Office admitted the loss of a few posts in the Champagne and the Vosges, but they were not important, and there were several French gains to offset them.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Heavily beset on three sides, Serbia is making a last ditch fight for her life. It was conceded in military circles here to-day that help by the Allies must reach the little nation speedily to be availing. The Serbians claimed to be holding their own against the Bulgarians on the East and the Austrians on the West along the Drina, but it was admitted that the combined German and Austrian drive from the Northward was making steady progress through the Morava Valley. Field Marshal Von Mackensen, from all accounts, realized the importane of speed to the Teutonic allies. He was to-day reported hurling his men against the Serbian defences, regardless of losses. These, Nish despatches said, were enormous. Nevertheless, the weight of numbers was telling. It was admittedly clear that the invaders would soon reach Constantinople, unless the Serbians were reinforced. There were reports that the British and French, recently landed at Salonica, were pushing towards the fighting zone. It was not believed, however, that they were numerous enough to accomplish much. An announcement from Rome was looked for hourly. Russia was understood to have the men ready, but lack of means of getting them to the point where they are required. It was agreed that the situation was serious. Some solution of the difficulty was hoped for, however, through an exchange of views between London, Paris, Petrograd and Rome within the next few hours.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 16.—No survivors had landed or been picked up to-day from either of the German destroyers reported sunk by a British submarine near the Baltic entrance on Wednesday and Thursday. It was considered certain all perished on both boats.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Germany's latest Zeppelin raid on London has staved off conscription, it was said in Parliamentary circles to-day. The raid's result, it was explained, was to boost enlistment so much that the pro-conscription Cabinet members agreed to six weeks' delay in their programme. Ever since the attack there has been throngs at the spots where the bombs fell, and recruiting sergeants have been busy among them. Street orators and military bands have aided in the work, and the harvest has been a rich one.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 16.—Supplementing his Friday's manifesto, Czar Ferdinand to-day issued another proclamation signed by all his Ministers, as well as himself. Serbia, it was asserted, "in her animosity and cupidity, attacked our territory, and our brave troops were forced to fight in defence of our own soil." "I call the nation and the army to the defence of their country," said Ferdinand, "which has been sullied by a felonious neighbour, and to the deliverance of our enslaved brethren from the Serbian yoke."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—A sensation in naval circles was caused to-day by the orders announced for the court-martial trial of Rear-Admiral Wm. N. Little, recalled at Boston for alleged carelessness in accepting the submarine K2 with defective storage batteries. Secretary Daniels to-day admitted the court-martial proceeding of an admiral and his recall for trial at being retired was unprecedented

PARIS, Oct. 16.—(French official).—Furious German attempts on Friday night to recover trenches the French had wrestled from them north of Reillon in Lorraine were repulsed, the War Office announced to-day.

In the fighting many Germans were captured, it was stated. After a terrific bombardment of the French lines in the Linge and Schgatmaennelle district, it was said, the Germans charged this front on Friday night, but were repulsed here also.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The French are making a series of fierce counter-attacks east of Auberive to-day in an effort to regain the trenches taken by the Germans during a drive on Thursday.

ASSAULTED WIFE CUT HIS THROAT SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Mr. Charles Brewer Now at Nicholls' Hospital Severed Wind Pipe But Missed Main Arteries in His Neck—Has Chance to Recover

FOLLOWED A DISPUTE

Mr. Charles Brewer, Alfred Street attempted suicide last night, about 10 o'clock, by cutting his throat, after he had beaten his wife, and she had fled into the street. Mrs. Brewer rushed into the street with blood flowing from three scalp wounds which she said her husband had inflicted by striking her with a coal stove shaker. Neighbours telephoned for the police, and Officer Dainard responded. When he entered the house he found Mr. Brewer on a sofa in the sitting room, his hands and the upper part of his body covered with blood, which had flowed from two gashes in his throat. Dr. Amys, who attended him, and had him rushed to the Nicholls Hospital in the Dan Spence ambulance, said this morning that the wounds might not prove fatal, unless complications set in.

It was learned that the first aid, rendered by Dr. T. Johnston of Monaghan Road, from whose residence the telephone calls were sent to the authorities, was responsible, in a measure, in saving Mr. Brewer's life. He had severed the trachea, or windpipe, although none of the vital arteries were cut, and might have choked from the flow of blood.

It was stated that he made the assault on his wife in the heat of a dispute which apparently was not the first one.

SITUATION HAS CLEARED

Allies Ready to Face New Developments With the Same Inflexible Certainty That They Shall Win

"THE CROAKING RAVENS"

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, Oct. 16.— The croaking ravens, especially in the press had their biggest opening since the war began in the first few days of this week. Everything seemed to have gone wrong. Bulgaria, after a few months of laborious courtship was betraying us. Greece was disappointing us. German troops were beginning a vigorous advance which might end in Constantinople and the defeat or dispersal of our Gallipoli expedition and a serious movement against Egypt.

The situation was further complicated by uncertainty as to what view our great allies of their duties toward Serbia. For France and Russia, absorbed in the work of liberating their soil from German invasion might well hesitate to divert any portion of their badly needed troops to another battlefield. France especially might be excused with her comparatively small population and tremendous losses, from this addition to her military burdens.

The Croakers.

These difficulties set the croakers into a combination of delirious delight at the realization of their worst prophecies, and to an even wilder delirium of scapegoat hunting. To the interrupted demand for Mr. Asquith's head during several months was added an equally loud demand for the dismissal of the foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey. Indeed nothing short of a brand new cabinet was demanded.

These evil prophecies falling upon the public already disturbed and uncertain tended to increase the general uneasiness. But in a few hours the situation began to clear. Mr. Viviani's unmistakable declaration that France and Russia would stand by Serbia shattered immediately the craven policy of England's abandoning Serbia. We are now ready to face new developments with the same inflexible certainty that we shall win, though Greece still is uncertain and her King and military staff still hostile.

Greece Must Come In.

Fundamental hatred of Bulgaria in Greek hearts and obvious determination of the Allies to fight for Serbia to the bitter end, to get her with the resolute speech of the retiring Greek Premier, Mr. Venizelos, make us believe that Greece must come in on the side of the Allies and that removes many of the difficulties in this theatre of the war.

Our final view of the moment is that this new enterprise of Germany in the Balkans dissipates her forces more than ours and shows lack of unity and cohesion in her military and political purposes. It is now also more confidently expressed, especially if we are able seriously to hold back the German advance on Constantinople that Roumania will join our forces.

Meantime all the news from both the east and the west confirms the impression that Germany's bolt is shot, and we may look with confidence, slowly perhaps but certainly, to crushing her everywhere.

Doing Her Share.

It is difficult to reconcile the jeremiads you see in papers like the Daily Mail to the effect that England is not doing her fair share in the war with what one sees all over the country. I was recently for a while in Llandrinded Wells, a health resort in Wales, and there wasn't an hour when I did not come across crowds of soldiers. It was the same in Harrogate, another health resort. And here in London, soldiers are everywhere as thick as blackberries. But what brings home nearly than any else the amount of the British contribution to the war is the daily list of casualties, and the names of the great families which are constantly appearing. It looks sometimes as if the aristocracy were going to be extinguished. A German paper made the remark at the beginning of the war that the Prussian aristocracy had been created in war and would go down in war. The British aristocracy seems sometimes quite as likely to have that fate.

I pick out a few of the families which have lost their heirs because the heads of the houses stand in the forefront of the British aristocracy

PRECAUTIONS ARE TAKEN

Peterboro Soldiers Are Innoculated and Vaccinated—More Recruits Added to the Strength of the Battalion

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Two precautions that are always taken in the case of newly enlisted recruits is to protect them against danger of typhoid or smallpox and therefore innoculation against typhoid and vaccination to prevent smallpox infection are two of the things that the new Tommies undergo almost with the commencement of training. The soldiers in the Peterborough battalion have had their share of these precautionary measures in the last few days. A large number have completed their innoculation trial and this morning a big squad was not only innoculated for the second time but were also vaccinated.

The Peterborough Battalion will attend divine service at St. James' Methodist church to-morrow morning. The parade will fall in at the armouries at 10.30 o'clock. A number of the Peterborough boys in the 59th Battalion are home from Barriefield on week end leave.

The Peterborough Battalion introduced a new marching song in their marchout this morning. "In the Trench" is the title of the new number which has a swinging air. The words are as follows:

In the trench, along with Freedom,
Are the men of Britain's pride,
In the trench, along with French,
They are fighting, side by side.
Tell it out, and, with a shout,
Ye workmen at the bench
Your voices raise in songs of praise
For the soldiers in the trench.

Mrs. Stevens of Peterborough has received a cablegram from her son, Flight Sub-Lieutenant L. E. Stevens, that he has arrived safely in England.

Among the latest recruits who have passed the medical examination for the Peterborough Battalion, are the following:

Melville Saunders, 213 Romaine Street; one year in the 57th.
Arnold Drummond, Barnardo Av.
Claude W. Manley, Clarady P.O.
Leland Franks, 505 Patterson street. One year in the 57th.
Wm. Waterson, Warkworth, Ont.

Arnold Drummond, who enlisted with the Peterborough Battalion, yesterday, is the well-known steeple-jack who some months ago painted St. Pauls' Church tower.

Wm. Waterson of Warkworth, who joined the Peterborough Battalion, yesterday, is a son of Corp. Waterson of the Norfolk Regiment.

The Kingston Standard, in one place in yesterday's issue, says that the draft from the 33rd Battery was collected in and around the city of Kingston, and in another place, says that there are six Kingston men in the draft. As a matter of fact, half the squad going overseas come from Peterborough.

Peterborough has two representatives on the rugby team representing Barriefield Camp, which is playing Queen's University to-day. Lieut. Hamilton of the 33rd is on the half line, and Lieut. Wilfred Stratton is playing quarter-back for the soldiers.

Barriefield War Camp Oct. 15 — Once more the camp at Barriefield has been compelled to say good-bye to another draft of comrades whose turn has come to go overseas, and this time the draft is from the ranks of the 32nd, 33rd and 34th Batteries of field artillery. The men being sent with this last draft have been recruited within the past two months, and they have been well drilled, well prepared, and are in the best of condition for all the exigencies of the hardest and most exacting campaign. Taken altogether, the 300 men who constitute this last draft from the camp are of the finest physique and a class of men that any officer or set of officers might justly feel proud to send out in the interests of the Empire. They are a hand-picked lot, and their appearance proves that it pays

PROMISES TO BE THE USUAL GREAT SUCCESS

Annual Tag Day of the Children's Aid Society Draws a Liberal Response From the Citizens

TAGS EVERYWHERE

The annual tag day of the Children's Aid Society to-day, favoured by splendid weather, promises to be a great success judging by the number of tags seen on the streets. The "taggers" were out early and in numbers, and no one escaped. Although to do justice to the generosity of Peterborough's citizens, no one seemed to be trying to escape. Some of the canvassers report that donations around the market were not on as large a scale as one would expect, but this was counter-balanced by the readiness with which city people exchanged their coins and bills for tags and rosettes. Peterborough's soldiers were early marked out for attack, and as military regulations prevented them from wearing the tags, the gallant Tommies were besieged all day, by other canvassers long after they had made their donations.

LAST MINUTE WAR DESPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, via wireless to London, Oct. 16.— Bulgarian forces striking through Serbia are now within twenty-five miles of the Hungarian frontier. The official statement from the War Office here this afternoon reported the Bulgarians as having forced several passes between Negotin and Strumika.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 16.—According to a despatch from Athens to the Cologne Gazette, the ministers of Russia and Italy are preparing to leave Greece. The families of diplomats, the message adds, probably will leave the Grecian capitol on a warship bound for Italy.

ATHENS, Oct. 16.—In an effort to prevent the allies from getting to Nish a strong Bulgarian force was trying to-day to cut the railway. The former will have to traverse between Valandovo and Hovdovo, twenty miles south of the Greek frontier. The Serbians were resisting desperately.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—Mr. D. A. Thomas, representative of Lloyd George, British Minister of Munitions, accompanied by Sir Frederick Donaldson, of the Woolwich arsenal, and Lionel Hichens, of the well known firm of Cammell Laird Co., reached Ottawa at noon to-day from New York.

Sir Frederick Donaldson and Mr. Hichens have arrived in connection with the reorganization of the Canadian shell committee forecasted in the Montreal speech of Mr. Thomas last week. Mr. Thomas declined to make any comment on the reply to his speech by Major General Sir Sam Hughes. Remarking it was not his desire or function to be drawn into any controversy, he stated also that the time was not ripe for any detailed announcement concerning the proposed reorganization of the committee.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 16. —The Russians will not send troops through Rumania without the latter's consent, the Foreign Office stated to-day, in contradiction of reports that the Czar meant to violate Rumania's neutrality.

LONDON, Oct. 16.— That Attorney General Sir Edward Carson has resigned was reiterated to-day by the News, with the explanation that Premier Asquith was urging him to reconsider to avoid disclosing Cabinet friction.

Former Peterboro Boy Is Home From France

Private F. E. Nesbitt Son of Gaoler Nesbitt Has Been Invalided Home He Will Spend a Few Days in Peterborough

SAW PTE. TEBBS

Private F. E. Nesbitt, son of Mr. Henderson Nesbitt of this city, is home from the front. He arrived in the city to-day, and will remain here until Monday, when he will return to Winnipeg. Pte. Nesbitt left Winnipeg last February, with the first draft that was raised in connection with the 32nd Battalion, Western Cavalry.

Was Discharged.

While in France, Pte. Nesbitt contracted a severe attack of asthma, and was subsequently discharged as medically unfit. Pte. Nesbitt was through a number of engagements. Among those whom he met at the front was Lance Corporal Tebbs, formerly of Peterborough, who enlisted in the 90th Battalion, Winnipeg.

It is 21 years since Pte. Nesbitt left Peterborough. He saw many changes in the city of his youth and was particularly surprised to learn of the number of his old-time friends who have gone forward in the defence of their country. Among them was Sergt Major Thomas Miller, whom Pte. Nesbitt failed to recognize when he met him to-day on George street.

While at the front Pte. Nesbitt saw a number of Peterborough boys. A few days ago he met Pte. Stenson in Montreal. The latter has been invalided home and is expected to arrive in Peterborough in the course of a few days.

Zep Raids Come Home To Canada

5th Artillery Brigade Suffered Casualties in Latest Attack

OTTAWA Oct. 15 The Zeppelin raids on England have now come home to Canada. From the casualty lists received last night and this evening and from information obtained from local militia sources it would appear that 11 Canadian artillerymen were among those who lost their lives in the last raid, that on the 13th. The total military casualties reported in the official statement by the British authorities were 14 killed and 13 wounded, so that it would appear that it was largely Canadians who suffered. Besides the 11 men who lost their lives 3 are reported as missing and 3 wounded. All these casualties took place at Otterpool Camp, Kent, England.

The casualties took place among the 5th brigade of the Canadian second division artillery. Ten of the casualties were reported last night and the remainder to-night. As far as is known, these are the first Canadians to meet death as a result of a Zeppelin raid. To-night's casualties of this type are all Western men, except Sergt. E. C. Harris, a well-known lacrosse player, whose next-of-kin is given as residing in St. Catharines, Ont., and was a member of the 20th battery.

Confidence Shown By Oak Hall Buyers

Mr M J Maher returned last night from Hamilton, where he attended the Spring buying conference of Oak Hall store managers at the W. E. Sanford Mfg. Company's building. He observed that the buyers representing various cities throughout the country, manifested a firmer confidence than they exhibited in their buying a year ago. In fact the feeling shown was quite keen, and the increased business is backed up by the reports from the stores for the week ending Oct. 9th, showing an increased business in each case.

PROBABILITIES

"Peterborough Prospects Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1915

STILL LYING.

Germany outbid Lord Grey in promises to Bulgaria. Grey could only promise what he would be able to carry out. He counted upon keeping his word. Germany could promise anything for the Kaiser recognizes no responsibility of keeping to his promises. In his desperation in the hopeless outlook of his cause he is ready to promise anything, or do anything. He is building castles in Spain. Even if the story is true that he offered Spain Gibraltar, if she would help pull the German chestnuts out of the fire, there is no possibility of his keeping his word. The moral of the recipe for cooking a hare applies in this case—first catch the hare—first capture Gibraltar.

OUR BREAD IS SURE.

The official report of the crop yield of the Dominion gives the wheat crop of Canada for the year 1915 as 336,258,000 bushels, or 42 bushels for every man, woman and child. This immense yield, is nearly 175 million in excess of the wheat crop of 1914, which was only 166 million bushels. One point of significance is the fact that the wheat crop of this year was raised from about 13 million acres, not a tenth part of the area of Canada suitable for wheat growing, showing the possibilities of development. If Canada can, in a year of war, grow wheat to an amount value of double the national revenue for one year, what can she not do if she gives her whole mind and the maximum of her resources to the production of the raw materials of the staff of life? When we note the productive possibilities of Canada, how well equipped in potentialities she is to become the granary of the Empire, and more; we faintly realize what a future she has before her. We see more clearly that, apart from our political advantages in the way of freedom and the exercise of the privileges of Canadian citizenship, the opportunities for success in life, and on the grounds of material advantages alone, Canada is a country well worth fighting for. We are fighting for Canada now; but by no means as strongly as we can or should fight. Only a very small proportion of our able-bodied men are in the ranks. There is a demand for more. The young man who is at home doing nothing to defend his country of such multiplied privileges, against the menace that overhangs us if Germany wins, has a good deal of thinking to do, and a good deal of skill to exercise to justify his abstention from a direct part in the conflict.

DUTY OR CONVENIENCE?

When a man, as one was heard to do this morning, "stands off" the appeal of a Children's Aid Tag Day girl, with—"I've nothing less than a five-dollar bill"; has he satisfied the demand that good citizenship and humanity make upon a citizen? It is an easy and specious form of evasion and probably drugs his conscience with the frivolous idea that he would have "given the girl ten cents if he had had the change." We have an easy way of dodging our responsibility sometimes. We do good sometimes with our means if — it comes convenient, if we are cornered or shamed into it, or don't have to deny ourselves. Giving, contributing to the support of a good cause, if regarded as a duty and discharged as a duty would make the burden lighter for many who have to make up for the shortcomings of others or the interests of a good cause may suffer. Some of us give our lives in pledge to the fortunes of war, while others have nothing smaller than a "five-dollar bill"—do not dare to risk their skins; have no sufficient spirit to make the sacrifices that others are making for their benefit. No man of spirit and decent self-pride would allow a neighbour to pay for a meal for him, while he had money in his pocket. No man of spirit will allow another to do the fighting for him that he is able and should do himself. No man of spirit will allow others to do the paying for him which it is his duty to do, proportionately. If we all took the British ideal of duty as our inspiration, there would be no lack of fighting men; there would be no shortage of funds, to meet the demands that war creates, or to meet the demands that circumstances create.

DOES IT PAY.

It is estimated that the loss in bar receipts from cutting off three hours of sale per day, amounts to nine million five hundred thousand dollars per year. Is that loss or gain? It is loss in the purely monetary sense; but is it not gain in another sense. The nine and a half millions represent, what? Does it represent money spent for productive and beneficial purposes? What benefit comes from the expenditure of so large a sum, only a fraction of what is spent for strong drink in Ontario in a year? If three hours a day represents an expenditure of nine and a half millions—of waste—what an amount of food, and clothing, and comfort, and education could be purchased for the total amount spent over the bar in the course of a year? One does not need to count the indirect waste implied in caring for the crime, relieving the poverty and distress that result from the intemperate use of strong drink to give point and answer to the question, does the liquor traffic pay? If one man addicted to strong drink, by refraining from strong drink, makes a new man of himself, becomes a good husband and father, and a productive and valuable member of society, and an all round better man, can it be said that he suffers any injury from not using strong drink? Apply the same inquiries to society at large, to our whole population, and we shall have the same answer. The subject brought forward will stand some thinking over. The man that thinks will get some idea of the immense amount of money wasted on strong drink every year, year after year, when he notes that nine and a half millions would build three thousand miles of first-class highway, or would buy ten million bushels of wheat, or thousands of other things to set against the absolute waste, the return of no value, from expenditure in strong drink. His conclusions would be strengthened when he reflects what useful purpose the money invested in the traffic, and the labour employed, would serve, if it were embarked in productive and beneficial industry. The man that thinks in these directions will have no difficulty in answering the question, does the traffic in strong drink pay?

TASK FOR A GENIUS.

Six children dead and thirteen wounded as a result of the Zeppelin raid over London, will not popularize aerial warfare to any great extent. The world awaits some military genius who can explain to the people what this sort of slaughter avails a nation.—Buffalo News.

GOOD FOR DULUTH.

Over in Duluth they have gathered tobacco, cigarettes and candy for Canadians at the front. The Duluth News-Tribune says Americans hope and fear for the gallant men of Canada, and will pray that the lives of the brave Canadians may be spared. This touches us deeply. Canadians have known all along that American sympathy has been theirs, but it helps to have their practical expression of sentiment. That feeling makes impossible fortressed frontiers or lake war fleets.—London Advertiser.

OPPOSED TO CONSCRIPTION.

The demand for conscription has no relevance to the needs of the war. It is due partly to panic, partly to loose, slip-shod thinking, partly to cover failure in other directions, but chiefly to a political motive. Conscription has been the ideal of the reactionaries in this country for years. They have adopted it because they believe that militarism of the Prussian pattern is the true answer to trade unionism, and they have seized on the opportunity presented by the war to carry their scheme into effect.—London Daily News.

GERMANY'S FAMOUS ALLIANCE.

We need not emphasize too far the anomalies of the Teuton-Turkish alliance, but a German alliance with a government that is systematically engaged in destroying a Christian folk must fall sharply even on a world's conscience hardened by many dilusions. So far as sentiment in this country is concerned, Germany's moral battle-front has been irreparably damaged on its northern flank in Belgium. It cannot be that Berlin is content to allow another Belgium to develop on its southern flank in Armenia.—New York Evening Post.

THE GERMANY TAXABLE RESOURCES EXHAUSTED.

The taxable resources of Germany are exhausted. We have that from the German Finance Minister, Dr. Helfferich, who told the Reichstag in August that he would not (which means that he could not) add anything to the gigantic sacrifices now borne by the German taxpayer. The British taxpayer, on the contrary, will by a gradual process, double his contribution to the Exchequer during the war.—Westminster Gazette.

BUSINESS JOURNAL'S VIEW OF CANADA'S PARCEL POST SYSTEM

In a recent issue of a Toronto daily paper an item referring to Canada's Parcel Post system appeared as follows:

"People have no idea how easily and cheaply parcels can be sent by parcel post in Canada," said C. Gleeson, of Winnipeg, who has practically the jurisdiction of the whole parcel post system from Ottawa to Dawson City.

"The department stores are about the only institutions that are really making a thorough use of the system, and they do so because it pays." Mr. Gleeson stated that the small parcels from 8 pounds down were most frequently sent. The maximum limit is 11 pounds in size up to 3 feet 6 inches by 2 feet 6 inches."

Here is an admission from the Post Office officials that the Parcel Post system is a failure. Last year the then Postmaster-General, L. P. Pelletier, in arguing for increased revenue for his department, stated that the Parcel Post was not yet paying its way.

The Bill establishing it was forced through Parliament after many setbacks; the fight extending over a number of years. It was strongly opposed by the business press of the country which showed that it was of value only to a few big stores in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, and that it would build up these cities at the expense of the other centres and particularly the small towns and villages which are so essential to satisfactory rural conditions. The Post Office officials and others promoting the Bill finally overcame the opposition by representing that under the zone system the proposed Parcel Post system would be of no value to the big departmental stores; that it was really in the interests of the smaller cities and towns.

The Bill was based on one adopted by the United States, but neither there no here has the zone system been found of value to the public at large. Instead, the big mail order houses send their goods and catalogues by express to Post Offices in zone centres from where they are distributed at a lower rate than the efficiency manages express companies can afford to carry them. It is apparently not paying in the States. A representative of one of the largest mail order houses in Chicago volunteered the information recently that the system was a great advantage to them, but some day the country would employ a good cost accountant who would discover that the business was being done at a heavy loss; that the country was paying much more to carry the parcels than they received from the shippers.

The value of the smaller centres to the farming population of the country is often overlooked. The fearful loneliness of farm life is new districts in Western Canada where villages with their churches, schools, stores and halls for entertainment, have not sprung up, is clearly depicted in a story recently published in London by that clever Scottish authoress, Miss Macnaughton. The story of rural England, with its numerous cases of insanity and murder, due to isolation, are ample confirmation of this. Europeans often build their homes in the villages and go out each day to work on their farms. In Canada the weekly visit to the town store, to the church, or to bring the children to and from the High School, brings a change that makes farm life, on which our future so much depends, worth living. The fact that it is the local business man who is the main support of these public institutions must not be overlooked. Such profits he makes are expended chiefly in this way. His taxation goes entirely to local objects.

The present Parcel Post system is clearly transferring the business of centres to a few big cities, and if the business is bein gdone at a loss, it is up to the Government and M.P's outside the big cities to deal with this matter. If these are the facts, as they undoubtedly are, in these times of heavy and increasing taxation, it would be a great public economy to abondon the present Parcel Post system entirely and establish on a self-sustaining basis.—Canadian Grocer.

SIR WILFRID AND HOCHELAGA.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to be warmly commended by Canadians of all parties—who realize that the first business of every British community today is to fight and win this war—for the decisive fashion in which he prevented a breach of the political truce in Hochelaga. Sir Wilfrid pledges himself to such a truce when the first German gun was fired, and most loyally has he kept that pledge. He is with those who believe that there should be no civil division—no party election—in this country until the war is over, and with him stand, we are confident, all the better and more patriotic elements in the community.

He has resisted a considerable temptation in vetoing a contest at this time in Hochelaga, when it is felt by many that the ill-smelling war purchase scandals might have offered him an effective issue. But he believes, apparently—and, we think, correctly—that the time is not yet for a discussion of these vital and far-reaching questions before the electorate. Undoubtedly, it is the duty of Parliament as at present constitutes to discuss them, for this Parliament must stand until the war is finished as the trustee of the nation. The whole country has been shamed by the revelations before the Davidson Commission, and, in war-time, punishment for such offences should be even swifter than in the less critical periods of peace. But this is a far different matter from seeking to strengthen a political party in Parliament by contesting an open constituency.

In taking this stand, Sir Wilfrid will have the support—not only of the saner sections of his own party—but of the less partizan portions of the Conservative party as well. He may not get his just meed of praise from sychophants who ever worship the risen sun—from self-seekers who fawn upon the powers that be—but he will receive his reward in the esteem of all manly men whom neither partyism nor "patronage" can blind, and from the calm verdict of history which will immortalize the statesmen who stand most steadily by the State in this, her supreme hour of trial.

Two Examples Of German Desecration

Frightfulness and Vandalism That Defeat Their Own Devilishness

A characteristic story of Hunnish Kultur comes from Poland. The town of Czenstochowa lies just across the border from Prussia. It has been known throughout Eastern Europe as a place of pilgrimage alike for members of the Roman and Greek communications. The centre of devotion is a little church containing a very ancient picture of the Virgin and Child. Tradition has it that it is the work of "the beloved physician," St. Luke. It is certainly very ancient, and venerated for its association with the religious worship of good and simple people for many centuries. It has been known as "the Heart of the Heart of Poland." When the German army approached the town the Kaiser's record with any beatific vision, man secret agents to the effect that the Virgin and Child of the picture had appeared to him, and with tears commanded him to rescue their shrine from the Russians. In forcible terms he advised all Poles to render him such assistance as he should require, and among the bribes which he offered for Polish support was a promise of money and rare jewels for the further enrichment of the shrine. But the Poles could not reconcile the Kaiser's record with any beautiful vision. They characterized his proclamation as blasphemy, tore it up and let him know that "neither we, the people of Poland, nor our religions are for sale." The Kaiser and his minions were furious at this defiance. When the Huns entered the town they embarked upon their usual programme of atrocities, capping their frightfulness by desecrating the church, wrenching the picture from its frame and despatching it to Germany. This was quite in line with the deeds of all historic tyrants who have sought to stamp out national consciousness. What more direct way to destroy the unity of the Slav race, said the Germans than to remove this relic which was a rallying point for all Slavs? But a deeper insult still was in store for the Polish nation, and for all Christian people. Just as the statue of the Kaiser has replaced that of the Prophet Daniel over the Cathedral door in Metz, so his portrait, moustached and uniformed, appeared in the place of that of the Virgin and Child in Czenstochowa. Altar lights were placed before it and before this "abomination of desolation" the wretched people were daily compelled to kneel by the German soldiery. But this sacrilege had the result which might have been expected. The indignation of the people has been very great. Recent advices state that the portrait of the Emperor has been removed, and a replica of the original picture put in the frame. But Prussian stupidity and Prussian brutality have as usual spoiled their own game. The Polish people and Slavs in general are more firmly convinced than ever that the Kaiser is anti-Christ, is a personal representative of Satan, if not Satan himself in human form. Any hope the Kaiser may have had of bringing the Poles to his side is destroyed forever, and the old picture will possess an added sacredness in days to come when the story is told that even as its sacred shrine was desecrated it was paving the way for German defeat.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

The Culprit.

The teacher was very earnest. Far more so than his pupils, and the subject he choose was about the terrible outcome of laziness and idleness. With due solemnity, as befitted the occasion, he drew a terrible picture of the habitual lofer, the man who dislikes work, and who cadges for all he gets.

"Now, Charlie," said the teacher to a little boy who had been looking out of the window instead of attending closely to the lesson.

Charlie was instantly on the alert.

"Tell me," continued the master, "who is the miserable individual who gets clothes, food, and lodging, and yet does nothing in return?"

Charlie's face brightened.

"Please, sir," said he, "the baby."

Britain Must Keep Her Workmen Busy

Needs High Productive Power to Pay for Arms and Supplies

CONSCRIPTIONIST MENACE

LONDON, Oct. 16.—In this war, more than in any former war, the engines of destruction and defense are so much more ingenious and costly, and are used up so much more rapidly, that the questions of munitions and of money are even more important than that of fighting men. It is idle to train men to fight unless Great Britain can also supply them with arms. And this costs money, huge sums of money, and if we take too many men and drill them we cannot find the money. That is a fact which is not yet fully understood.

We, as the richest nation fighting on the side of civilization and liberty, have to do the financing for ourselves and for our allies. That is to say, we have to supply ourselves and them with the necessary arms and supplies, by making them if we can, and if not, by paying for them in the countries which produce them. Russia has millions of men ready to take the field if they had the guns and powder and shot. As we have not yet enough of these things for our own army—for we still see battalions marching without rifles—we have to buy them for Russia or the Russian Army cannot possibly fight.

Russia cannot pay herself because, owing to the closing of the Black Sea and the Baltic, it is not possible for her to export her wheat and other products by means of which she usually pays abroad for articles that she has to import. So we have to lend her the money and also we have to do the same, though to a much less extent, for France.

"Very well, then," says the cheery conscriptionist, "we can pay all right for all the party. We have £1,000,000,000 to realize on our investments and the thing is done." This would be very nice and comforting if it were possible. Incidentally it may be remarked that it might be very bad business to sell all our nice dividend-paying investments and find ourselves at the end of the war with nothing in our pockets but the promises to pay of our exhausted allies; but, of course, if it were a question of that or defeat we should do it gladly and readily, if it could be done. But it cannot be done. For who is going to buy the securities in sufficient amounts to enable us to pay for the war, for ourselves and our allies? Echo answers, Who?

About half of the £4,000,000,000 that we have invested abroad is estimated to have been placed in our colonies and dependencies. Can they buy them back from us? Some of them are certainly doing well out of the war, and must have surplus profits that they might invest in their own securities that have been sold to us in times past. But the amount that they would be prepared to buy would be to drop in a bucket compared with the sum required; and their notion of the rate of interest is as in all new countries in which capital is scarce—much higher than that which is prevalent here. Which means that we could only sell them their securities back at a ruinous loss.

And is America going to buy our colonial securities. So far is this from being possible, that New York is already rather sensitive about the number of American bonds and shares that we have been selling on the other side of the Atlantic. It is hoped that we may, perhaps, be able to raise about £100,000,000 in the United States. This will hardly pay for the war, for ourselves, for a month, to say nothing of the needs of our allies. Argentina? She also must be making big profits out of the war, but her need for capital, for purposes for home development, is chronic, and if we get £9,000,000 or £10,000,000 out of her it would be a great achievement.

In all these countries, in short, the cry is not for securities, but for goods. We cannot pay for the war out of our investments, because the amount of them that we can sell is paltry, compared with the cost of the war. If we want shells and machine guns for ourselves and our allies—as we surely do, unless we are ready to admit that Prussian militarism is to rule the world—we must either make them ourselves or make goods to pay for them with. In other words, we must maintain our productive capacity and our export trade. Can we expect to do this if conscription is to give the War Office the power to take more and more of our workers away from the fields and factories and workshops? Every man that is so taken means that we either have to buy more from abroad or sell less abroad or both. In either case, the balance of the trade is against us, worse than before.

Two things have to be done in this realm of finance, which will be more and more important as the war goes on. We have to keep down our indebtedness to America, because if we do not do so America will not be so ready to sell to us. And we have to give material help to Russia, in goods or money so that Russia may not be forced by sheer economic exhaustion to resist her efforts to defending her inaccessible interior. In order to do these things we have to maintain our productive power at its highest possible efficiency, so that we can pay all over the world, for the arms and supplies needed by ourselves and our allies, with our coal and cotton goods and woollen goods and machinery, and other articles that we export in normal times. If we can do that we can go on fighting and financing till further notice.

After experimenting for three years the United States bureau of standards has developed apparatus for determining the exact fineness of cement.

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, sick, feverish, constipated.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

WHAT NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN THE EAST MEAN

Since the outbreak of the war, fourteen months ago, the Balkan attitude has been of prime importance. There has been a continual battle of state craft and intrigue to land as many as possible of the Balkan States in one camp or the other? They have swayed back and forth, first inclined to one side and then to the other, but always openly holding out for neutrality. Finally Bulgaria, through Russia's ultimatum, was forced to declare openly her allegiance to the German cause. From authoritative reports it is evident that the majority of the people who are Slavs, and, therefore, far more strongly attached to Russia than to Germany, are strongly against such alliance. The Royal party and majority of higher officials are pro-German, and it is they who have delivered Bulgaria into German hands. This strong discord, though it will probably not cause a real internal revolution, will doubtless cause a widespread dissatisfaction and in that way make the Bulgarian assistance much less formidable than if it had the unqualified support of the masses. Bulgaria would have been a much more willing ally of the allies had the voice of her people been followed. Now she is doomed to fall with the Teutons, as one of the common enemies of the human race. Her tragic error can, at most, but prolong the agony a little.

Greece, another Balkan state, is struggling hard to maintain her neutrality. The mass of people are strongly urging participation with the Allies, but the King, who is very popular, persists in his stand for neutrality. It is a big question which way the country will go. But, it is sure, it will never go to the Germans.

Roumania, also, is struggling hard, the masses being divided between immediately joining Russia and the Allies, or maintaining neutrality. It is considered probable that she will remain neutral for a time and then finally fall in with the Allies. But, much the same was thought of Bulgaria for some time. Yet, German intrigue, German gold, and German sympathies in the Royal family led Bulgaria astray. It is not impossible that the same might prove to be the case with Roumania, though the influences of Germany do not appear to be so great on Roumania and her extensive boundary directly on Russia would be a great counter-balance to German efforts.

During the past six weeks, Germany has been losing on both fronts. Russia is once more rolling back the German forces and driving them out of the country, daily gaining momentum, and as the new minister of war has stated, once more starting resolutely on the long and terrible march to Berlin. The Allies in the West are daily demolishing the most formidable western line of intrenchments, and capturing section after section of trenches. Their advance is slow steady, and methodically like an irresistable battering ram which knows no limit keeps hammering away night and day like clock work. Italy, on the western half of the south so gradually forcing her way into Austria, Servia, on the other half of the south, is holding tenaciously against enormous odds. She is the only obstacle between Germany and Turkey. As yet, Turkey holds the Dardanelles and could give Germany an outlet through Asiatic Turkey to menace Egypt, India, and we know not what else. So, as soon as Bulgaria was forced to disclose her hand, Germany has been compelled to start her effort to break through to Turkey for whatever purpose she may have in mind. At the point where Servia projects between Germany and Bulgaria, the distance between the two countries is but thirty miles. At this spot Germany is hurling all available efforts. When she breaks through, as she probably will, she will have a free and friendly highway for supplies, troops, and everything through Bulgaria to Turkey. Egypt, India and wherever else she has planned. Obviously, the Allies must completely block this move if they possibly can. There is no telling what might be the consequences if they do not. The landing of allied troops at Salniki is for this purpose. They are being rushed there in large numbers daily. It is their aim to strike the railway which makes direct connection between the capital of Bulgaria and the capital of Turkey. They will strike it as far to the north, as possible. If possible they will get their troops into Servia and completely block the German rush at its source. It is hoped that they may do so and we all confidently expect they will.

In a way, the situation may be likened to a rubber bottle. The Allies form the outer wall, Bulgar is the bottle neck. Germany the contents, and Serbia the stopper. As the Allies contract Germany they squeese her against the stopper, Serbia, and as Serbia begins to slide up into the neck with danger of letting out the contents, the Allies send around forces to force the stopper back and prevent any burst or leakage. We all hope that stopper will hold.

STOMACH ACTS FINE! NO INDIGESTION, GAS, HEARTBURN, ACIDITY

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sick, sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain, unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas, causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Astounded.

Otonabee To Raise $15,000

Not $150.00 as a Typographical Error Made the Examiner State

A typographical error in the Examiner, a few days ago, has done the people of Otonabee a grave injustice, which the Examiner hastens to rectify. It was stated that Otonabee was about to raise $150.00 for patriotic purposes. In reality the amount the Township is starting a campaign to raise $15,000. A decimal point doesn't take up much space but it sometimes causes a lot of trouble, and so in this case. And the people of Otonabee are going to get that $15,000, too.

Situation Has Cleared

and because these men in themselves are rather notable personalities. The first I will mention is Lord Ribblesdale. He had two sons; one was killed in Somaliland some years ago; the other has just been killed in Flanders. Lord Ribblesdale is perhaps the most picturesque figure personally in the House of Lords. Imagine a man six feet two in height; with long riglets descending almost to his chest; with a long thin face and the typically Norman aquiline nose; and clothe this man in garments that belong to the eighteenth century— a short coat, a variegated waistcoast; trousers that somehow or other look as if they were riding breeches; and you have some idea of this quaint figure. The only man in my time in England who ventured to dress in the same fashion was Sir Walter Gilbey, the head of the famous wine merchant house of Gilbeys. He used to wear always a suit of light yellow, with a yellowish hat, trousers with the old squire-like flap, and a fob watch; except when on state occasions he used to put on black broadcloth; but even then his coats were out after the fashion that when out with George IV. There was—to add another instance— one other notable figure in the tailoring world in my time, the late Panmure Gordon, who was a very prosperous stockbroker after he had first been a dashing guardsman; he affected the bell shaped trousers that you find in the illustrations to Thackeray's novels; and he had a suit for every day in the year.

The Ancestor.

Lord Ribblesdale figured in a famous picture in the Royal Academy; and the late King, who could say a good thing now and then, nicknamed him "The Ancestor"; and by that name he is known to this day. He was one of the many distinguished men who married a daughter of Sir Charles Tennant. Tennant was a very successful Glasgow merchant who inherited big chemical works, but he made most of his money in daring but also very far-seeing speculations. He was one of the men who realized as far back as the sixties of last century the immense future of the United States; and invested large quantities of money in American railways. He was also lucky enough to get into several big Indian gold mines at a time when nobody else believed in them; with the result that he left more than two millions sterling. All his daughters were both pretty and clever; one of them is Mrs. Asquith; another was the wife of Lord Ribblesdale, and now the Ribblesdale peerage is extinct so far as male heirs are concerned.

Another of the peers who has lost his heir is the Marquis of Lincolnshire. He is still a buoyant and almost boisterous young fellow of something like seventy. And he carries one back as far as the early days in the hot youth of the late King when, somewhat after the fashion of Henry V. in his youth, he painted the town red. Lord Lincolnshire was then plain Lord Garrington. He inherited a large fortune from a wealthy banker who was the founder of the family; and he possessed acres bought from the toil of the ancestral bank. The first time I read of him was somewhere in the late sixties when he figured in a police court case. At that time there was in London one of the strangest characters of the nineteenth century. His name was Grenville Murray. He was said to be the illegitimate child of some peer; he managed to be appointed as British Consul in some outlandish place—Odessa—if I remember rightly; then he was dismissed, and returning to London resolved to make deadly war on all and sundry—but especially on the member of the aristocracy against whom he had the double grudge of being the cause of his inauspicious birth and his dismissal. His pet aversion was the Lord Derby of the period, a Foreign Secretary and a notable Conservative leader.

His Neighbour's Spoons.

Granville Murray gave currency to the story that Lord Derby had a weakness for silver spoons in his neighbour's houses—a fact which if true must be [illegible] real dementia, for Lord Derby had an income of between three and four hundred thousand pounds a year. All these and other Legends appeared in the pages of a paper called the Queen's Messenger. There was not a skeleton in any aristocratic cupboard which this daring and biting journalist did not bring out into the light of day. At last he attacked the family of Lord Carrington, alluding to the fact that his grandfather had the mania of poverty in his old age; and he recounted some of the absurd things which men with that mania sometimes do. Lord Carrington, then a brisk and daring young man, gave Grenville Murray a horse-whipping; then there were police court proceedings; with the final result that the paper ceased to exist, and that Grenville Murray had to exile himself permanently from England. That, however, was not the end of him. He had a brilliant pen; every newspaper was only too anxious to get his copy; and he was the first journalist of my time to make an income of several thousand pounds a year.

Nobody thought the worse of Lord Carrington for thus punishing the assailant of his family; in time he gave up the wild delights of the Prince of Wales' set; he devoted himself to his estate; with the result that he turned his property into a very paying concern, while many other squires of large acres became bankrupt. Then he was taken up as a politician; was made an Australian Viceroy; then he became a Cabinet Minister; one of the few Liberals in the House of Lords, he gave bluff expression to his ideas; and was made the President of the National Liberal Club where the earnest Liberals, especially in the provinces most do congregate. And now he is beginning for the first time to look old [illegible] and lined, for he has lost his only son.

The Virtue of the Natural Leaf is perfectly preserved in the sealed "SALADA" packet. Young tender leaves only, grown with utmost care and with flavour as the prime object, are used to produce the famous Salada blends.

Bonner-Worth Employees, Mostly Girls, Set Splendid Example In Patriotic Giving

At the first echo of the war the employees of the Bonner Worth Company decided on their own initiative, to give a portion of their wages for patriotic purposes. Their aggregate donations now amount to $312.04, which averages about $2.00 per employee. When it is considered that the Bonner-Worth workers are, for the most part, girls, many of them of an age between 14 and 17, that, while they receive fair wages, their envelopes do not bulge weirhtily, and that probably every cent they earn is required for their own use and the necessities of home, having regard for these contingencies the Bonner-Worth employees deserve special commendation upon their persevering generosity. Month after month they have made their contributions, and few girls in the city can present a better or even as good a record. The efforts of some may have been more spectacular, but there have been few examples of similar giving in Peterborough for this cause.

It should also be remembered that these employees, most of them young girls, spun much of the yarn that made the khaki uniforms for the Canadian soldiers, and in that work they keep the bobbins rolling up night and day with few and brief intermissions. Hence, while the unsung and unostentatious patriotism of the Bonner-Worth employees has been quietly carried on from month to month, the facts were learned for the first time to-day, and it is felt that they deserve the fullest recognition. Many men in good positions have not equalled the patriotic work of these employees who, it is understood, intend to continue their givings until the conclusion of the war.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH SOLDIERS AFTER THE WAR?

The Imperial Government has taken time by the forelock in appointing a commission under Sir Rider Haggard to visit the self-governing dominions to envolve a scheme for the settlement of soldiers after the war. The British Government is acting on precedents. Such steps have been taken before by it in Canada and elsewhere, notably here after the Napoleonic wars, when large settlements of veterans were made in the Eastern Townships and elsewhere. The case of the United Empire Loyalists also stand out prominently in this regard. These men became the backbone of the newer settlements, and their descendants to-day are in the vanguard all through Canada.

The opportunity which affords itself is one which Canada ought not to neglect. The men who have made good in the firing line may be trusted to make good citizens and good settlers with proper opportunities and assistance given them. All will readily agree with the principle that Canada should open its doors wide to such an immigration. The details have to be worked out. The Commissioner, and whoever accompanies him, will naturally call first at Ottawa. The efforts of the Dominion authorities naturally tend to people and develop the western provinces, where Canada owns the land and is prepared to give the settler the homestead and farm which he requires.

In the natural course of events the efforts put forth by the Dominion to develop the West have been to the general advantage of Canada. But in the working out of its scheme of immigration the old provinces of Canada, which have borne "the burden and heat of the day," have been passed over, and any progress made in the way of settlement has been largely left to the improve of their own Provincial governments. The result, except in the case of Quebec, which has increased in population, has been disastrous to Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island, which have all lost in population, and have seen their representation in the Commons decreased, and consequently their influence diminished proportionately to the West. In connection with these returning soldiers an opportunity offers itself to the Provincial governments of the Eastern provinces which they ought not to overlook of filling up some of their vacant lands.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

Special Effort For Overseas Tobacco Fund By October 22

Much is being done and a great deal more can be accomplished towards collecting money for this important work if the citizens will do their part in contributing towards the Fund which means delight and gratitude to our brave boys in the fighting line. This fund is carried out under the following instructions.

1. All printed matter such as collection books, post cards, etc., are paid for out of the general fund of the Overseas Club at London, England. Thus ensuring all money paid for tobacco goes for tobacco.

2—For twenty-five cents we send: 50 cigarettes, 1-4 lb. tobacco, 2 packages cigarette papers, 1 small box matches, 1 post card with given name and address printed on.

3—The tobacco is purchased in Canada from Tuckett Co., Hamilton, parcelled and shipped by them under the supervision of government officials. The Army Service Corps delivers to the trenches, all carriage free.

5—All money collected is turned into the bank or post office and sent by them to headquarters of the Overseas Club, London, England.

6—The Tobacco Fund started with the war, but the overseas was started years ago. This club is giving their time and money to the Tobacco Fund absolutely free of charge.

The local committee would like the collectors in the city to make a special effort towards getting all the subscriptions possible between now and next Friday night, October 22nd in order that the result be handed in at this meeting to be held at Bank of Montreal chambers. Any new collectors desiring books can get them from the joint secretaries, H. Dearle and H. A. Cranfield, who remitted twenty pounds sterling yesterday to secretary-treasurer at London, England, being contributions from this city.

PALE, FEEBLE GIRLS

Weakness Generally Comes On as Womanhood Approaches

Girls upon the threshold of womanhood often drift into a decline in spite of all care and attention How often one sees girls who have been strong and lively become suddenly weak, depressed, irritable and listless. It is the dawn of womanhood—a crisis in the life of every girl — and prompt measures should be taken to keep the blood pure and rich with the red tint of health. If the blood is not healthy at this critical stage the body is weakened and grave disorders follow. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of young girls from what might have been life-long invalidism or an early death. They are a blood-builder of unequaled richness, strengthening weak nerves and producing a liberal supply of red, healthy blood which every girl needs to sustain her strength. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved their great value over and over again to young women whose health was failing. Miss Minnie Duffield, Eramosa, Ont., says: "It gives me great pleasure to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. When I was approaching the age of womanhood I suffered greatly from bloodlessness, or anaemia. My work was a drag on me. I had no appetite and never felt rested in the mornings. I could scarcely walk for five minutes at a time without taking a rest. I was troubled with severe headaches, and things looked gloomy indeed. I doctored for a long time and got but little, if any, benefit. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and did so and after taking them for a time felt better. I continued taking the Pills until I had used six boxes when I felt like a new person, and was again enjoying splendid health. I would strongly advise any girl who is weak or run down to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Voice of The People

Dear Sir,—I cannot quite understand the stand you take in your editorial yesterday, "Liquor Restriction and Fair Play." After the terrible indictment that "On economic or moral grounds the liquor traffic hasn't one claim to existence" you proceed to champion their cause on the moral ground of fair play and justice. If the liquor traffic has legal rights to compensation for the curtailment of the hours of sale under their license they are well able, both financially and otherwise, to look ater their own interests, and can be relied upon so to do, but, if they cannot legally recover, they certainly are not morally entitled to compensation, as the state, that is, the public, have a very large contra account against them for the maintenance of thousands of persons who have been debauched by them, and made into criminals, imbeciles, etc.

Rather compensate the widow
O'er the drunkard's grave who bends,
Rather compensate the orphan
Robbed by drink of earthly friends,
But expect us not to pay them
Whose dark doings we deplore;
'Tis enough if we forgive them—
Bid them go and sin no more.

Thank God the days of the liquor traffic are numbered. It has been a long, hard struggle, but the end is in sight; the future will have no place for whiskey; the men who are in the trade to-day went in with the full knowledge that their time was limited, and if they have put their money into a losing venture they are no more entitled to compensation from te state than is any other man who finds that the demand for his goods have fallen off.

Yours, etc.,
Geo. Leader.

Peterborough, October 16th, 1915.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In this morning's Times Mr Burnham intimated that in his opinion, clubs should close their supply of liquor down the same as the bars close at eight o'clock. Would Mr. Burnham appear before the Provincial License Commission which will sit in Peterborough early next month and ask that the Peterborough Club be limited to eight o'clock in its sale of liquor. If he will do this, I will promise a large temperance delegation will stand behind him and support it? I have heard that Mr. Burnham is a member of the Peterborough Club, and as the member of the House of Commons in this riding, he would be of very great value in this vital temperance agitation.

Yours truly,
TEMPERANCE.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Belleville Police Discord.

Four members of the Belleville police force submitted their resignation to the Police Commissioners when Sergt. Harman, who was suspended by Chief Newton, was reinstated by the Commissioners.

No Progress.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon has a way of speaking his mind that is sometimes embarrassing to others. On one occasion an inexperienced young fellow was called upon to make a speech at a banquet at which former Speaker Cannon was also present.

"Gentlemen," began the young fellow, "my opinion is that the generality of mankind in general is disposed to take advantage of the generality of ——"

"Sit down son," interrupted "Uncle Joe," "you are coming out of the same hole you went in at."

St. Joseph Hospital Shower Was Generous

The ladies who arranged the jam and linen shower for St. Joseph's Hospital, which was held in St. Alphonsus Luceum yesterday, expressed the opinion this morning that the offering received promised to be as great, if not greater, than last year. A large quantity of jam and linen was donated and it was expected that the farmers would to-day make generous donations of the fruits of the harvest. Some preferred to give money yesterday, and altogether the shower was a most successful one. The occasion was concluded last night with a social gathering.

Fruit Was Shipped This Morning

Three Thousand Dollars Worth of Fruit Will Be Shipped Direct to England

One hundred and fifteen barrels of fruit consigned to Commissioner Hodgetts of London, England, was shipped this morning from the Grand Trunk station. Each barrel bore the familiar red cross. The fruit, which was collected by the local branch of the Red Cross Society, is valued at $3,000. It was collected, packed and at no expense whatever; the Grand Trunk Railway agreeing to ship it free of charge.

Members of the committee were on hand this morning, also Mr. Fred Roy of the Roy Studio, who secured a number of pictures of the consignment. His Worship Mayor Fuller arrived in time to get into the picture that was was taken beside the freight car in which the fruit was stored.

Mr. McNabb, station agent, was on hand and rendered whatever assistance was required in connection with the final disposition of the fruit which will be shipped direct to Col. Hodgetts, Red Cross Commissioner, London, England.

The committee is indebted to those who assisted in the work connected with the collection and shipping of the fruit which is destined for the use of wounded Canadian soldiers.

Poultry Plentiful On Market To-Day

Poultry was again plentiful on the market this morning with ducks making an improved showing in both quantity and quality. Chickens were offered in about as large numbers as on recent market days with prices ranging from 80c a pair up. Ducks sold around one dollar each. Turkeys were few. Last Saturday's showing was specially for the Thanksgiving Day trade, but the rest of the flocks will be held until they have put on more golden weight.

Eggs sold at 33c and 35c a dozen, with the farmers threatening higher prices. Some of them, however, said that their hens were still laying, and it was their offerings that shook the market down a few cents.

Butter at 38 cents was in good demand and fairly plentiful.

Potatoes were selling at $1.25 a bag, but there is an opinion that this price is too high. Lambs sold at 14 and 16 cents.

Presentation To Lakefield Boy

Courageous Act Was Recognized by the Royal Humane Society

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 16.—Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, the headmaster of Grove School, presented Gerald Curry, one of the boys of the school, aged 11, with an honourary testimonial from the Royal Humane Society for bravery in endeavouring to save the life of a friend named Boulton, at Sylvan Glen, near Port Hope, when bathing last year. Boulton was carried out of his depth and Curry at once swam to his rescue. He was carried down by the weight of the other boy, but happily help was at hand and both were saved. Mr. Mackenzie expressed the pride that he and all the school felt in this record of courage on the part of one of the Grove boys, and the presentation was greeted with loud applause by all the boys. A number of parents were also present, among them being Curry's own mother.

Remains Have Been Recovered

Body of the Late Allan Gillies Was Taken From the Water Yesterday

LINDSAY, Oct. 16.—The searching party engaged in the search for the body of the late Allan Gillies, discovered the remains late yesterday just about 20 or 25 feet behind the spot where Mr. Hall was picked up.

It would appear that the two unfortunate victims were swimming together towards the crib of logs when the strength of both snapped out.

A young lad named Hutton, who works in the vicinity, is stated to have heard the two men conversing in the water and to have heard Mr. Gillies remark, "Wait for me, Ja!"

Greater Sacrifices Will Have To Be Made Before The Struggle Is Over

(Sir. Ryerson)

Noted Red Cross Worker Addresses a Large Gathering in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute—Caring For the Wounded is a Task to Distinguish as One of the Most Democratic Organizations in the Whole World—More Help is Needed if the Good Work is to be Prosecuted to a Successful Issue—Germans Fire at the Red Cross.

HANDLING THE WOUNDED

It's a far cry from the battle-line that stretches its snake-like course through France and Belgium to the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, yet that cry was heard last evening in the form of an appeal, presented by Surgeon-General Ryerson, on behalf of the Red Cross Society. Surgeon-General Ryerson, or Dr. Ryerson, as he is known in civil life, has for some months past been actively engaged in the work for which the Society is noted. In order that he might better acquaint himself of the actual conditions and the needs that exist, Dr. Ryerson made a personal trip to the western battlefront, where he was accorded every opportunity of obtaining first-hand information concerning the practical operation of an organization whose name is a household word throughout the civilized world. This information was imparted to an audience that filled the Assembly Hall in the course of an address that who both convincing and informative in its scope.

The Stage of War.

Dr. Ryerson has said more than his share of sorrow as a result of the struggle that encompasses the greater part of the world. His eldest son was killed in Flanders and his second son invalided home. His wife was among those lost when the Lusitania was torpedoed by a German submarine. His appearance last evening was the occasion for an outburst of applause. Dr. Ryerson was attired in the uniform of his rank. He is a fluent speaker and possesses the happy faculty of expressing himself in a clear and forceful manner.

The chair was taken by Lieut.-Col. D. Walker who paid a glowing tribute to the Society which had its inception twenty years ago.

The Shelling of Dunkirk.

In his opening remarks Dr. Ryerson said he had been accorded the privilege of traversing the battle lines of France and Belgium. A very small section of Belgium remains in the hands of the Belgians. Speaking of the hospital work that is being carried on under the auspices of the Red Cross Society, Dr. Ryerson said he knew of one hospital that included among its staff, Madame Curie, the discoverer of radium. The first hospital visited was in Belgium. Here the staff was largely composed of American nurses, while the patients were mostly Belgians. The next place visited was Dunkirk, which was shelled from a distance of twenty-one and a quarter miles with shells weighing eleven hundred and fifty pounds. One of the shells struck an hotel, and the result was a large hole in the ground to mark the spot where the building once stood.

The Battle of Ypres.

The Battle of Ypres, in which the Canadians played such a conspicuous part, was the next place visited by the speaker who, among other things, described the scenes that were enacted on April 22nd last, when the beautiful Belgian road leading away from the battle front was filled with terror-stricken Algerian troops and refugees. Dr. Ryerson was in the town of Ypres when it was being shelled by the Germans. All he saw in the once flourishing town of twenty thousand inhabitants were a few sick pigeons. Throughout the town a faint odour of death was manifest, as under the piles of ruined buildings were hundreds of dead bodies. "They are still shelling Ypres," said Dr. Ryerson. "They have failed in their attempt to capture the town, and what is more, they never will," he added.

Fire on the Red Cross.

Dr. Ryerson cited a number of instances where the Germans had shelled various hospitals and otherwise refused the protection to which the Red Cross is entitled, according to the agreement that was drawn up at the Geneva Convention in 1864. One hospital in particular that sheltered about four hundred wounded men was shelled with inflamatory bombs and very few of the inmates escaped. In another case four Germans, dressed as Belgians, and each wearing a Red Cross on their arm, was seen carrying a stretcher. They were allowed to move around unmolested until they opened the stretcher and produced a machine gun, which was used on the British, with deadly effect. On another occasion the Germans concealed a maxim in an ambulance, while another case was reported of a distinguished doctor by the name of McNabb, who was attached to the London Scottish. While working at the rear of the advancing troops a German officer approached him and blew his brains out with a revolver. A young fellow named Gliddop who came from Sudbury, suffered a similar fate while engaged in Red Cross work.

Shell Fire Continuous.

One thing Dr. Ryerson regarded as more deadly than shell fire, and that is a sharp-pointed steel arrow that is discharged from an aeroplane, twenty five at a time. They would go right through a man. He knew of one instance where one of the deadly missiles went right through a man's body and that of his horse. The French hold about five hundred and fifty miles of battlefront while the British hold one hundred, and the Belgians about seventeen miles," he said. The shell fire is continuous.

During the battle of Ypres three hospitals stationed near the front handled fifteen thousand cases during six days. Some of the doctors never once removed their clothes in that time.

Handling the Wounded.

The speaker gave a very interesting account of the manner in which the wounded are handled. When a soldier is first wounded he receives first aid administered by men who are trained in that particular branch of the service. If he happens to be wounded in the day time the wounded man must remain in the trench until nightfall, before he can be removed to a dressing station as the Germans absolutely refuse to respect the Red Cross. Dr. Ryerson told of an order that was found on a German and which was signed by his commanding officer, ordering all wounded to be killed. At night the wounded man is removed to an advanced dressing station, which is usually located from one hundred and fifty to two hundred yards to the rear, where his wounds are re-dressed. Then he is moved farther to the rear and placed in a field hospital where he remains three days or longer, after which he is moved to a base hospital and eventually finds his way to England.

Supplies Are Needed.

"Why is the Red Cross sending so many clothes?" was the question that was asked and answered by Dr. Ryerson. Clothing is one of the first things a man needs after he is wounded. By clothing is meant underclothing, socks and such other articles as tend to subscribe to comfort of the wounded. Wounded men are often in a verminous condition and must be supplied with clean clothing. Sometimes an exploding shell will strip a man naked, then again if he is wounded, the clothing he has on may become saturated with blood and be unfit for further use. "Don't think you are wasting your time, admonished Dr. Ryerson. Let me assure you that everything is needed.

The accommodation provided by Canadian hospitals in France amounts to approximately ten thousand beds. It requires seventeen hospital trains to handle the wounded in France and six well equipped hospital ships are in daily service. The Germans attempted to sink one of these ships while crossing the English channel. They failed to see the large Red Cross that was painted on the side and the heavy green band that runs the full length of the ship or the large cross that is illuminated at nights by means of red coloured lights.

"Some War."

"This is some war; it leaves a nice taste in your mouth," said a massive looking Indian soldier to Dr. Ryerson during the course of a trip across the Channel on a hospital ship. Fighting is second nature to some of the Indian troops that are now fighting in France. When they are at home and have no fighting to do, they fight among themselves." They think nothing of killing a neighbour before breakfast," jocularly remarked the speaker. The motor ambulance is playing a large part in the present war. The Canadian Red Cross Society has sent one hundred and is now organizing a fleet of fifty. Speaking of the need for tobacco and cigarettes, Dr. Ryerson said that the first thing a wounded man usually asked for was a cigarette. One British Tommy describing the manner in which he was wounded said: "First I heard a loud noise and then I heard a nurse say, sit up and take this."

Still Greater Sacrifices.

In conclusion Dr. Ryerson said that a rumour was afloat to the effect that the Red Cross Society was selling supplies to the men at the front and that some of the executive officers were receiving large salaries. This he characterized as so silly as to be hardly worth talking about." Nothing was ever sold by the Red Cross Society, and furthermore the officers of whom he was one gave their time and labour gratis. "You are doing a good work in Peterborough," said the speaker. Everything you make is used. A daily audit is made of the finances and every item is accounted for. The situation in the war zone is becoming more tense each day and still greater sacrifices would have to be made before the conflict is over."

A Democratic Organization.

Mrs. John Allan, on behalf of the Peterborough branch of the Red Cross Society made an eloquent appeal to the audience for assistance, in the form of personal help or funds with which to purchase supplies. The Society is one of the most democratic organizations in the world. It knows no class or creed. It ministers to the unspeakable Turk as well as to the brave and heroic Serb. Only one public appeal has been made locally and that was a tag day collection which netted a substantial sum.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker of the evening. It was moved by His Worship Mayor Butler and seconded by Dr. G. O. Cameron.

Miss L. Logan contributed a violin solo and Mr. Douglas Carlisle a couple of vocal solos, which were well received.

The collection for last evening amounted to $139.61. This was taken up by a number of young ladies who were attired in the conventional costume of the Red Cross nurse.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 16.—To the Germans the worst feature of the clearing of the Baltic Sea of German shipping by the British submarines is that their supply of Swedishers for munition making is threatened.

ROME, Oct. 16.—Though the Allies' abandonment of the Dardanelles campaign was considered quite possible here to-day, this was not interpreted as meaning that they would cease trying to reach Constantinople. Instead, it was thought it would mean combining a drive on the Turkish capital and the checkmating of the German effort to reach the same city.

By giving up the Dardanelles expedition and the attempt to get to Serbia from Salonika and landing a strong force on Bulgaria's Aegean coast, it was pointed out a road might be opened to Constantinople through Bulgaria and Turkey, which would prove easier than the Gallipoli Peninsula route, and at the same time put the Allies between the Germans and their goal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—A cable to the Tribune from Paris says: The information reached here to-day that Austria a month ago offered tempting terms of peace to Serbia, and only the intervention of Prince Alexander, who said that Serbia was ready to die by the sword rather than be a traitor prevented an acceptance of the offer. Austria's peace terms were that Serbia should retain all territory held before the war, with the exception of Bulgarian Macedonia, which was to be handed back to Bulgaria.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The Daily Telegraph publishes the information that since the beginning of the war seventeen Zeppelins and ten other German airships have been destroyed or captured, and that 126 of the crews have been killed and 138 taken prisoners.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—Brigadier-General Hodgins has been promoted to be major-general, and Colonel Logie to be brigadier-general.

Mr. and Mrs. Gratton Telford Surprised by Their Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Gratton Telford, Chemong Road, were agreeably surprised last Thursday evening when about fifty of the members of the Young Men's Class of the Gilmour Memorial Church waited upon them in their home. Mr. Telford is president of the class, and on Thursday night had been married a month. His classmates took advantage of the occasion to present the newly weds with a biscuit jar and the following address:

Mr. and Mrs. Gratton Telford.

"Needles and pins, needles and pins,
When a man marries
His trouble begins."

And no doubt you will always remember your first trouble as being the night when your noisy class-mates came to make their formal (?) call.

We come here to-night because we wanted to come to you, our President, our heartiest congratulations on your recent marriage. We wish for you much joy and happiness, even daring to hope that you will give such a cheering account of married life as will encourage some of our lonely bachelor hearts and help us to face the trying ordeal.

We welcome Mrs. Telford most heartily to our midst, and extend to her also our very best good wishes for a long, happy and useful married life. We trust that a kind and gracious Providence may in His abundant mercy grant unto you both, health, joy and prosperity.

We shall look forward to meeting you, Mrs. Telford, at our many church meetings and gatherings, feeling sure that you will always take a kindly interest in your husband's old classmates.

We ask of you to accept this biscuit jar as a slight but tangible expression of our good wishes and let us assure you that we, one and all, join in wishing that, "King Heaven may send you prosperous life, long and ever happy."

Signed on behalf of the Young Men's Class,

Mrs. J. Gordon Mann.

"You Know Me, Al" Describes Incidents Of World's Series

Ring Lardner, the auther of the "You Know Me, Al" series, was a spectater at the world's series games and he tells some of the incidents in his own peculiar style as follows:

I suppose you know how big this Boston ball pk is. It's so big that they have 3 police men on horse back in the outfield. Well in 1 inning gavvy cravath come up to bat with men on 2nd and 3rd and with 2 out and hit a ball farther than you or i could hit I with a golf club. But the hit dident do no good because when Lewis seen cravath come to bat he went back and leaned against the charles river and he only had a few steps to run to catch the ball. But if that there ball had been hit on the Phyll ys grounds it would have went over into the next county.

Well after lewis catched the ball he had to come in to the boston bench and i was looking for him to order a taxi to make the trip but i guest he figgured it would cost to much and he walked all the way without even stoping to rest. I mention this because it shows what good shape lewis must be in to take 1 of them marathon hikes and still be strong enugh yet to bust up a ball game the same P. M. i guest the braves outfielders who half to play on these grds all season must have campbells or some thing to ride back and frth there positions with them. Beffore i forget it, I want to tel you it was a curve ball lewis hit in the 9th inning and don't leave no body tel you i was a fast ball because it was a curve ball.

How Phillies Might Have Won.

The phillys could of win this serijous as easy as not if theyd know how to go about it. As soon as the agedule of games was announced they should ought to of insisted tha in the games played in Boston the Red Sox outfielders had to stay with in reasonable bounds when Cravath came up to mat and not back up against the fence where he flits them. Yesterday he would of made i home run if lewis had of remained in the city limits and to-day he would of got 2 more. As it was he had to be satisfide with a 3 bagger that was a bout the poorest ball he hit all day. It was a pop fly over 2nd base that took a falls bound over Speaker and went for tripplets.

It's discouraging to a man to get base hits on flukes and then when he really smashes the ball to have some big stiff like duffy lewis grab them off of him. Why when he come up in the 6th inning to-day the mounted police road up against the left field fence so as if Lewis dident happen to catch the ball they could pick it up and ride in with it because not even lewis could of throwd it back to the ball pk from where he was standing at. The grand jurey should ought to go after lewis and his policemen frends.

Picking the Pitchers.

I guess I was going some when I picked the two pitchers for to-day's game and picked them right. I says 1 of them had the same name as a certain automobile and of course you know who it was by now. It wasent Packard and it wasent Ford because there both in the federal league or somewheres. And I says the boston pitcher had the name of a seaside resort, and when I says that i meant Shore. That reminds me of the last time i seen the Red Sox play the White Sox in Chi and we was setting in the press box and some I says where did the Red Sox get Shore and somebody else says at the foot of Randolph street. I forget who said it or i would give them credit.

Timely Hitting By Lewis.

They must be something about duffy lewis face that drives pitchers crazy. In Monday's game Alexander stuck 1 right over the hart of the plate and lewis cracked it and drove in the winning run. To-day he drove in the winning run again, and this time Chalmers had 2 strikes and no balls on him and then stuck 1 where he could slam it instead of trying to make him bite on a bad 1.

Harvey a man can't help from feeling sory for these Phila pitchers on act the had brakes they been getting. Chalmers certainly come up to expectations and if he hadent of made that 1 slip in pitching to lewis he wondent of got no worse than a draw probly and may be he would of won his game in extra inings. In the 1st part of the game he sure had them fooled with his fast ball and spitter, and another thing they had been used to batting against Alexander and Mayer both of which pitche a good deal with a side arm motion. Wall Chalmers always pitchs straight over hand and the Red Sox was mistimed his delivery that is only wasent batting up wheres near up to their standard. But the phillys was just like they been for the 2 proceeding games they couldent get no runs for there pitcher to work on.

Helped Official Scorers.

Well i set with the official scorers again and helped them out and dident get even a thank you mam. Besides helping them with the scoring I kept them amused with a runing fire of coment on the game but some times they dident even come acrost with a good helthy laugh. How ever I thot they would die laughing at I of my remarks. This here Nichoff got a base on balls in the 4th inning so i says whos going to show where 1st base is at.

1 of the scorers Nick Flateley who I mentioned yesterday in some connections tride to say things as funny as I says but he made a dismal failure. For instance in the 3rd ining Barry was on 1st base and Cady bunted to the left of Chalmers and chalmers fumbled it and Luderus tride to pick it up and tripped and fell and grabbed it while he was laying down.

So Nick Flateley says Chalmers fumbled on the 10 yd line but Luderus fell on the fall recovering it for Philadelphia. Bum stuff, hay Harvey. An other I i pulled was as follows: 1 of the official scorers was snoozeing and when he woke up they was 1 out and he hadn't saw it. So he says how did Scott get out. So i says he took his turn at bat.

"Inside Stuff" by Ex-Mayor.

I herd some inside stuff a bout saturdays game over at phily. exmare fitzgerald of boston was with the royal rooters and they had a band and right after foster had made his 2 base hit the band played the star spangled banner. Well a man told me to-day that ex-mare fitzgerald ordered the band to do that be asue the game would have to be stopped during the playing of the national Hym and foster would have a chance to rest after his sprint. Its a good story but i believe it should ought to be classed as faction.

Dugey's Wicked Slide.

Oscar Dugey finely busted in to the serious to-day when they was 2 out in the 8th and Luderus on 1st base. It was a good spot to try for a stolen base and Ludie aint what you could call the Gil Anderson of baseball. So pat took him off and stuck Dugey in to run for him and Dugey stole on the 2nd ball pitched and if anybody ever had a wickeder slide in to 2nd base it was wile I wasent looking.

Some base man might of tagged him out but if they had of they would of played the rest of there life with out no hands. I looked over to where Ty Cobb was setting when the play was over. Tys eyes was popping right out of his head and his face was dethly pail. It was the 1st time he was ever jellus of a ball player.

I been wondering all season what Pat was hanging on to Dugey for. Well Harvey if he ever gets so as he can hit a little I bet they will make him ware cushions on his feet or else all the base mans in the league will quit there jobs and go in to some other thing more safer like chauffeur on a balloon.

WORLD'S SERIES NOTES.

Only two passes were coaxed from Foster in the two games he pitched. Shore gave 2, Alexander 5, Chalmers 3, Mayer and Rixey 2 each.

Five double-plays were pulled off, three by Philadelphia and two by Boston. There were none in the first two games.

Only once was a double-steal attempted, and then the runner only scored because Burns dropped the throw from second.

Foster, the Hero—Red Sox pitcher who, in addition to pitching gilt-edged ball, won his own game, the second of the world's series, by placing a timely hit in the last innings.

DICK SHEEHY SIGNS WITH THE ARGONAUTS

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Realizing that Argonauts' weakness in last Saturday's game against Tigers was the lack of hard, stiff tackling, the Argonaut management have been hustling this week in quest of good tacklers. Frank Knight was the first to join the Scullers, and now the Oarsmen have made another ten stroke. Last night Dick Sheehy of last year's University of Toronto seniors was in uniform and practised at Rosedale Field, and afterwards signed a certificate.

The addition of Sheehy and Knight will give strength where it is sadly needed to the Argonauts, and despite the loss of Murray, Murphy, Smith and Mills, the Oarsmen will be hard to beat for the Interprovincial honours. Sheehy, while not a flashy player, takes a lot out of his opponents when he tackles, and along with Knight will make the backfields of the Ottawa, Hamilton and Montreal teams wary.

CRAIG WITH H.R.C.

Hamilton Rowing Club made a good impression in Ottawa on the holiday when they made Frank Shaughnessy's aggregation hustle to the limit to win. They were without the services of several of their stars, but they will all be out against the T.R. and A.A. on Saturday. Ross Craig, the big line player, has again donned a suit and will make a big difference to the playing ability of the Hamilton team.

German Humour.

Springfield "Republican" — Those who have denied to the Teuton a sense of humour are confounded by the indignant protests of the German press against the violation by the Allies of Greek neutrality in the landing of an army near Salonika. It is even declared that all neutral countries should make a firm protest against this outrage. If they should begin to protest, it is hardly necessary to say, they would have to take their start with Belgium. As for Greek neutrality, it appears to be of doubtful colour; the landing of the Allies does not seem to have caused resentment, and so far as the ethical question goes Venizelos illuminated the subject by saying that if Greece was not willing and able to fulfill its treaty obligations to defend Servia against Bulgarian aggression, it could at least give passage to Allied troops for that purpose.

Some Echoes Of The World's Series

Cravath had the greatest number of strike-outs chalked up against him, namely, six.

Speaker drew the most passes, strolling to first on four occasions.

Philadelphia pitchers gave ten bases on balls. Red Sox twirlers issued nine.

Hooper's seven clouts accounted for thirteen bases. Lewis was next with twelve bags, and Luderus third with eleven.

Only four bases were stolen during the series, Hoblitzel, Bancroft, Whitted, and Duggey getting one each.

Four home runs were knocked out, Hooper getting two and Lewis and Luderus one each.

Seven sacrifice hits were made by Boston players and five by Phillies.

Paskert was the busiest outfielder, making, 17 outs. Whitted had 14, Speaker 10, Lewis 10, Hooper 8, and Cravath 5.

All the regulars, outside the pitchers, managed to get at least one hit.

Hooper is credited with the most times at bat, an average of four to a game.

Gardner, Stock and Whitted were the only players to participate in all the games without being struck out once.

Thirteen extra-base hits were made, seven by Boston and six for the Phillies. Luderus led with three, two doubles and a triple.

Cravath only managed to get two hits in the five games, a double and a triple, but he scored on each occasion.

Lewis was the leading run-getter with four. Speaker, Gardner, Bancroft, Paskert and Cravath were tied with two each.

Scott, the Red Sox shortstop, got only one hit in 18 times at bat. Niehoff got one in 16 tries, and Whitted one in 15 trips to the plate.

Foster and Alexander were the best fielding pitchers, each handling seven chances cleanly.

Four errors were made by the Red Sox, and two by the Phillies, but no player had more than one chalked up against him.

Both teams' pitchers struck out the same number of batsmen, namely 23.

Lewis led with willow-wielders with eight hits. Hooper and Luderus were next with seven each.

A difference of two runs separated the teams at the end, but Boston got 43 hits to 27 by the Phillies.

Pitcher Foster got four hits in eight times at bat. Lewis' batting average for the series was .444. Luderus hit at a .438 clip.

The Phillies outfielded the Red Sox according to the cold figures, the team average being .989 against .979.

Boston hit for a team batting average of .264. The Phillies' average was only .182.

Boston used 17 players during the series, and Philadelphia 16.

Three times Boston won out in the ninth spasm.

Burns was the busiest mask artist in the fray. He did all the catching for the Nationals, handled 37 chances, with only one error, but that one allowed a run to be scored.

Foster led the pitchers in strike-outs with 13. The others were: Alexander 10, Mayer 7, Shore 6, Leonard 6, Chalmers 6, and Rixey 3.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER

a proposition making provision for your family in the event of death, or, if living, provision for old age?

Council May Vote $5000

Toward The Fund That is Being Raised For The British Red Cross Society

A special meeting of the City Council will be held this evening, when it is expected that the sum of five thousand dollars will be voted towards the fund that is being raised to assist the British Red Cross Society. The majority of the members of the Council have thought better of the meagre grant of five hundred dollars that was made a few nights ago and have practically decided that a more substantial grant would be in order. The Empire is in the throes of one of the most gigantic struggles that the world has ever known or probably will know, and public bodies as well as the individual, must be prepared to make all manner of sacrifices. It is the intention of the Council to take such steps as may be used to meet such contingencies as the one with which the Council will deal this evening.

RAID STIMULATES RECRUITING

One Officer's Well-Chosen Spot for Appeal Has a Telling Effect.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Zeppelin raid had a splendid effect on recruiting yesterday. At one meeting alone thirty men of a fine type came forward where three or four would have been welcomed a few weeks ago.

One recruiting officer erected a platform in a hole made in the street by a bomb. It was a smart idea, for in such surroundings the appeal to the men to enlist came with a far more telling force than it would otherwise been possible

How Fat Folks May Become Slim

BE MODERATE IN YOUR DIET, BREATHE DEEPLY, AND TAKE A LITTLE OIL OF ORILENE

Fat folks, particularly those from 10 to 30 pounds above normal weight, will be interested to learn that they may easily reduce their weight without starvation diet or tiresome exercise.

If you are fifteen to twenty pounds above normal weight, you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden. Don't jeopardize your health or be the laughing stock of the community any longer.

Spend as much time as you can in the open air, practice deep breathing and get from any good druggist a box of oil of orilene capsules, take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Even a few days' treatment should show a noticeable reduction in weight. Footsteps will become lighter, the skin more firm and smoother in appearance, your work seem easier and a lighter and more buoyant feeling take possession of your whole being.

Any person who wants to reduce their weight 15 or 20 pounds should give this treatment a trial. You will probably find it is just what you need.

Any druggist can supply you or a large box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

Allies Limited In Landing At Salonika

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—"According to advices from Budapest," the Overseas News Agency says, "the Greek army took measures to limit the space occupied by the troops of the Entente Allies landing at Salonica Thus, it is said, French telegraphers who attempted to establish a wireless station in a building in the port were forcibly ejected.

"It is stated in these advices that 35,000 Greek soldiers who have been assembled at Salonica occupy all the buildings in the town, and the troops which landed were limited to the section of the port which is in Serbian possession.

"Sofia advices by way of Vienna say that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria exchanged telegrams with King Ferdinand.

ALLIES TAKE BULGARIAN STRONGHOLD OF STRUMNITZA

Austro-Germans Smashing Their Way Southward Through Serbia While Allies Press Northward in Serbia---Allies Not Yet Strongly Opposed

LONDON, Oct. 18.—That the Bulgarians have cut the Nish-Salonika railway at Vrania, is reported from Salonika.

Vrenia, "Vranja," a Serbian town, is about 80 miles north of Strumnitza, the Bulgarian stronghold whose capture by Serbo-Franco-British forces was announced in despatches from Salonika via London early to-day.

It is forty miles due south of Nish, and about ten miles west of the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier.

PRESSING NORTHWARD IN BULGARIA.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The Allies pressed northward in Bulgaria to-day. The Austro-Germans smashed their way southward through Serbia at the same time. The Allies' progress was, for the moment, swifter than the Teutons. The Serbians still resisted the latter desperately. The Allies had not yet been strongly opposed.

Strumnitza's fall gave the Allies control of the Salonika-Nish railway for fifty miles northward from Salonika, about a third of the distance to Nish, Salonika advices said.

Strumnitza, the Bulgarina stronghold, is 20 miles east of the railway, but it was reported the Serbo-Franco-British forces were spreading westward and securing the line at the same time that they advanced northward.

Their object was believed to be to extend their front sufficiently to Nish and strike at Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, at the same time, giving them a line a little more than sixty miles long.

About another third of the distance between Salonika and Nish, however, there were indications there would be a fierce struggle. At this point the Bulgarians were across the Serbian frontier and it was reliably reported they had cut the railway at the Serbian town of Vrania, "Vranja."

There, if not soon, it was assumed, they would make a stand.

CALLING FOR MORE MEN.

News that Field Marshal Von Mackensen, commanding the Austro-Germans in Northern Serbia, had called for more men, gave much encouragement here.

Thought it was admitted he was advancing, military experts were sure he himself considered his progress too slow for safety.

Von Mackensen's line, at the latest accounts, extended from Belgrade eastward to Golbattz, about a fifty-mile front. It was repulsing Serbs, bit by bit, but was not more than ten miles within the Serbian frontier at but a few points.

Much of the fighting is in the mountains. Weather has turned very bad, and troops suffer intensely.

Losses heavy everywhere.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The first detail of four hundred German prisoners reached Nish on Friday.

SHOULD BE GIVEN UP IF FUTURE STRATEGY REQUIRES

LONDON, Oct. 18. — The London News, in an editorial on the Gallipoli situation says:

"The Government has already a heavy responsibility in respect of the Dardanelles. The necessity for a decision as to the future will make it still heavier. The country has long been viewing the Gallipoli campaign with profound concern, and in some respects with profound misgivings. The resolve to embarrass the Government by no open strictures is being honourably maintained. Its justification is in the confidence which cannot be disappointed save as disastrous cost, that if a vital decision must be taken the Government will take it with eyes fixed solely on the necessities which the development of the war as a whole may impose. Not even the sacrifices of the past must fetter out strategy for the future."

GERMANS CONTINUE TO LOSE HEAVILY IN DVINSK REGION

PETROGRAD, Oct. 18.—An Imperial Ukase has been issued proclaiming a "state of war" in Moscow and Moscow district.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 18.—(Official.)—Germans continue to lose heavily in the region of Dvinsk. A Zeppelin on Thursday threw 15 bombs on Minsk. In the Caucusus we routed the Turks, annihilating them. The whole region far as Vastan is clear of the enemy.

German Shipping Is Chased From Baltic

STOCKHOLM Oct. 18.—By just what means the British submarines which have been so busy lately in the Baltic succeeded in running the sound and straits connecting the Baltic and North Seas, is the subject of much speculation here.

Information was at hand today, indicating that the undersea craft have been entering the Baltic one or two at a time for two or three months and it is believed a considerable fleet is now operating from some Russian coast base.

Baltic waters were thoroughly mined by Germany early in the war, and for a year, or a little more, this defence evidently proved effective. German vessels navigating the sea unmolested since Russia's naval strength was inadequate to cope with the Kaiser's fleet in that quarter.

The presumption is that the British secret service has been working to locate the German mines, and that it finally succeeded so well that the English E-boats were able to avoid them.

The British are known to have been devoting themselves to submarine boat development, and it is believed the vessels now in use are the last word in this type of marine construction. They have been so effective that the Baltic is almost, if not quite, cleared of German shipping.

To the Germans the worst feature of the situation is that their supply of Swedish iron for munitions-making is threatened.

85,000 of Enemy Lost

25,000 Austro-Germans Killed in Serbian Fighting

PARIS, Oct 16 Austro-German losses in the campaign against Serbia up to Thursday evening, October 14, were estimated at 25,000 officers and men killed and 60,000 wounded according to a despatch received to-day by the Temps from Nish, the Serbian capital The Serbian army operating in the north, the message adds, also sustained heavy losses.

The despatch, timed 11 p.m. Thursday, says:

"All Austro-German attacks on the Obrenovatz Belgrade Semendria front have been repulsed, the enemy sustaining serious losses. The German army, which attempted to turn the right wing of the Serbians at Semendria, was driven back into the marsh of Godomine situated on the right bank of the Danube near the fortress of Semendria A Bavarian battalion was thrown into the swamps Along this entire front it was quiet to day

"The pressure of German troops in the vicinity of Pozarevac continues Enemy reinforcements in large numbers are reported to be coming from the north

"The Austro-German losses up to this evening are estimated at 25,000 killed and 60,000 wounded. The Serbian army operating in the north also sustained heavy losses.

"Nish and other Serbian cities are preparing solemn receptions for the Anglo-French troops."

Why He Was Sure To Advance

Clarence presented himself before the father of the girl whom he hoped to marry and declared his intentions.

"I have no serious objections," said the father, "but is there any chance of promotion for you or an increase in your salary?"

"Is there?" exclaimed Clarence eagerly. "I don't see how I can help it! Why, my position is next to the lowest one in the whole establishment!"—Ladies' Home Journal

Light On A Dangerous Habit

Prominent periodicals everywhere are daily exposing the harmful effect of the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee.

Physicians, food experts, medical writers and editors largely agree that cumulative effect of the 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine in the average cup of tea or coffee is responsible for the many troubles, such as sleeplessness, nervous prostration, heart palpitation, indigestion, etc., that subtly beset most regular tea and coffee drinkers.

Some people seemingly hold up under regular tea and coffee drinking without serious results, but modern thinkers, with respect for the fundamentals of health and longevity, are daily changing to

POSTUM

It is a pure food-drink made from wheat and a little wholesome molasses—contains no caffeine or other injurious drug.

When properly made, Postum has a flavour so delicious and snappy that one is inclined to forget tea and coffee within a very short time.

Postum comes in two forms: The original, Postum Cereal, requires thorough boiling, 15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum, the soluble form, is made in the cup with boiling water, 30c and 50c tins. Both kinds are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

Better appetite, steadier nerves, brighter days are scheduled for those who quit tea and coffee. A 10 days' trial shows.

MARTIAL LAW IN SOUTH AFRICA

Nationalists Will Be Met With Force If Armed Protest Is Attempted

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, Oct. 18—In a campaign speech at Potchefstroom, Transvaal, General Jan C. Smuts, Minister of Interior, Mines and Defence of the South African Union, taking as his text the demand of the Nationalists that "Premier Botha and General Smuts must go," declared nothing would "suit him better than a deliverance from the hell in which he had lived for two years, but that the Government would stick to the people to the end." He added

"If the Nationalists, finding themselves in a small minority, after the forthcoming general election, attempt an armed protest I can assure them they again will have martial law."

Making Big Guns

A fascinating sight is to watch the first stages in the manufacture of the big guns which are proving so devastating in the war. A solid ingot of steel, some 50 feet in length and weighing about 100 tons, is employed in the making of a 13-inch gun. After being forged and then allowed to cool, so that it may be toughened for the heavy work, this gigantic bar of steel is pressed into cylindrical shape by a power hydraulic press, which exerts a pressure of anything between 5,000 and 10,000 tons to the square inch. Later what is known as the trepanning operation is carried out, namely, drilling the bore from end to end. Next the bore is rifled

The most impressive sight, however, is the hardening process, when the rough weapon is heated to dazzling white heat and plunged into a well of oil. If the operation takes place in the night time the sight of this big, glowing bar of metal being lowered apparently into the bowels of the earth issuing leaping tongues of flames from the burning oil may be likened to a scene from Dante's Inferno The guns left to cool in the oil bath, out of which it comes hardened, toughened and tempered

Now follows the wire-winding operation to make the weapon stronger and impart to its some measure of elasticity This wire winding is much the same in principle as the whipping of the handle of a cricket bat. In this case, however, the whipping takes the form of a strong steel ribbon, which is wound around the body of the gun Every 18-inch gun has about 120 miles of this steel ribbon found about it Some idea of the labor involved in the manufacture of one of these guns may be gathered from the fact that from start to finish the time occupied is 12 months

Forgetful.

"Tommy," said his mother reprovingly, "what did I say I'd do to you if I ever caught you stealing jam again?"

Tommy thoughtfully scratched his head with his sticky fingers

"Why, that's funny, ma, that you should forget it, too. Hanged if I can remember."

99 Foundry St., Moncton, N. B. "My little girl's trouble started just like little water blisters on her head, which went all over her head. They itched so she could not sleep at night and she would cry by the hour and then she would scratch it. I never had any rest with her night or day she was so cross and fretful. She failed in health. All her hair dropped out.

"I was given a wash for it and a salve and I used them and they did her no good. Then I got Ointment which did her no good. I was told about Cuticura Soap and Ointment which healed her head in two months." (Signed) Mrs. James Flood, Mar. 11, 1914.

"Lazy, shiftless niggers, the whole tribe of them," was Mr. Titus' caustic comment.

At that instant the boy, quite out of breath, came thumping down the stairs.

"Mr. Scott's got rheumatis, Mr. Titus. He begs to be excused"—

"Buncombe!" snapped Mr. Titus. "He's afraid to play me. Well, this means no game for me. A beautiful day like this and"—

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Titus," said I, stepping forward. "If you don't mind taking on a stranger I will be happy to go around with you. My name is Smart. I think you must have heard of me through the countess and your"—

"Great Scott! Smart? Are—are you the author James Byron Smart, the—the man who"— He checked himself suddenly, but seized me by the hand and as he wrung it vigorously dragged me out of hearing of the men behind the desk.

"I am John Bellamy Smart," said I, a little miffed.

His shrewd, hard old face underwent a marvelous change. The crustiness left it as if by magic. His countenance radiated joy.

"I owe you a debt of gratitude, Mr Smart, that can never be lifted. My daughter has told me everything. You must have put up with a fearful lot of nonsense during the weeks she was with you. I know her well. She's spoiled, and she's got a temper, although, upon my soul, she seems different nowadays. There is a change in her, by George!"

"She's had her lesson," said I. "Besides I didn't find she had a bad temper."

"And, say, I want to tell you something else before I forget it. I fully appreciate your views on international marriage. Aline told me everything you had to say about it. You must have rubbed it in. But I think it did her good. She'll never marry another foreigner if I can help it, if she never marries. Well, well, I am glad to see you and to shake your hand. I—I wish I could really tell you how I feel toward you, my boy, but I—I don't seem to have the power to express myself, if I"—

I tried to convince him that the pleasure had been all mine and then inquired for Mrs. Titus and the countess.

"They're both here, but the good Lord only knows where. Mrs. Titus goes driving every morning. Roads are fine if you can stick to them. Aline said something last night about riding over to Fassifern this forenoon with Amberdale and young Skelly. Let's see, it's half past 10. Yes, they've gone by this time. Why didn't you write or telegraph Aline? She'll be as mad as a wet hen when she finds you've come without letting her know."

"I thought I should like to take her by surprise," I mumbled uncomfortably.

"And my son Jasper—why, he will explode when he hears you're here. He's gone over to Covington to see a girl off on the train for Louisville. You've never seen such a boy. He is always going to Covington with some girl to see that she gets the right train home. But why are we wasting time here when we might be doing a few holes before lunch? I'll take you on. Of course, you understand I'm a wretched player, but I've got one virtue: I never talk about my game and I never tell funny stories while my opponent is addressing the ball. I'm an old duffer at the game, but I've got more sense than most duffers."

We sauntered down to the club house, where he insisted on buying me a dozen golf balls and engaging a caddy for me by the week. Up to the moment we stepped up to the first tee he talked incessantly of Aline and Rosemary, but the instant the game was on he settled into the grim reserve that characterizes the man who takes any enterprise seriously be it work or play.

I shall not discuss our game further than to say that he played in atrociously bad form, but with a purpose that let me to some degree into the secret of his success in life. If I do say it myself I am a fairly good player. I don't believe I was ever in better humor than on this gay November morn. I even apologized for Mr. Titus' execrable foozles. I amiably suggested that he was a little off his game and that he'd soon strike his gait and give me a sound beating after the turn. His smile was polite, but frosty, and it was not long before I realized that he knew his own game too well to be affected by cajolery. He just pegged away, always playing the odd or worse, uncomplaining, unresentful, as even tempered as the May wind, and never by any chance winning a hole from me. He was the rarest "duffer" it has ever been my good fortune to meet.

CHAPTER XXVII.

She Proposes.

As a rule, the poorer the player the louder his execrations. Jasper Titus was one of the worst players I've ever seen, but he was the personification of gentility even under the most provoking circumstances. For instance, at the famous "Crater" it was my good fortune to pitch a ball fairly on the green from the tee. His mashie shot landed his ball about twenty feet up the steep hill which guards the green. It rolled halfway back. Without a word of disgust or so much as a scowl he climbed up and blazed away at it again, not once, but fourteen times by actual count. On the seventeenth stroke he triumphantly laid his ball on the green. Most men would have lifted and conceded the hole to me. He played it out.

"A man never gets anywhere, Mr. Smart," said he, unruffled by his miserable exhibition, "unless he keeps plugging away at a thing. That's my principle in life. Keep at it. There is satisfaction in putting the blamed ball in the hole, even if it does require twenty strokes. You did it in three, but you'll soon forget the feat. I'm not likely to forget the troubles I had going down in twenty, and there lies the secret of success. If success comes easy we pass it off with a laugh; if it comes hard we grit our teeth and remember the ways and means. You may not believe it, but I took thirty-three strokes for that hole one day last week. Day before yesterday I did it in four. Perhaps it wouldn't occur to you to think that it's a darned sight easier to do it in four than it is in thirty-three. Get the idea?"

"I think I do, Mr. Titus," said I, "the telling that 'come day' are thoroughly punctuated."

"Right, my boy. It's what we have to work for like sailors that we fly awake thinking about."

We came out upon the eminence overlooking the next hole, which lay far below us. As I stepped to the top my hail a gleeful shout came up the hillside.

"Hello, John Bellamy!"

Glancing down, I saw Jasper junior at the edge of the wagon road. He was waving his cap, and even at that distance I could see the radiance in his good looking young face. A young and attractively dressed woman stood beside him. I waved my hand and shouted a greeting.

"I thought you said he'd gone to Covington to see her off," I said, turning to the young man's father, with a grin.

"Not the same girl," said he succinctly, squinting his eyes. "That's the little Parsons girl from Richmond. He was to meet her at Covington. Jasper is a scientific butterfly. He mates both ends meet—nearly always. Now, no one but a genius could have fixed it up to see one girl off and meet another on the same train."

Later on Jasper junior and I strolled over to the casino veranda, the chatty Miss Parsons between us, but leaning a shade nearer to young Titus than to me, although she appeared to be somewhat overwhelmed at meeting a real live author. Mr. Titus, as was his habit, hurried on ahead of us. Afterward I discovered he had a dread of pneumonia.

"Aline never said a word about your coming, John," said Jasper junior. He called me John with considerable gusto. "She's learning how to hold her tongue."

"It happens that she didn't know I was coming," said I dryly. He whistled.

"She's off somewhere with Amberdale. Ever meet him? He's one of the finest chaps I know. You'll like him, Miss Parsons. He's not at all like a Britisher."

"But I like the British," said she.

"Then I'll tell him to spread it on a bit," said Jappy obligingly. "Great horseman he is. Got some ripping nags in the New York show next week, and he rides like a dream. Watch him pull down a few ribbons and rosettes. Sure thing."

"Your father told me that the countess was off riding with him and another chap—off to Fassifern, I believe."

"For luncheon. They do it three or four times a week. Not for me. I like waiters with shirt fronts and nickle tags."

Alone with me in the casino half an hour later, he announced that it really looked serious, this affair between Aline and his lordship.

I tried to appear indifferent—a rather pale effort, I fear.

"I think I am in on the secret, Jappy," said I calmly.

NEWS FROM LABRADOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—One spot in the British Empire but little affected by the war is Labrador. So it was found by Dr. Rosalie Slaughter Morton of 701 Madison avenue, assistant on the surgical staff of the Polyclinic Hospital, who spent her vacation doing hospital work with the Grenfell Mission at various stations along the Labrador coast.

There is a large German-speaking population of British subjects. Eskimos who have been converted during the last 175 years by the Moravian missions at Nain and Hopedale, and who live in village communities, speak German, and are affiliated with missions under a joint English and German management. When the war began the leaders of the missions were called down to St. John's Newfoundland and made to swear allegiance to the British Empire, but since then they have not been troubled.

"They are a peace-loving people," said Dr. Morton, "and seem to regard the war as something happening in another world. You see more pictures of the British royal family, perhaps, on the walls of the houses of the German missionary than you do on William II., and they even post up lithographs of war scenes from the London illustrated weeklies. They are too deeply interested in their own work of civilization and Christainization in Labrador to take sides in outside matters."

Perhaps one reason Labradorians are less excited about the war is because life is so difficult and uncomfortable in their native land that they look on war as an anticlimax. At least, so it would seem from Dr. Morton's description of the Moravian gardens.

The Gardening is Intensive.

"Next to nothing grows on the coast," she said. "At least, the vegetation is very slight as compared with southern Alaska, which is in the same latitude. Only a few flowers grow close to the ground in the rock crannies, and there are no vegetables at all—everything they eat is canned. The Moravians have made flower gardens around their settlements, bringing loose soil from a considerable distance, sometimes, and hoarding it up so it will stay in place. And even so, it seems almost that it took a conscious effort of will power for each flower to grow. The Moravians live in communities, each family with a separate apartment, but all under one roof. In order to have something that is their very own, each family possesses a little tea house built out in the garden, and here they do all their entertaining."

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

GREAT SHEPHERD AND HIS FLOCK

Jehovah the Chief Shepherd of the Sheep.

God's Ideals Widely Different From Those of the World—His Infinite Greatness and Our Littleness—His Marvelous Condescension—His Wonderful Plan—Far Beyond Human Conception—How God Tested His Only Begotten Son—Christ's Supreme Exaltation Later—The Church Called to Follow His Steps—Our Testing and Exaltation Similar—Jehovah's Plan for the World of Mankind.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 17.—Pastor Russell preached here to-day. He took for his text Psalm 23:1—"The Lord is My Shepherd; I shall not want." He said in part:

All the great families of the world have their coats - of - arms, that differentiate them one from another and that represent their own ideas. Some have figures of rapacious birds; others have various kinds of wild beasts, real or imaginary, so that whoever looks upon them would wish that he might never fall into their clutches. But no family has ever yet adopted the symbol that God has adopted for His family; namely, the lamb, the sheep. There is nothing ferocious about these animals. They are meek and inoffensive.

The Lord tells us that He is the Shepherd of His saints. This means that we are His sheep. It is a wonderful suggestion that the Father of Mercies, the Almighty One who is so high, and in comparison with whom we are so small, should be willing to take charge of us and care for us. And we are very desirous of abiding in His care, of abiding so fully that ultimately, by His grace, we may attain unto all the blessings which He has in reservation for His faithful people. We appreciate this great favor; and the more we consider it, the more we appreciate it.

As we have before our minds so great a God, man in comparison seems something like an ant. We pay little attention to the tiny ant; it is of no account to us. When we compare mankind with God, there is a still greater contrast. We are like the small dust of the balance, not worthy to be accounted of. (Isaiah 40:15.) Nevertheless God has favored us, and has made a great Plan for the redemption of every member of our race.

Especially do we who are now God's children appreciate His particular love and care manifested toward us, in that He has invited us to become partakers of the Divine nature, to be associated forever with our Lord Jesus Christ, to share His glory and honor, to be granted the same immortality. This seems more wonderful every time we think of it. The matter grows upon us continually—enlarging our hearts.

God's Plan Beyond Human Conception.

It seems strange indeed that the Heavenly Father should have adopted so marvelous a Plan. To His Only Begotten Son, who had always been faithful to Him, He desired to give still greater blessings, in connection with the blessing of others. God said, "I will test Him fully; and if He still proves faithful, He shall have the best I can give." And so the first offer to carry out the Divine Plan and to obtain the Divine nature through humiliation and suffering was made to this Son, God's only direct creation. (Revelation 3:14; Colossians 1:15.) The Logos gladly responded. By a transfer of nature He was made man; and by faithfulness and obedience even unto death He became the Head of this company that God purposed to bring from the lowest plane of His intelligent creatures to the very highest.

Now observe the conditions upon which this offer was made. Jehovah would grant the Son this great exaltation only after thoroughly proving Him. His trial would take place in the midst of the adverse conditions prevailing in the lost world that He would come to redeem by the sacrifice of Himself, and from which fallen race His footstep followers would be selected. To these the Father in His great Plan would say, "I will give to you the opportunity to become associated with Jesus in this great work."

This part of God's wonderful Plan would never have occurred to our minds. We would never have thought of taking any of humanity into the Plan in such a way—of stooping down to fallen creatures who had been under the curse of death and in a depraved condition for over four thousand years, and of making an offer to these sinners, not only of having their sins forgiven and of being reconciled to God through the death of His Son, but also of becoming followers of that Son and, by passing through similar trials and experiences, of becoming joint-heirs with Him in His glorious inheritance. Therefore

"We stand all astonished with wonder,
And gaze on this ocean of Love!"

Our Lord Jesus Most Highly Honored.

It is well that we notice particularly that the Father has planned that the Lord Jesus shall be first. (Colossians 1:18.) Jehovah, the Chief Shepherd, has provided that His Son shall be His Representative and our Shepherd, and that we may come in as the first flock of His sheep. There will be others, later on, who are not of this particular fold. (John 10:16.) But the sheep of His present fold are the ones in whom we are especially interested now. The sheep of the next fold will be those of the world who shall receive Restitution blessings in the Age about to dawn. The sheep of this Gospel fold are the ones particularly referred to in our text; for the Psalmist David spoke prophetically for Christ and His Church, His Body. The Church, with our Lord Jesus as Head, can truly say, "Jehovah is My Shepherd; I shall not want."

Until the Lord Jesus was highly exalted at His resurrection, there was none of this Divine nature except Jehovah Himself. All others were of a lower nature. The Logos, although above cherubim and seraphim, and next to the Father, was upon a very different plane of being from God. But it was to this Divine plane that God purposed to exalt some. He designed to have a certain company on that highest plane of existence.

God had first created Jesus, the Logos, and through Him all the worlds and all the ranks and orders of angels, and finally man. His next creation, instead of going further downward, was to go upward, to a still higher plane than any other—the Divine. In harmony with this purpose, the Body members of Christ are to be God's New Creation, as the Apostle Paul explains. (2 Corinthians 5:7; Ephesians 2:10.) And God gave His Son, the One through whom all other beings were created, the first opportunity to demonstrate His love, His devotion, His loyalty.

"But," you say, "had the Son not always demonstrated this?" Yes; He had always demonstrated His loyalty under favorable conditions, amongst the holy ones in harmony with Jehovah, where there were no requirements of sacrifice. But now God would put Him to a special test, making Him a special offer as a reward; and the two propositions must go together. If he would accept Jehovah's proposition, and be loyal even unto death amongst the unholy ones out of harmony with Jehovah and under conditions of suffering and humiliation, then He should have an exaltation far above angels, principalities, powers, dominions, and every name that is named.

The Apostle sums it all up. After telling how our Lord accepted these terms, how He left the glory which He had with the Father before the world was, how He was made flesh and dwelt amongst us, and being found in fashion as a man humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross, St. Paul declares that Jesus was found worthy in that He, for the joy set before Him, endured the Cross, despising the shame, and is now set down at the right hand of the Divine Majesty on High. That is, our Lord was given a position of the very highest honor.—Philippians 2:6-11; Hebrews 12:2; 1:3.

Price of Our Lord's Great Exaltation

We see the earthly experiences of Jesus and their significance about in the type of the Jewish Day of Atonement, every high priest, before he could enter the Most Holy of the Tabernacle on the Day of Atonement, must first offer a sacrifice of a bullock, must take its blood into the Holy and offer incense at the Golden Altar in the Holy—representing in type the perfection of Jesus' human nature being consumed as a sacrifice. Then, after he had offered the incense, after its perfume had preceded him into the Most Holy and had rested as a cloud above the Mercy-Seat, the high priest would pass under the second veil into the Most Holy—the veil representing death itself.

If the high priest did not fulfil to the letter every requirement of the Divine Law, he would die as he passed under this veil. That priest was a type of the Lord Jesus Christ; and the figure showed that Jesus would have perished if He had not fulfilled to the letter every requirement which the Father made. This being the case, it is no wonder that our Lord felt great anxiety as the time of his death drew near. The Apostle has written of the Master's distress of mind at this time: - "Who in the days of His flesh, when He had offered up prayers and supplications, with strong cryings and tears, unto Him that was able to save Him out of death, was heard in that He feared."—Hebrews 5:6-10.

What did Jesus fear? He feared that in passing under the veil of death He might never rise again. He knew that as the antitypical High Priest He was on trial, and that His trial would eventuate in life or death everlasting. Knowing this, He appreciated life with its blessings, and to a marked degree appreciated the life on the higher plane which He had enjoyed with the Father, and which He hoped again to enjoy. Why did He pray with strong cryings? Because He desired to know whether He had been wholly faithful, and whether He might expect the resurrection change.

And He was heard. God sent an angel to minister to Him and to assure Him that He had proved faithful in every respect. From that moment Jesus was calm and self-possessed. None of the disciples had such courage. To the weeping one following Him to the cross He said, "Weep not for Me, but weep for yourselves and for your children."—Luke 23:28.

A Feature of the Revelation.

A picture dating back to the time before our Lord Jesus entered the world, and showing God's Plan recorded in figurative language, was given to St. John on the Isle of Patmos. (Revelation 5:1-14.) In this picture He beheld Jehovah sitting upon a Throne and holding in His right hand a Scroll written within and without and sealed with seven seals. Then he heard a proclamation made, "Who is worthy to open the Book, and to loose the seals thereof?" But no one was found worthy to open the Scroll—no one in Heaven or earth. No one of mankind was worthy because all were sinners. No one on the spirit plane had ever yet proven himself worthy of the great honor of carrying out God's marvelous Plan of the Ages.

In symbolic language the Scroll represents all that God had in mind before the foundation of the world respecting the Church, respecting His great work for the world during the Millennial Age and respecting Messiah's great future. All these things were represented by the Scroll in God's right hand—the hand being symbolical of power. At this time the Son had not yet been tested and proven.

On one occasion Jesus had said to His disciples, "But of that day and hour [of Messiah's Second Coming and the establishment of God's Kingdom on earth] knoweth no man, no, not the angels in Heaven, neither the Son, but the Father only." (Matthew 24:36.) The Father had not yet permitted the Scroll to go out of His hands. St. John wept when he realized that God had some great purpose to execute, but had found none worthy to carry it out.

Then one of the elders said unto St. John, "Weep not; behold, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the Book, and to loose the seals thereof." The Lion of the tribe of Judah had proven Himself worthy. When had He done so? Not before He came into the world; for then He was not the Lion of Judah. He was born of the tribe of Judah when He was made flesh; but He had not yet become the Lion, the Strong One. Our Lord was the Lion of the tribe of Judah from the time when He made a Covenant with the Father at the River Jordan, although He did not finish His sacrifice until at Calvary He cried, "It is finished."

It required, in one sense, the entire three and a half years of Christ's ministry to demonstrate Himself to be this Strong One. In the picture in Revelation St. John looked, and beheld, "A lamb stood, as it had been slain" (a lamb newly slain, says the Greek)—the lamb representing the Lord Jesus sacrificed. By that sacrifice of Himself He had prevailed. As St. John looked, he heard myriads of angels saying, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing!" There Jesus became worthy—not without blood, not without sacrifice, not without being tested by the Father, not without coming off Conqueror. Thus He proved Himself worthy to be the Father's Representative in opening the Scroll and carrying out its provisions.

Our Glorious High Calling.

How glad we are that God has provided for the ultimate recovery of all mankind from the death-curse, to bring whosoever will back into harmony with Himself by restitution processes during the Millennial Reign of Christ! But we who are of the Bride class, how we rejoice when we think of our invitation to join in with our Saviour and be partakers with Him, both in the sufferings of this present life and in the glory to follow! This is our privilege and portion. We may have a share in carrying out the Father's great Plan.

We might well rejoice that, in God's mercy, we have heard the glad Message; that through the merit of Jesus' sacrifice we have been invited to become His footstep followers and to prove ourselves worthy, even as He proved Himself worthy, by laying down our lives in the service of God and His Truth. But we are not worthy without our Redeemer. We are made worthy in Him. This High Calling to be joint-heirs with Jesus comes in as a special privilege, over and above justification. And we must demonstrate our worthiness or we shall never get in.

Our test in the same as in our Lord's case: namely, faithfulness to God, loyalty to the Truth, the putting away of all selfishness, seeking to do only the will of our Heavenly Father. We cannot do God's will perfectly, as Jesus could. But we must do what is possible to us; and the blood of Jesus cleanses us from all unintentional blemishes, making up for our deficiencies. But we are required to have the same spirit, the same mind, as the Apostle admonishes us—the mind which is willing to humble self in order to do the will of God.—Philippians 2:5; Romans 8:9.

It is important that we realize our need of justification, and that we note the difference between justification and the High Calling. I am sure that not many Christians see the distinction clearly. The Bible teaches everywhere that through Christ we are to be "justified freely from all things." It is God that justifies, and not we that justify ourselves. We are justified by faith in Jesus' blood. "It is not of works, lest any man should boast." Justification merely brings us to the place where we can offer an acceptable sacrifice to God. Then we must present our bodies. (Romans 12:1.) We are to follow in Jesus' footsteps.

None have yet been justified except a special class—the Church. God has willed that the whole fallen human race shall go down to the tomb unjustified, in sin, and shall wait until the Millennial Age; and in that Millennial Day Jesus, who died for them, will be their Justifier. During those thousand years He will bring them up from the tomb, and will help them up the Highway of Holiness. (Isaiah 35.) At the close of that time He will present them to the Father blameless. He will not present anybody to the Father in any other way. So the whole world, at the end of the Millennium, will be presented to God; for Christ will have justified them, made them right. But all who will not meet the conditions will die the Second Death.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

What will you do for these?

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The first payment on the Anglo-French $500,000,000 bonds, made yesterday my managers of the syndicate underwriting the issue, and other factors, swelled the bank clearing of the New York Clearing House, it was announced today, to the unprecedented total of more than $1,000,000. This means that this great sum, represented by checks, passed through the Clearing House within the past 24 hours.

The previous record, made November 3, 1909, was $736,000,000.

In addition to the payments made on the Anglo-French bond issue, the total was augmented by other heavy payments usually made in the financial section on October 15.

JELLICOE, COMMANDER OF THE BRITISH NAVY

LONDON, Sept. 27, 1915.—Of all the great leaders of the war Sir John Jellicoe, commanding the British grand fleet, is least known to the world and his is the portrait which receives the most cheers when it is thrown on the screen in a London theatre. But the British public knows nothing of him, except that he is the fighting commander of the "invisible" power of the British navy.

When war was threatening it is related that a meeting of Admiralty Lords and others who would have the say was held to decide who in case of hostilities should command the British fleet. The opinion ran something like this:—

"Jellicoe! He has the brains."

"Jellicoe! He is young. He has the health to endure the strain. He has the nerve."

"Jellicoe! He has been tried in every branch of the service."

"Jellicoe! His fellow officers believe in him."

It was that sort of recommendation that helped. When the great war came he received supreme command and the rest was left to him.

"From the time he was a midshipman Sir John Jellicoe has been a marked man in the service," said one of his admirals.

"He is one of those men who seem to be born with tireless energy. No matter what difficulties arise he is always smiling. Both he and Admiral Beatty were in the first attempt to relieve the Peking legations at the time of the Boxer rebellion. Captain Jellicoe was then Admiral Seymour's chief of staff. When he was wounded and a little band of seamen were surrounded by Boxers and it looked as if every minute might be their last he was smiling as cheerily as if he had been on the quarterdock. Nothing never seems to ruffle his equanimity. His personal charm would win him his way anywhere, but when you have served with him then you realize what a master of his profession he is."

Sir John Never Quits Post

Only the commander in chief's flag which she flies distinguishes the flagship, which is in the centre of the fleet, from the rest of the gray fighters in their precise lines at anchor in harbor. Sir John takes his exercise and his holiday's pacing the quarterdeck. He never leaves the fleet even for a few hours. The commander in chief is the one man who must take no risk of being absent if the German fleet should come out.

Not tall, spare, his face tanned by the breezes, he walks up and down the deck, sometimes with one of his aids or with his chief of staff, again with one of his admirals. Every one in the fleet is familiar with the quick, light step of that slight figure with a telescope always under his arm. If a ship should come to anchor with a bow out of line he knows it. All his fighting ships are under his eye and every human being on the fleet feels his personal presence.

Descend a ladder under the shadow of two great 13.5-inch guns and the caller is a large cabin extending from side to side of the ship, which in a house would be called the dining room. Here when in port in time of peace the commander in chief would give his officials dinners. In time of war the cabin is partly screened off, as there is more room than Sir John and his staff need for meals. Aft of this is what would be called in a house would be called the dining ings are of the simplest. Everything inflammable could be removed promptly in case of action. The few names in the register on a table were suggestive of the fleet's isolation from intercourse with the rest of the world. One name was the King, and another the Prince of Wales and a few high officials.

Always cleared for Action.

The callers looked about in vain for signs of the immense amount of official detail which would seem necessary for the focal point of a vast campaign. Some staff officers and a few records were all. The flagship is kept cleared for action in this as in all other respects. The actual directing of the three thousand ships and auxiliaries of the British navy is carried on in a space occupied in a New York office by a lawyer and two or three clerks. An orderly went and came with messages from the wireless room, which aside from the installations, had space enough for the wireless operators to stand and no more.

Officers said that it was difficult to contemplate how such a naval campaign as the British in this war could have ever been conducted without the wireless. Sir John could talk with the Admiralty in London or Iceland. He knew what each man was doing. Let a German cruiser show her nose in the North Sea and he had the news in a minute or two after she was sighted.

"He makes it all seem simple and easy," said one of the admirals. 'That is his gift—it is the essential gift for one who has such a great responsibility."

Admiral Beatty, who sank the Blucher, is the youngest of Sir John's young admirals, forty-four years of age, boyish and quick. Admiral Sturdee, victor of the Falkland islands battle, smooth shaven, as smiling as Sir John, is quiet spoken and rather studious in appearance; he is an expert in naval strategy.

In the British navy promotion is by selection up to the grade of captain. A man with a single flaw in his record as lieutenant must wait on others before he can become lieutenant commander. Those with perfect records in each grade are canvassed by boards and those who have shown industry and initiative are chosen to go over the heads of less active men. The aim is to apply the system of civil life, where ability rises and mediocrity must be content with the lower rungs of the ladder.

Lives Devoted to Navy.

Admirals Jellicoe, Sturdee and Beatty entered the navy as boys of fourteen. None had any particular influence; they made their way by industry. Sir John has served in every branch. He is regarded as possibly the ablest ordnance expert in the navy, which means that he knows the guns which he will fire in action.

Notwithstanding his amiability, all agree that he has only one criterion—success. If an officer fails he is superseded. Most of these young admirals sleep on the bridge, even in harbour. For the last ten years the average British naval officer has worked harder than men of any profession in civil life. They have kept up the grinding drill, which continues since the war began.

"We can take no risks," one of them said. "Our responsibility to the nation requires that we neglect nothing that devotion to duty will accomplish. Most of these crews you see have been at their posts, whether gun pointing or passing ammunition, for five or six years. We want each man to be letter perfect in his part."

In all actions thus far the firing has begun at extreme range – eighteen thousand yards. At that distance a Dreadnought painted the colour of the sea is a vague speck. But one fortunate hit may be vital, and either side wants to get that fortunate hit first. The accuracy of fire both at the Falkland Islands and in the battle of the Dogger Bank was as good as at battle practice.

Seen among his admirals, Sir John Jellicoe seems the head of a family. In frequent consultation, they know one another in the fellowship of their confined existence. If he had anything to say to one of them or they to him the definiteness of their remarks and the promptness of his replies were impressive. Decision seemed automatic with him.

He showed the callers over the flagship himself, directing attention to things which he thought would interest them, as he led the way along the cramped passages behind the armour or pointed the way to enter one of the turrets where the gun crews were going on with their drill, which they went through like so many human machines. Most of them were in the early thirties, mature, experienced, and confident.

"All they ask is that the Germans will come out," said an officer. "They could not work any harder than they did before the war. But the war has given them renewed eagerness."

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural colour, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

SURPRISE FOR PAT.

At a circus recently a lion died. The manager, seeing his friend Pat walking along the street, mentioned it to him whereupon Pat offered to take the place of the lion and dress in the latter's skin. A trial performance was gone through and Pat answered admirably, his "roaring" being most life-like.

When the circus was opened Pat was seen in the lion's den, the keeper with a pitchfork, keeping him up to "concert" form. The climax was reached when the keeper drove Pat into the tiger's daze. Pat was now extremely frightened and rushed round and round the cage to escape the infuriated tiger. He was about to collapse when a hoarse whisper came from the mouth of the pursuing tiger:

"'Tis all right, Pat, me boy, don't be afraid. I only came here on the excursion and was too late for the train to get home to Waterford."—Exchange.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:

Will you kindly permit a statement to your Presbyterian readers of a few of the many things that would be lost to them in the proposed new Union church.

(1) The Lost Eldership.

The rule of the Basis of Union for the formation of the "so-called Session" is as follows: "The members of the Session, other than the minister, shall be chosen by those in full church membership, and shall hold office under regulations to be passed by the General Council." (Polity, Sec. B 14).

In this rule there is neither "elder" nor "ordination", and the omission is not accidental, but intentional, after the fullest consideration by the Union committee of the three churches.

It is true that in another part of the basis, (Section B 28.), there is an incidental descriptive expression, as follows: "A body of men, specially chosen and set apart or ordained for that work, who shall jointly constitute the Session."

Even if this latter incidental expression were correct, there is no mention of "elder." The men chosen might be set apart, or they might be ordained. There is nothing definite. All is left to the General Council of the proposed new church.

But the word "ordained" has no right to be in that incidental expression; for in the rule of the formation of the "Session" it is not found. This is an instance of the immature, self-contradictory character of the basis of Union.

It is therefore absolutely correct to say that in the basis of Union the ordained ruling elder has no place. Further, it is just as absolutely certain that if this strong Presbyterian feature could not get into the rules of the basis, before Union, it would never get into the new church after the Union.

Will Presbyterians consent to surrender the scriptural office of the ordained ruling elder, a main piller of the Presbyterian church through all her long and glorious history?

(2) The Lost Church of the People.

The proposed new church is to be incorporated, as a great legal organisation, giving absolute power of control to the church courts. With Presbyterians the people are the church. In the proposed union, the church courts, the organization, the "machine," would be the church, with corporate powers. Will Presbyterians thus surrender the church of the people?

Further, this incorporation, which, on the other hand, would take take away the rights of the people and vest them in the church courts, would, on the other hand, bring these same church courts, in matters both temporal and spiritual, into the sphere of the civil law, and a member of the church, suspended by the Session for ill conduct, could, if he chose, bring the Session before the courts, and perhaps involve them in heavy costs.

(3) Lost Rights in Choosing Ministers.

Presbyterians have now the right to extend a call at any time, and no church court has authority to intrude upon them a minister they do not want.

In the proposed Union there is only one time of the year when they can extend a call, viz., at the annual meeting of the Settlement committee, a body of men with absolute powers, mostly at a distance from the individual congregation.

If the call should not succeed, or if the Settlement committee declined to allow it, the congregation must wait for a year until the next annual meeting of the Settlement committee, before they can give another call, and they must take, for the year, such supply as may be sent to them.

Further, the Settlement committee has power, not only to decline to appoint the minister called, but to appoint any minister they may choose, to any congregation. The words are these: "The right of appointment shall rest with the Settlement committee."

True, the Settlement committee "shall comply as far as possible with the expressed wishes of ministers and charges," but that same committee is the sole judge of how far it should or will comply with these wishes. From that Settlement committee there is no appeal. Even to the Conference (Synod) that appoints it, it reports "for information only."

Will Presbyterians vote to surrender their rights, and submit once more to the "patronage" and "intrusion" and overlordship, which their fathers fought 'till victory was won? And especially in such a year as this, when our Empire, with her Allies, is contending against overlordship and for the world's freedom?

(4) Lost Safeguards of Scripture Truth.

Almost all organizations, secular or sacred, social, political or religious, that have any basis of agreement, are pledged to that basis. It represents what they stand for.

One of the few lonely exceptions is the proposed new Union church. The doctrine of the basis of union contains much of Scripture truth, but no minister is pledged to accept that basis as his confession of Scripture teaching, or pledged to adhere to it in his own teaching. It is not the creed of the church. It is not what the church stands for of Scripture truth.

There was, in an earlier stage of the Union negotiations such a pledge for ministers at ordination, just as there is now in our own church, but it was taken away, and in the proposed new church a minister might teach any error, and cut and carve the Word of God in any fashion, and do it in the name of the church, claiming it to be his view of the Scriptures, and the people would be helpless. The loss in this respect would be more apparent with the passing years, and, as history has repeatedly shown, would be fatal to the religious life of the church.

Such are a few of the losses which would come to Presbyterians.

Where Are the Gains?

The only three gains claimed or promised, are Unity, Economy and Power. There can be no gain in Unity, for Unity is of the Spirit, not of name or form, and Christians of different churches can live in Christian unity, just as well as those of the same church.

There is no economic gain, for in the foreign field none of the negotiating churches have mission in the same territory while in the home field, wise and Christian co-operation can prevent and has already prevented, overlapping and waste, and has almost wholly eliminated it in the west.

As to the power, the moment a church seeks to sway the affairs of men by the size of its organization, rather than by its moral and spiritual influence, all history shows that it means doom for the State and spiritual death to the church.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as corgeot this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

A graceful dress which any young girl should be glad to wear is shown in this illustration. It has a plain blouse, with full fronts and a plain back, slightly bloused above the belt. The closing is in the front, and there is a small, but shapely collar edging the opening of the neck. The sleeves follow the shape of the arm to the wrist and may have a plain finish or a cuff.

The skirt has four gores. To the eye it appears as if each of these was straight, but they are shaped so as to be considerably narrower at the top than at the hem. They are gathered and attached to the waist, while the lower edge measures 2⅝ yards in the medium size.

Collar, cuffs and belt are of contrasting material, and it is customary to overlay the dress collar with another of organdie or lace. Buttons do much to relieve the plainness of the frock, and a sharp contrast is desirable in most cases.

Plain colors in serge and gabardine, stripes, checks and figures are all found in the new fall materials.

The dress pattern, No. 7,315, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 4 yards of 44 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods to trim.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

500,000 MEN NEEDED IN NEXT FOUR MONTHS

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Two despatches to-day confirm the taking of Strumnitza, Bulgaria, by the Anglo-Serbo-French force. Reuter's Agency's news is official, and an Athens cable confirm this.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—(French Official Communique).—French artillery and infantry repulsed three German attacks in Bois En Hache, announced the statement issued by the War Office to-day.

"There was continued trench engine fighting and successful bombardments of the German works at Lihons and north of Verdun.

"The Germans were repulsed in an attempt to occupy the pits made by exploded mines between the lines.

"Violent trench fighting occurred at Nomeny.

"The French artillery dispersed German workmen at Eply, Gremecy and Biodcourt and bombarded Blamount Station."

ROME, Oct. 18.—The Allies landed troops at Enos to-day, according to the Messagero, and seized the neighbouring village of Dedeagatch.

Enos is on the Gulf of Seros, in Turkish territory, opposite the Gallipoli Peninsula, and the railway referred to would be needed for operations in Turkey or Bulgaria.

Its southern terminus, Dedeagatch, has been Bulgarian since the first Balkan war.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Seventy-one persons are reported to-day to have perished when an Austrian submarine sank the French steamship Admiral Hamelin in the Mediterranean without warning.

Later a message from Marseilles, via Paris, said thirty-three of the Hamelin's crew had been landed at the former place, but mentioned no loss of life, so it was uncertain whether the thirty-three included all on board.

NEUCHATEL, Switzerland, Oct. 18.—Crossing the frontier after a flight over France, a German aviator dropped three bombs to-day at La Chaux de Fonds and two at Renan, both Swiss towns, wounding three persons and causing serious property damage.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent says this morning:

"This week promises to be one of exceptional importance in the political world. The order paper of the House of Commons is studded with questions which reveal uneasiness on the part of members of Parliament in regard to the various aspects of the war, and is much more critical in its attitude towards the Government than heretofore.

"It is reported that Winston Churchill, who has long been itching to be in the fighting line, intends to join his regiment. In that case he would, of course, resign his office as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

"Another Cabinet Council will be held to-day. Subjects of momentous importance will come under review at this meeting of Ministers. It had been generally assumed that the question of compulsory military service would be left in abeyance until Lord Derby had completed his task of chief recruiter. Some intend, it appears, to attempt to force a decision now in favour, not of immediate, but of ultimate compulsion. Doubtless the conscriptionists feel that compulsion is necessary to end the war, but the volunteerists, who are still in the majority in the Cabinet, are equally convinced that the abandonment of our present system before it has been tried to the utmost could not strengthen but weaken our arms.

"In the next four months Lord Kitchener will want in round numbers 500,000 men."

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—Work for the war disabled was under the consideration of the Provincial and Federal leaders this morning.

To-day Government leaders sought to devise a plan which would enable those still capable of work receiving training and employment which they could perform. The blind provide the greatest problem. Premier Borden presided, and Hon. W. H. Hearts and Hon. Howard Ferguson represented Ontario.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—Major General Lessard, Inspector General for the Eastern Division, who has been a patient at the Royal Victoria Hospital for the past few days, was able to leave the institution this morning and depart for Toronto.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Bull traders were on the Stock Exchange floor again to-day, sending prices up in the face of predictions that heavy profit-taking sales and a slump in prices were due.

Bethlem Steel Common made a record price of 495, and Preferred stock sold up to 8 at 170.

ONLY CHILD DIED AFTER DRINKING CONDENSED LYE

Private Norman Robinson of the Local Battalion Bereaved—Interior Burns Proved Fatal

MOTHER WAS UPSTAIRS

Charles Norman, the eighteen months old son of Private Norman Robinson of the Peterborough Battalion, died on Sunday at 8.30 p.m. at the family residence, corner of Charlotte and Lewis streets, from the effects of having drank Gillett's lye.

On Saturday while Mrs. Robinson was attending her husband, who was confined to bed with strained muscles, the child opened a cupboard in the living room and innocently picked up the can of lye, which occupied a place on a shelf. When the mother returned downstairs, the child was unconscious on the floor before the cupboard, the can beside the little body. The only explanation seems to be the fact that the baby was more or less accustomed to the appearance of condensed milk tins and was thus attracted by the lye container to which it is somewhat similar.

Charles Norman was the only child of Private and Mrs. Robinson and the sympathy of their friends and the general public will be extended toward them in their bereavement.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday at 3 p.m. from the family residence, corner of Lewis and Charlotte street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

PETERBORO' BOY JOLTED OFF CAR LOSES HIS LEG

Geo. Rose, Hunter St., Met With a Serious Accident at Leaside Junction—Wheels Passed Over His Leg

WILL RECOVER

TORONTO, Oct. 18—Believing that if he could reach Toronto he would be able to embark on a successful theatrical career, George Rose, 182 1-2 Hunter Street, Peterborough, attempted to steal a ride from his home to the city. He was jolted off the car trucks at Leaside Junction and the wheels passing over his left leg mangled the limb so badly that it was necessary to amputate it, at the Western Hospital, last night.

Rose was discovered lying beside the track shortly after the accident occurred. The railway officials secured him immediate medical attention, and at once sent for the police ambulance. From the first the injured man showed exceptional pluck, and told the doctors and ambulance drivers of his theatrical aspirations. He said that he was a singer and that he had always believed that if he could make his way to Toronto, he would succeed in getting on the stage, as he thought he had an exceptionally good sketch. Having no money, however, he was unable to pay his fare and attempted to ride the bumpers. He is about 18 years of age and it is expected that he will recover.

The unfortunate young man was until about six weeks ago, employed in the Examiner newsroom. He also was at one time a member of the George Street Choir. He was the son of Mrs. Cochran, Hunter Street, who is at present in Quebec City, where her husband is employed in the Ross Rifle Works.

MOUNTED RIFLES ARE SAFE AT PLYMOUTH CABLEGRAM STATES

Message Received This Afternoon by the Examiner From Sergt. Thos. Fairbrass of the 8th--Good News for Many Peterborough Families—Regiment Sailed on the Missanabie—To-day's Military News.

The safe arrival in England of the steamer Missanabie, carrying the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, who left Barriefield Camp on Friday, Oct. 8th, is announced in the following cablegram received by the Examiner from Sergt. Thos. Fairbrass:

Plymouth, Oct. 18.

Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.

"Peterborough boys arrived safely."
SERGT. FAIRBRASS.

This will be welcome news to many Peterborough people. Peterborough men form the greater part of B Squadron of the 8th, and B Squadron, which is commanded by Major S. T. Medd of this city, is known as the Peterborough squadron of the regiment. Relatives and the citizens generally will rejoice at their safe arrival in the old country.

Mrs. S. T. Medd also received the following cablegram from her husband, Major Medd, this afternoon:

"Arrived safely. All well."

Word has been received that Lieuts. F. W. Morris and Harold Smith, of Peterborough, who left Canada with the 5th Artillery Brigade, have been transferred to the 3rd Canadian Artillery Brigade, and are now at the front in France.

Peterborough young men who wish to enlist in the 33rd Battery, Kingston, to which unit this city has already sent 80 recruits, will have an opportunity during the next few days. Lieut. Beresford Hamilton, one of the Peterborough officers in the 33rd, arrived home on Saturday, and will be here until Wednesday on a recruiting mission. He is anxious to take back with him twenty-five recruits from Peterborough for the battery, and expects to have little difficulty in securing the quota. The men must be of the same high standard as those already sent from here to the battery, and Lieut. Hamilton states that the Peterborough men in the 33rd ranked as among the best at Barriefield Camp in appearance, intelligence and conduct. Major Sears, the officer commanding, desires twenty-five more of the same type to replace those who have gone overseas in the draft, and Lieut. Hamilton proposes to pick his men carefully, so that the high standard set by the battery will be maintained. He has already secured a number of recruits for the [illegible]

The Peterborough Battalion, headed by their brass band, and the pipe band of the 57th Regiment, paraded to St. James' Methodist Church for divine service yesterday morning. The parade was in charge of Captain R. P. Watt. Rev. Mr. Greatrix delivered a very eloquent address to the active service men

Lieut. J. D. Lundy of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, who is taking a course at Stanley Barracks, Toronto, was home for Sunday.

Lieuts. J. A. McNab and Percy Stock of the 57th Regiment, left yesterday for Barriefield Camp, to take a qualifying course in the Provisional School of Infantry.

Lieut. (Rev.) Rollins has completed a subaltern's course at Barriefield Camp.

Albert Miller, petty officer on His Majesty's Canadian ship "Niobe," is home on a few day's leave.

The Peterborough Battalion Band wish to acknowledge the gift from Mr. Ed. Cronk, formerly of the 57th Band, of a splendid collection of band music, marches, waltzes, popular songs, standard numbers, etc., which will prove a most valuable addition to the library of the new band. Mr. Cronk's kindness is greatly appreciated by Bandmaster Hughes and his men.

What Rangers Have Done.

Sometimes is heard on the street from the same unthinking individuals who want to know why the British navy doesn't do something, the remark: "What is the 57th Regiment doing?"—a remark that carries with it the suggestion that the 57th has been found wanting when the acid test of real warfare was made. For the benefit of these individuals some facts may be given to show that the 57th Regiment has been found not wanting. In the first place it may be mentioned that nearly every non-commissioned officer who was in the Regiment when war broke out or who has been promoted since, has joined the colours, or has been turned down as medically unfit. Eighteen of the officers of the Regiment are on active service and others are waiting appointments. The vast majority of able bodied members of the rank and file of the Rangers are in khaki. The first calls depleted the regiment of many of its men, and when last fall and this spring it was recruited back to somewhere near normal strength, other calls soon tore the companies to pieces again. The Rangers have contributed hundreds of actual members of the Regiment to the overseas forces. And not in the infantry alone, as there are fifty 57th men in the Mounted Rifles and a number in the Artillery. One Company alone C Company has sent nearly 100 men to the front. Its Colour Sergeant, when war broke out, Sergt Howarth, met a hero's death at St. Julien His successor, Col. Sergt. Williams is now Quartermaster Sergeant of the Peterborough Battalion Its Commanding Officer, Capt. Carruthers, is Quarter-Master of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., and his successor, Capt. Maurice Park, is with the 59th Battalion at Barriefield.

Over twenty members of the Brass Band, and sixteen members of the Bugle Band are on active service. Every department of the Regiment has contributed in splendid style and the service rolls of the different Canadian Overseas Battalions are eloquent testimony to the fact that the Peterborough Rangers are no mere "Church Parade" regiment

LONDON, Ont., Oct 18.—Owing to the rush of recruits, orders have been issued to take no more men for the Pioneer Battalion. Men on the waiting lists will likely be transferred to two other infantry battalions to be raised shortly.

Private Russell Elliott, son of Mr Robert Elliott, Woodbine Avenue, is home from Niagara Camp until Tuesday. He is a member of the 58th Battalion, having enlisted in Manit-

PTE. CHARLIE STENSON HAS DONE HIS "BIT"

Gas at Ypres Following Severe Cold Developed at Salisbury, Affected His Lungs—Speaks Highly of Treatment Received as a Soldier Back From the Front.

YPRES LASTING IMPRESSION

Private Charlie Stenson, one of the few survivors of the Peterborough company of the 2nd Battalion after the engagement at Ypres, arrived in the city this morning, after what he termed the experience of a lifetime. He recalls as if it were only this morning the breaking of that memorable day, the 23rd of April. The night before the 2nd Battalion had been hurried up the Ypres road, past the straggling Turcos through a hedge to a position in the open. Some one passed the word that they were going to take up a new position, but after crawling through the dark they received the order to fix bayonets. Shortly after came the word to charge and of the confused rush of events, Private Stenson remembers Major Bennett who, with a revolver in one hand and his cane in the other, shouted, "Come on boys, give it to them."

The story of that morning charge is familiar to most Peterborough people by this time, but as Private Stenson related it this afternoon in the sitting room of Mr. Jas. Head's boarding house on Aylmer street, its realities appeared in a clearer light. Of the general action Private Stenson admits that he had a rather confused idea, but he remembers facing the enemy's fire, expecting every moment a missile out of that hail that would have laid him out with the majority of his companions. He marvels at his escape and is deeply grateful for it.

Private Stenson carried to France a rather heavy cold, as a memento of Salisbury, and somewhere in the the Ypres action he was gassed, not overwhelmingly, but sufficient of the brown fluid worked into his lungs to cause him considerable trouble at the time. He could not rid himself of its effects and at Festubert, about the 22nd of May he was spitting blood. After that engagement he was sent back to Rouen, then to Havre, across to England to Worrington in Lancashire. He was finally discharged and sailed from England on October 1st

He was at Monks Horton with Tom Jolly and other Canadians, and throughout all his experiences as a convalescent received treatment that was the essence of kindness and sympathy

Warm Welcome Home.

He crossed on the Metagama with 250 invalided soldiers. At Quebec they were met by representatives of the Khaki Club, who did everything in their power to show the appreciation of the country for the work the soldiers had done. At Montreal there a repetition of this warmth of reception. The Khaki Club in both cities took the men on automobile and boat trips, had convalescent homes for them where everything was free. In fact the men felt that the kindness they had received in the old country was, if possible, exceeded at these two Canadian ports.

Yesterday, Private Stenson and a soldier from Kamloops, B.C., were the guests of a Mr. Stead in Montreal, who has given up his work and his golf to attend to the soldiers. At the Stead summer home on Lake St. Louis, Private Stenson and his comrade had a splendid time and in fact he was inclined to believe that he would be spoiled permanently by these expressions of appreciative hospitality

Wanted No Reception.

Coming up to Peterborough he was asked if he would object to a public reception here, but he gratefully declined and was more than satisfied to return unheralded to the same station he had left over a year ago with the other boys of the first contingent.

Evidences of Fatalism.

Private Stenson states that the Tommies develop a fatalistic attitude as they grow accustomed to the life. Corp Bert Carpenter told him one day that the German bullet wasn't made that could kill him. On May twenty-third Pte Stenson was out on sentry duty near Festubert. A heavy thunderstorm had passed over the district and when he was relieved he tried to find a dug-out for shelter and rest. The first one he came to was near a road and was occupied by Corp. Carpenter, Pte Charlie Mongour and two others. Pte Stenson was about to crowd into it

CHILDREN'S AID RESULTS.

Habits are easy to acquire; and it is a pleasure to note that the people of Peterborough have pretty strongly got the habit of giving. In 1913, Children's Aid Tag Day contributions amounted to about $1,200. In 1914, after one year of war, the public giving dropped to $994.93; and the most sanguine did not anticipate an almost normal collection this year. They are, and the public will be, pleasantly surprised in learning that the amount realized on Saturday almost reached the normal. The total was $1,158.63 — nearly $164 greater than the previous year, notwithstanding the fact that the people would, one would think, have been almost pumped dry by the constant drain of beneficent giving in the interval. This shews that the heart of the people is sound; that its heat is true; that we are beginning to appreciate the duty of self-denial in the interest of the causes, that together with the war, claim our practical interest. We have done well — and everything considered — nobly this year by the Children's Aid Society; and through this medium the executive of the society wish to very cordially thank the people of Peterborough for their generosity and the fair instruments of its expression for their large and effective share in the good work.

CANUCKS UP TO SAMPLE.

Canadians alongside of seasoned British line troops have gamely and gallantly stood the test. At the battle of St. Julien Canadians "saved the situation." The latest despatches show us that other Canucks measure up to sample; that they are at their best when there is a situation to be saved. A Bluenose battalion, the 25th Nova Scotia Regiment, early in the past week, were shot up somewhere on the western front, by the explosion of four German mines, with several killed and wounded. Instead of being demoralized the survivors rallied and at the point of the bayonet recaptured the ground temporarily lost by the explosion of the mines. Not so bad for raw troops practically under fire for the first time. Their coolness, steadiness and dash under such a strain recalls the incident of Badajos and the veterans of Wellington in the Peninsular war; when they were for the moment shaken by exploding mines, but rallied and swept all before them. Canadians may not be veterans, but are heroes in the spirit that veterans cannot better. We are proud of our Canadian soldiers who do their bit bravely, under circumstances in which veterans would not shame themselves to falter; but we should be prouder of them if we had more to be proud of on the fighting line. There are hundreds of our young men who should "buck up" and get into the ranks.

NEXT.

The new calls to the duty of giving come with the regularity of the barber's call to his patrons—"Next." We must do our best to respond with corresponding alacrity. We have just met with almost normal liberality the appeal of the Children's Aid Society, and now we must focus our attention upon the Trafalgar Day Red Cross appeal. We do not need to be schooled much into practical appreciation of the merits of this cause. We know the noble character of the Red Cross work, the relief of wounded and sick soldiers, who have suffered their disability in fighting for us. This is a plain enough hint that we should do our share of the fighting in the only way open to us — by helping with our means; and no matter how much we may do in this direction, no matter to what point our action induces sacrifice, our sacrifice is nothing to the sacrifices our soldiers are making. The case of our sick and wounded soldiers calls for a sufficient supply of hospital dressings and stores of all kinds. If this is forthcoming hundreds of men will be saved not only great suffering, but will be sooner returned to the ranks in condition to continue the fight; on that, if we cannot enlist we can, by our contributions help place and keep men in the firing line; and many too seriously wounded to get back into action, and who might never see home without the help we can give, will be returned to us. The Red Cross work is one that will bear thinking over; and the more we think, the more clearly we shall see the need, and the more promptly and generously we shall strive to meet it. The Red Cross is the adopted symbol of the supreme spirit of sacrifice, and our Christianity will find its test in our manner and degree of recognition of its significance.

IN SELF-DEFENCE.

Whatever be the merits of the philosophy of "fighting the devil with fire," it seems to come into play in dealing with the devil of German militarism. We have reports that the British have replied in kind by giving the Germans a taste of the poisonous gas they first employed against Canadian, British and French troops. We Canadians can subscribe to the eye for an eye doctrine, for we owe the loss of many lives of gallant Canadian lads to the poisonous gas of the Huns. Its use is not the manliest way of making war; but when the enemy uses it, we may feel partially justified in fighting the devil with fire. If the Germans won't fight fairly, and insist upon gaining advantage by hitting below the belt, Britons and French must not be too particular as to the waist line. The Germans have been particularly impudent in the unworthy and barbarous ways of waging war. They felt free to use the poisonous gases, their Zeppelin raids, and their submarine policy, partly because they relied, and for a long time securely, upon British honour and British humanity, forbidding reprisals. But there is a limit, beyond which forbearance becomes weakness and weakness, criminal. The law of self-defence justifies extremity of action that in the abstract cannot be justified. Hence, if we use gas or liquid fire in self-defence the blame rests upon those who drive us to their use. The same with submarine destruction—"I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word,"—the Germans have taught use the lesson of submarine destruction, and our work in this direction in the North Sea, has given the Germans a taste of their own medicine, which redounds to our advantage and their own undoing in a very substantial way. The British and French have been patient; have exhausted the lexicon of protest, to no avail, and if the Huns will persist in disregarding and outraging the rules of civilized warfare, they must not complain if they are hoist with their own petard.

MR. ROWELL ON CANADA'S PART

Mr. Rowell's addresses on the war are characterized, not only by the eloquence that arouses enthusiasm, but by cogent argument and accurate information. He is not content with generalities. In order to compare Australia's contribution of men with Canada's he took pains to cable to the Australian Minister of Defence, and received the information that Australia had raised 146,714 men, of whom 83,357 are at the front. Canada has raised 160,716, of whom 84,680 are across the Atlantic. But Canada has a population more than 2 1-2 millions larger than Australia, so that in proportion to population Australia is doing far better than we are.

Mr. Hilaire Belloc has estimated that 15 per cent. of the population of a country are men of fighting age. France has called 11 per cent. of her people to the colours. Great Britain's enlistment is more than 8 1-2 per cent. of its population. Canada's is not much more than two per cent. Mr. Rowell contends that Canada ought to double its forces. This would bring it up to only half the percentage of Great Britain. Mr. Rowell's addresses are the best that are being delivered in Canada. They not only create enthusiasm, but furnish solid food for serious thought. — Toronto Star.

A Red Cross Catechism

Question I.—What is the Red Cross Society?

Answer—It is an international society which helps the medical departments of each army and navy to look after the sick and wounded and prisoners of war.

Question II.—How does the Red Cross Society help the sick and wounded men?

Answer—By providing the Army Medical Department with additional hospital stores of all kinds, from ambulances to drugs and bandages; by sending out extra nurses, orderlies, and volunteer assistants; by equipping, wholly or in part, hospitals, hospital ships, and trains.

Question III.—Why does not the Government do all this work?

Answer—Because, in common with all other civilized nations, the Empire recognizes the value of voluntary effort for the care of the wounded as permitted by the International Convention of Geneva, 1864.

Red Cross work thus relieves the taxes, and allows people to give instead of only paying; and provides a properly organized channel for personal service to the suffering men.

Question IV.—Why should I give my money to the Red Cross Society?

Answer—Because, if I stay at home, I can help the men who fight, through this society, when they need help most.

Question V.—What will happen if everybody in Canada subscribes generously to the Red Cross?

Answer — Unnecessary suffering will be saved by a sufficient supply of all hospital stores and drugs; men will be returned to the ranks instead of being invalided and others who might never have seen home again will be returned to the arms of their families.

GERMANY IS PLAYING HER LAST TRUMP CARD IN THIS GREAT WAR

The new interpretation placed by London military students upon the Balkan situation, as given in a special cable, finds an encouraging echo in beleaguered Serbia itself. Authorities in Nish are pointing to the manner in which Germany is attempting to play her old game of aiming at a sudden victory, regardless of the sacrifice. In the forces she will have to use in this and in the natural advantages of the positions occupied by the Serbian defending forces, reinforced with allied troops, all of which mean tremendous slaughter in the ranks of the enemy, they see material advantages for the allies.

Already the German generals have thrown forward their battalions to certain death, entirely careless of loss, just as was the case in the drive on Paris over a year ago. And these battalions have been mown down and repulsed by the Serbians, who are strongly entrenched in the hills over Belgrade. This repulse has been inflicted by the Serbians themselves. Germany, still regardless of her losses, will send more battalions through Belgrade, but the Serbians will not be alone. They will be fighting side by side with the allied troops that are now entering through Salonika.

And if the United Serb-Anglo-French armies can resist the invaders, as it is felt they can through the natural advantages they will have as defenders, what must the result be for Germany? Already she has drawn heavily from the eastern front, so heavily that the Russian armies have been able to inflict severe defeats upon the weakened enemy lines. These levies have proved insufficient and so, if Germany persists, she must make further drafts upon both the eastern and the western fronts. Thus she is weakening her positions in France and Russia for the sake of the drive against Serbia, making it easier for the allies to move forward there as the Russians are already doing, and this weakness will be permanent so long as Serbia holds out. The German attack on Serbia, therefore, if Britain, France and Russia can send sufficient help to their little ally, may, as some are already predicting, prove the undoing of Germany and bring closer the end of the war.

It would be absurd, of course, to be too confident of the resistance in Serbia, but circumstances tend towards confidence. Undoubtedly the Serbian mountain territory can be defended by much smaller forces than Germany will send to the attack, and the slaughter in the ranks of the attacking armies must be out of all proportion to that among the defenders. This has already been demonstrated by the heavy losses admitted by Berlin in the fighting before Dedjaya.

Germany will naturally allow the Bulgarians to stand as much of the loss as she can, but on the other hand there is good reason to believe that Greece will before long come to realize, as Sir Edward Grey stated, that upon the fate of Serbia depends her own fate, and she may be persuaded, against the wish of the Kaiser's sister, to defend herself before defence is hopeless.

It would be a severe blow to British pride to have the campaign in the Gallipoli abandoned after such great sacrifices, but if more could be gained by employing the allied forces against Germany in Serbia it would indeed be a blunder to continue the more difficult task. And in the work of reducing the strength of Germany, allied forces on the defensive in Serbia could surely accomplish more than in fighting against the strongly entrenched Turks in the Gallipoli, where the attackers have to face the most difficult of natural obstacles.

There seems to be food for thought in the assertion of M. Vintrovitch, Serbian under-secretary for foreign affairs, that "by strengthening the Serbian front, defending the key to the east, the allies can frustrate all German schemes, beat Germany's last trump card and hasten the ultimate victory." Certainly, from the efforts she is making at the expense of other fronts, Germany depends upon the Serbian campaign to save her. If that campaign proves a failure, what has she left?—Ottawa Free Press.

toba and later securing a transfer. He says he has met many Peterborough boys at Niagara and in the western camps.

Although some of the soldiers home from Barriefield camp bring the rumour that the Peterborough battalion is to be known as the 103rd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, the local authorities have received no official intimation in regard to the battalion. According to the following despatch from Ottawa little change was made by the Militia Department in the plans already outlined for the disposition of troops for the winter:

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—A successful conference between Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, members of the headquarters staff, and the commanders of the different divisions in the Dominion was held yesterday in the Militia Department. Many important decisions were reached concerning the plans for organization, recruiting and billeting. The distribution of the organised troops for the winter was settled, and very few minor alterations were made in the distribution already made.

Concerning recruiting, it was determined that any centre, large or small, raising twenty-five men or upwards, of good character, properly attested and medically fit, would be entitled to have these men billeted therein. They would be clothed, housed and rationed in that centre. Twenty-five is the minimum number, but the maximum number is not set.

An important decision was reached in that these men will be organized for training into territorial area corresponding to the present regimental area. Shooting galleries and other auxiliaries for indoor training will be utilized. Books will be issued for instruction, and schools of instruction for non-commissioned officers and officers will be established in every leading centre.

With regard to billeting, in the small centres the regularly organized troops will be rationed by themselves, but those newly organized will be billeted.

The command of these territorial recruiting areas will be allotted to some capable officer, who will be held responsible for payment, etc., and general discipline.

In future, payment of the men will be done by cheque in each case and the persons upon whom soldiers are billeted will receive payment by cheque.

Among the officers commanding divisions present at the conference were Generals Wilson (Montreal), Rutherford (Halifax), Lozie (Toronto); Colonels, Henniman (Kingston), Ogilvie (Victoria), Cruikshank (Calgary), Ruttan (Winnipeg), and Fages (Quebec.)

The Peterborough friends of "Wallace" Cottrell, formerly of the Bank of Montreal, will be glad to know that Mr. Joseph Wearing has received a letter from him written "somewhere in France." Mr. Cottrell, who is a naval reservist, obtained a discharge from the second contingent while in Kingston, to join the Royal Navy in England. After arriving in England he learned that he would have to wait some time for a berth in one of the battle ships, so being anxious to get into action as soon as possible he joined a famous London regiment known as the Artists' Rifles, and is attached to the 28th Battalion.

In his letter he says: "I have run across a lot of Canadians. One chap in a hospital where I was for a couple of weeks, knew Miss Cavanagh's brother. I also met a Billy Patterson, a very nice chap, who used to work in the C.G.E. He is now in the Divisional Ammunition Park out here. By the way, haven't the dear old chaps from Peterborough caught it in the neck. Nearly all the old pool room gang that I played with every day have died on the field of battle. It seems hardly possible that so many have gone. However, the list has been heavy with us, too."

"If I ever get home again and anyone says, "What's yours?" I shall say, "Water." I haven't had a decent drink of water since I left the old sod. We drink tea mostly, but sometimes we are lucky to have a package of cocoa sent to us. But a good drink of water for mine!"

"When this is finished I shall never want to go out camping, not even to Stony Lake. We have had too much of the real thing since we came out here. What I would like is to go to bed for a year."

"It is cold today and the weather here is rotten. I am now so cold I can hardly write and would prefer zero weather in Canada. I am not nearly so well as I was there and I hear that this climate has broken up a lot of Canadians."

"Kindly remember me to all Peterborough friends — Mrs. Rosel, Mr. Webb, Dr. Scott and family, Fred Moule, Brown and all others you know. Would you do me a little favour by sending me a Peterborough paper once in a while. You have no idea what it would mean to me. Don't send a lot at a time. I can't carry them with me; just one once in a while."

While Pte. Jo Lemay of the local battalion, was at his Lakefield home on week-end leave. A number of Lakefield citizens took advantage of the occasion to subscribe to the Peterborough Battalion band fund, and the result was the fund has been augmented to the extent of $69.25. Lakefield has a number of representatives in the band and has a splendid body of men in the Peterborough battalion. The generosity of the citizens is appreciated by everyone in connection with the local battalion.

All the Peterborough members of the 57th Battalion Band are home from Barriefield camp on three days' leave.

The Orillia Packet says: A Peterborough paper records with pride that "there are five pairs of brothers in the Peterborough detachment and in three cases father and son are wearing the khaki." Orillia can put this record quite in the shade. There are four Jupp brothers, three Lumsdens, three McCuaigs, two brothers out of each two Cooke families, two Plunketts, two Days, two Millers, two Annises, two Wisemans, two Cuppages, two Clarks, two Coles, two Walkers, two Homewoods, two Clovers (both killed in action,) two Turnbulls (one killed in action,) two Hills, two Hermistons, two Wainmans, two Moffits.

The reference is to an article in The Examiner in which only the number of relatives in the local overseas company was mentioned. By the way there are now eleven pairs of brothers in the Peterborough Battalion. But if our Orillia friend wants a mark to shoot at we'll try and give him a few of the family groups from Peterborough since the war began. The following is given merely from memory and is not intended as in any way a complete list — merely enough to show the Packet that Peterborough's record is not yet "quite in the shade." In the first place there were four Tobins, four Hagermans, three Blacks, three Hutches, three Dyers, three McKinlays, three Blanchards, three Woods three McIntoshes, three Whites, three Simmons, three Lindseys, three Stanleys, three Roses three Martins, two Ackermans, two Carpenters, two Grahams, two Clarkes, two Fairbrass, two Butchers, two Bridgemans, two Ecclestones, two Watsons, two Mowrys, two Hawthornes, two Straithns, two Rogers, two Copperthwaites, two Grays, two Connollys, two Montgomerys, two Martins, two Browns, two Dunkleys, two Oxleys, two Perdues, two Mongours, two Williams, two McCabes, two Laings, another two Laings, two Drummonds, two Loaders, two Smiths, etc.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

How Harry Hooper Hammered Out Bounding Home Run Hit When It Seemed All Over

(By Tad.)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 14.—"Nothing ever happens in baseball any more," bawled a fat guy sitting behind me at the game yesterday.

It was the old ninth inning again and Harry Hooper, of the Sox, was strolling toward the platter, swinging two big bats, just as Foster struck out. The score stood four to four and all the boys lit new pills, settled back and wondered how long the thing would last, anyway.

Rixey, the skinny Quaker twirler, who looks as though he was brought up in an elevator shaft, humped his back and started the works. He whanged one across with all his might, and Mr. Hooper, who was there with a big fat bat, and whose business it was to slam said pill, merely raised his eyes and took a slant toward the flivver factory back of centrefield.

"Strike," yelled Bill Klem, the arbiter, swinging his good right fist in the air in a circle.

Well, sir, if looks could kill, Mr. Klem would be deader than Bill Bryan's presidential hopes, for Mr. Hooper slipped him a look that went clean through.

Mr. Klem, like the villains in the old melodrama, completely ignored the slant of the gentleman from Boston and resumed his position back of the catcher.

The Quaker giraffe, Rixey, bent his neck a few times trying to get the catcher's signal for the next pill, looked at first, wound up and let fly another shoot straight across the pan. Strike! bawled Mr. Klem again and up went a roar from the Phillie fans that could have been heard in Kokomo.

Well, you know between us, if that crowd hadn't been there and if there had been no fine or sentence to the cooler for busting a guy on the beak, I know that Bill would have stopped one from Hooper. What a look that bean-eater handed poor Bill. He stepped back at the plate, eying the umpire while digging for dirt for his hands; his thought—can't even be guessed.

There was a yelp from the Boston dugout and Klem gave that the once over, trying to "make" the culprit who yelped.

Everyone in the stands was certain that Hooper was gone and they were even talking about the trains to Boston. It looked that if Boston blew this inning, Philly would surely cop.

"It's a shoo-in for Philly," yelled the fat guy in back of me. "They gotta win this. Them magnates need the dough and another game to-morrow will just set them in. They're on the nut now for a lotta dough and Philly's gotta cop."

Rixey was eyeing the batter again. Hooper stood at the plate swinging his bat viciously. He didn't intend to allow that guy Klem to call another strike. Oh you could see that Hooper was out to kill it or to strike out with the hardest swing ever seen on this or any diamond.

The Quaker giraffe wound up. He let the ball fly toward Hooper, and just as Bill Klem started to yell "st-r-r-r—" Mr. Hooper caught it on the seam and it sailed. It sailed between Paskert and Becker. Both started on the run at the crack of the bat. It looked as though they might get it. Hooper turned first base just as the ball hit the ground near the stands. It took a beautiful bounce right over the short fence of the new bleacher seats. That was the $1,000 belt. It means that the Red Sox grabbed the fat end of the dough.

"Well, I didn't believe the thing was on the square," piped the fat guy, "but after that my Kelly is off to the old game."

Lucky Penny and Rabbit's Foot Turned Down Coldly By Pat Moran

Now that the world's series ended, and the Phillies lost, these tales may be told:

Along about September 1 when the dopesters began announcing that "the Phillies, barring accidents, ought to win" Moran began to be bombarded with letters from fans all over the country who offered to sell him jinx chasers and lucky pieces of all kinds.

"The prize letter," remarked Pat, "came from a fellow up in Hamilton, Ont. He said he had a penny that had won fortunes for its owners, had saved people from railway and steamship wrecks and had accomplished many other wonderful things. That fellow offered me the penny for $500 upon the condition that I was to give him another $500 if we won the world series."

Another writer offered to Moran "for the moderate sum of $100," a rabbit's foot that had "unusual charms." The owner of the foot said it was a left hind foot, that it had belonged to a rabbit that was shot in a graveyard at night while sleeping on the freshly made grave of a negro voodoo doctor.

"A charm with such a history cannot fail to bring a pennant and a world series to you," declared the writer.

But Moran decided he'd take a chance on the pennant and the world series without seeking the aid of charms.

But suppose he used them and lost, what then? Or, what if he bought them and won. Superstition isn't dead yet.

WHAT PLAYERS WILL DO WITH THEIR MONEY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16. —Now that they've got it what are they gonna do with it?

That's the question that fandom asked to-day when it learned that each Red Sox player got $3,779.06 for winning the world series conflict. In an effort to snare the answer, your correspondent threaded his way in and out among the plutocrats, while they were counting up their newly acquired wealth, presented credentials to show that he did not have any designs upon the funds in question, and bespoke them thusly

"Whatcha gonna do with it?"

"Now that you asked," spoke up George Foster, a Boston pitching person, "I will join J. Pierpont and some of my other fellow millionaires in making that loan to the Allies."

"I'll slip mine into an old sock," said Catcher Cady. "I don't trust banks. I know a banker once who borrowed $10 from me. He still owes it."

"Cady's experience doesn't alter my trust in banks," said Tris Speaker. "I'll drag this roll back to Texas with me and put it where I've got some more."

Duffy Lewis will use his $3,709.68 in the purchase of a few more orange groves in California, his home state.

Harry Hooper, also a Californian, will do likewise.

Janvrin and McNally, the substitute kid infielders, asked to be excused from answering.

Jack Barry said that his old automobile was pretty much on the blink and that he's going to spend part of his coin in buying a new one.

Heinie Wagner, the veteran infielder, announced that his money would go toward buying more real estate in the Bronx.

Ray Collins is going to buy a farm, Catcher Thomas is going to put his money in a bank, and Del Gainer, the first baseman, has declined to do likewise.

"I've been reading so much about how a boy with a few thousands kopecs can run into a million in the stock market that I might take a chance with an investment – and I might not," said "Babe" Ruth, the southpaw flinger.

Vean Gregg, who was a plasterer before he became a pitcher, told about a prosperous plastering business somewhere out on the Pacific Coast that he wanted to buy.

Messrs. Henriksen, utility outfielder, Mays, a pitcher, Scott the shortstop and Shore, likewise a pitcher, chortled something about placing the money in a bank and watching it grow.

"My money goes toward buying a few more acres for my farm," said Manager Bill Carrigan. Bill hails from Lewiston, Me., and is one of the most prominent farmers in that section.

And then we approached "Dutch" Leonard, the portside flinger, and the last red-hosed person in the round-up.

"How about you?"

"Well, I'm gonna spend part of it taking a few more boxing lessons. Then when I'm fully conversant with the art of self-defence I'm going out and bust the noses of about two dozen of those 'Sure Thing Birds' who want me to invest my money in wild cat schemes. After that I'll stow the money in a bank and watch it grow."

South African Loyalty Strengthened by War Conditions Described

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—Conditions in South Africa are interestingly described in the following letter received by Mr. John B. Laidlaw of the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society from Mr. John Kent, the agent of the society in Kimberly, South Africa, who was himself under arms in the defence of that town during the Boer war:

"I hope you will not think too badly of us South Africans and our behaviour in the world-convulsions now going on. Our diamond mines closed down on the outbreak of war, as the sale of such luxuries suddenly ceased, but Kimberley soon afterwards became the chief base of operations against the rebels and also German South-West Africa. It brought back to us the old Boer War days, only now the letter Dutch and British donned the khaki in the common cause.

Rebellion, but no Grievance.

"To this, the farmer or "Backyelder," as we call him, frequently living 100 miles from town or railway, objected, largely the outcome of a previous political agitation for ultra-nationalism, begotten in a great measure by an inate feeling of independence and dislike of any form of government. Many of these people in former years treeked hundreds of miles from civilization to be free to govern themselves. Now there is no more free land to go to. We knew this element of irreconcilables were in the country. Ten thousand of them took up arms, a misguided lot, and some leading spirits organized it into an abortive rebellion without a grievance or a rallying cry. The loyal Dutch put it down. That meant, however, a loyal former in arms against his only neighbour, five or ten miles distant, with whom he had lived in neighborly fellowship, religion, nationality, and common interests. Well, he did it, and all honor to him. The loss of life in this rebellion was only some 350. It was wisely managed and mercifully settled, for the rank and file, the leaders only being imprisoned. Then our General Botha turned his attention to German West Africa, with about equal numbers of British and Dutch, and, curiously, the casualties in conquering that country were 127 British and 126 Dutch.

Huge Territory Conquered.

You may not, in far-off Canada realise the extent of the newly-acquired territory. It is nearly the size of the whole Union, about half a million square miles, three times the dimensions of the United Kingdom. The great majority of the Dutch are quite loyal, and this war has united them in a brotherly fashion with us Britishers. Thanks, now, to the policy of trust and the grant of self-government in this land, though some of us thought it came too rapidly after the Boer War. I only live thirty miles from Pandeburg, where your country men so nobly gave their lives for the cause of the Empire and good government, and the achievement of your gallant fellows to-day vividly reminds us here of the help and sacrifice of Canada in South Africa. If ever you write your press you might let the people know this—we Southerners remember with gratitude the men of the north and the part they took in our commonwealth of nations South Africa was much, but the saving of Ypres and the British army on that fatal gasing day will resound to the bravery of your countrymen while the good name of Britain lasts. Had it not been for their courage and sacrifice then we might have been in sore straits in France. Your example is a great stimulus to every Dominion to do its best.

6,000 Men Offered.

"The hands of our Government are just now largely tied in extending for the moment further help to the Imperial cause, owing to the general elections, which have, under the Act of Union, to take place in October. Consequently, General Botha, with considerable opposition in the country, cannot take risks right out the return of his party to power, nor yet commit the next Government to expenditure before consulting Parliament, but, as a matter of fact, the Government has called for volunteers to form a first contingent of 6,000, and these men will be ready to sail in about a fortnight. I quite believe, also, after the elections we shall do something to help in German East Africa. So now you see the cause your countrymen died for in this country fourteen years ago is being fulfilled. Dutchmen do not understand voluntering, but if asked to do a thing by trusted leaders they will obey. Many of them are going with our first contingent.

"Our gold mines are in full swing, which are one of the mainstays of financing the war."

New Canadian Troops First Time In Action Swept All Before Them

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—How the 25th Nova Scotia regiment, emulating the veterans of Wellington, rallied and saved the situation after four mines had blown up underneath them, killing and wounding a number of their men, is shown in details of the event received by Sir Sam Hughes.

Early last week a rumour was current in military circles that a Nova Scotia regiment had been blown up by mines at the front, and that disastrous results had followed. Major-General Hughes immediately caused enquiries to be made. Details show that four mines were exploded near the Nova Scotia regiment, causing a loss of 30 men killed and wounded. The Nova Scotians temporarily fell back to escape the falling rocks and debris, but immediately rallied and at the point of the bayonet recaptured every foot of ground. Just as the veterans of Wellington quailed before the mines of Badajos, but finally rallied and won, even so the new Canadian troops, for the first time in action, rallied and swept all before them.

The story of the bravery of the Canadians related in the official communique and published this morning, has greatly delighted both Sir Robert Borden and the Minister of Militia. Both of them to-day expressed their gratification in the form of cablegrams to the Canadians for the splendid work at the front during the past two weeks.

Pte. Charlie Stenson Has Done His "Bit"

when some one in a nearby dug-out called out that they had room for one more. Accordingly he obtained a place in the latter refuge. No more than ten minutes had passed when he observed one chap going by wounded; another followed shortly after, and then some one exclaimed, "Let's go back and see if Bert's alive." Pte. Stenson immediately ran out into the trench and discovered Corp. Carpenter dead, face down in the trench. He hadn't been hit by a bullet, but by a chance shell which came through the opening above the parapet. Had Pte. Stenson remained in the first dug-out — well, no one could tell what he might have received.

Another friend named Sheelan developed the idea that he would never return, and in spite of urgings held to that opinion. Pte. Stenson learned after that he had been killed.

His Own Escape.

The indelible remembrance in Pte. Stenson's mind is the Ypres engagement. To the end of his days he will wonder why he was spared when so many fell. On the night of April 23rd he went out with a party of eight with stretchers to attempt to bring in some of the wounded, but the Germans were sweeping the ground with machine guns, even turning them on the wounded, and the lieutenant in charge decided that it was useless to attempt to brave that fire.

He tells of many of the Peterborough boys, some of whom he saw fall around him when, exposed by the German flares that morning, they sprang to the charge. He knew of only seven who were still intact on the firing line. Only 283 responded four days after the battle when the Battalion roll was called. There were 35 in the Peterborough company. Frequently there were conflicting opinions as to whether the missing were dead or alive. The doctor called the names. One of the men would say "He's dead," another would exclaim, "No I saw him wounded" ;and the doctor would simply mark missing opposite the names of the doubtful. Some of the men marked as missing were later found at hospitals and some were prisoners.

Attentions Impress Men.

Private Stenson was impressed by the solicitude evinced for the present comfort and future welfare of the soldiers. At Quebec complete information was secured from each man, and Private Stenson was asked if he thought he would be fit for Post Office work. Shooting, lifting and walking up inclines affects his lungs even now, but after a rest up he believes he will be able to do some form of lighter work.

The short moustache is one military market which he has already parted with, and his uniform, puttees and boots which have been with him for months past are about to be displaced by the ordinary clothes of the civilian. Private Stenson is an ordinary citizen again, but one of those who has done his bit.

SECOND CROP RASPBERRIES ON OCTOBER 18

Second crop raspberries are no rarities. They are, however, of rare and isolated occurrence; but Mr. R. G. Ivey, Wolesley street, has this year, a plentiful second crop of Cuthbert raspberries, that have furnished fruit for the use of his family and neighbours, not a few scattererd berries, but dozens of boxes. He left with The Examiner to-day, Oct. 18th, a cluster of splendid, fully ripe berries; and if the severe frost keeps off he expects his canes to continue ripening fruit for some time to come.

There is a saying, "What the eye does not see the heart does not feel," which is much the same as a statement that the world lacks imagination. And no doubt there are many people who are insensitive to the sufferings of others because they cannot think themselves into the lives of others. It is difficult; for instance, for a very rich man to realize what it means to be a very poor man, more difficult still, perhaps for a strong healthy man to understand what it is to be a weak and ill man. And if these things are hard, very hard it must be for a nation enjoying the blessings of peace to understand thoroughly, and to enter imaginatively into, the anxieties, the terrors, the perpetual strain upon brain and heart and soul, which are the lot of a nation plunged into the vortex of war.

Yet it must be said that Americans have proved that their hearts have felt though their eyes have not seen the agonies of their European brothers and sisters. The help they have given has been very great, but the voices of the guns do not cease, and so the ruin and the misery in Europe continually increase day by day. Surely the sufferers from war turn for aid to those who still enjoy that mysterious, that already by Europeans almost forgotten blessing, the blessing of peace. They are not beggars by nature, these people bereft, but now instinctively from their souls goes out the silent cry "Can you help us? Can you do anything more for us?"

Two nights ago I went out just before ten to walk by the sea which is close to my house. There was not a breath of wind, the waters seemed asleep, and the dead calm which prevailed suggested to me a war-thought. "A good night for Zeppelins!" I said to my companion.

Here and there along the coast—I live on the East Coast of England—revolving lights winked in the obscurity, but all the houses scattered over the downs were closely shuttered, and in the little fishing town near by not a street lamp was lighted. Presently I looked up into the pale sky, in which some dim stars were shining and, very high up—almost among the farthest stars it seemed—I saw a fierce flash of light. It stabbed the peace of the night and was gone. I stood for a moment wondering what it could have been. A flash of lightning it was not. It had looked like a menacing signal. But up there among the stars!

Next morning I knew that I had seen the flash of a light carried by a Zeppelin which was on its way to bombard London.

Trifles such as this make one realize war as words do not make one realize it, in a really intimate way. The eye has seen the enemy's menace in the sky, and suddenly the heart feels something of what war is; the concentrated intention to do harm, to produce ruin, suffering and death, carried out as far as may be in action.

In Europe the carrying out of this intention in action has been appallingly effective. Never, I suppose, has such misery been known among men since the world began. And still we cannot see the end. Poverty, starvation, disease, ruin, dishonour and death have come into their kingdom. The cry of the women and children is not drowned even by the cries of the men falling on the innumerable battlefields. Will not the ears of the world become deaf because of the reiteration of the lamenting which cannot be stilled?

There is surely a danger of that. And if the sources of pity and of charity should dry up? Well, then indeed the Devil will reap a fine harvest of human misery from the saints and the runagates alike.

It cannot be denied that we are importunate in Europe. But we are very much beset. Still the homeless Belgians are pouring in upon us. A friend of mine, a woman within a few miles of my home, is still giving almost all her time to the finding of house room for Belgians, to fitting them out with boots, clothes, and the necessaries of life, and to searching out work for such as can work. She has been doing this for about nine months now, and the end of her labours is not in sight. And all this time she has been collecting money for these poor people, many of whom have nothing.

Over here in England many millions of pounds have been given in charity since last August, but millions vanish like drops of water in the desert, and still the need on all sides seems nearly as great as ever.

Here where I live, in a very little place, when the war began a hospital was got ready "in case it should be wanted" for the wounded. It had twenty-five beds, the arrangements were excellent, and we were rather proud of it. I remember the time when people "hoped" we should get some patients. Now we have four hospitals and a convalescent home full to the doors of gas victims, wounded men, and broken down men from the trenches, and a fifth hospital is being got ready. Before the war is over how many hospitals shall we have, I wonder, in this one little corner of England? Vast is the need of Europe and vast must be the charity, prompted by pity, to cope with it.

I have seen a good deal of the gas victims, men who fell unconscious before the advancing cloud from the German trenches, and who awoke in hospital far behind the lines at Boulogne or elsewhere. They all have a curious remote expression in their eyes, and a curiously detached, almost far-away manner. They look and seem like men who have gone to the confines and gazed over. It is strange to see them staring at the flowers, wild blue orchids, lilies of the valley, hyacinths, buttercups, which star our English woods and meadows just now, as they drive through the green and budding world in the purring motor. Their eyes seem to be saying, "Can it be?"

They have been to the confines and looked over; and yet here they are among the sweet familiar things, among the English wild flowers, and the blossoming hedge-rows. They have come back from the suffocating grey-green clouds to breathe in the wind from our seas, they have come back to receive the welcome of spring.

And the thousands who have been to the confines of misery and who looked into the abysses of Hell! Will you help them to come back from those confines and to turn their eyes away from those abysses?

Will you help them?

It is good to see a human being returning to hope through the gateway of wonder, led by the hands of mercy, of charity, of pity.

There is spring in the land. Yes, in spite of this war spring has come again to the world, and the larks dare to sing above the graves. The wounded, the half suffocated soldiers see, and hear, and perhaps they feel—indeed I think they do feel—"Yes, after all there is a God somewhere." And when the beneficent streams of pity and charity flow then the wounded in soul and the half suffocated in spirit look up. They see that there are actually flowers springing out of the dust of death, they hear larks singing above the graves of their hopes, and surely they think, they feel, "Yes, after all there is a God somewhere."

Put that belief into their souls by means of your tender charity, and about your feet the flowers will spring up, and the larks, dropping down from the blue, will surely come to sing before your windows.

Eight Defense Lines Prepared By Serbs

Warning that the Serbs are well equipped to meet a new attack is given in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt of Sept. 21, copies of which have been received here. The newspaper says:

"The second campaign against Serbia has begun. As appears from the German General Staff report, the first attack this time does not take place against the kingdom from the west, but from the north across the Danube. It does not find Serbia unprepared.

"The Serbian Army has had three-quarters of a year to recuperate from the campaign against the Austro-Hungarian armies. Even if it has succeeded in offering successful resistance, it has nevertheless suffered in these defeats great and heavy losses, which, it seemed, could scarcely be replaced by the small country, exhausted by three wars in close succession. Then, in addition, there came in winter, an enemy which raged as furiously in the ranks of the Serbian army as had formerly the Austrian machine guns and cannon—the spotted typhus. Eighty per cent. of the cases ended in death; it may be imagined how much Serbia lost through this disease. Even the physicians, who hurried to its assistance from France, Russia, and America and fought heroically against this foe, had to pay their death-toll to the terrible disease. Only when the rigors of winter grew less and when doors and windows could be opened and the sleeping rooms cleaned was the force of the epidemic broken.

"Even if Serbia itself could not or would not rouse itself to a new offensive, it nevertheless equipped itself to meet the attack of Austria-Hungary and Germany. Ceaselessly throughout the winter supplies from France and England went up from Salonika to Nish, to fill the gaps in the armament.

"With the tacit consent of the Greek Government (which probably could not do otherwise under the pressure of England) a Serbian bureau was established in Salonika, in which Serbian officers supervised the unloading of English and French munitions and the transportation to Nish. In the beginning the English and French transport vessels sailed directly to the quays of Salonika; but when Greece, in order to preserve at least a semblance of neutrality, protested against this the ships anchored outside in the harbour and their supplies were landed on lighters.

"In this way they succeeded in giving a complete new equipment to the Serbian army, which had lost almost everything. Above all, particular pains were taken to equip with sufficient heavy artillery the reinforced concrete defensive positions which Serbia has arranged in eight successive rows in its northeast corner. These guns, moreover, are served by French artillerymen. For some time past, also, French aviators have been enrolled in the Serbian army.

"In order to place the army again on a defendable basis every one was made a soldier who could carry a gun. Even the desks of the Ministries were emptied and their officials thrust into uniforms. All men up to 50 years of age were drawn into service, as well as the wounded, whose complete recovery in many cases could not be waited for.

"Thus Serbia once more brought an army to its last conscriptively estimated at 240,000 to 250,000 men. The loss in officers, on the other hand, could not be made good so easily. Therefore they were obliged to promote to officers' rank many soldiers who had distinguished themselves on the battlefield. All cadets, no matter how young they were, were made Lieutenants. Finally twenty Colonels were promoted to the rank of Generals."

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH HELD ITS CHOIR FESTIVAL

A Magnificent Address By Canon Plummer---Choir Vested in Surplices

The little, go-ahead Anglican Church of St. George—England's patron Saint—had another red-letter day yesterday, when it celebrated its Choral Festival.

For the first time in the history of this parish, the choir was vested in surplices, and the ladies in "mortar boards," but there still remains a need for cassocks. So here is a chance for some liberal-minded Church men or women to show in a truly practical form their appreciation of the good, strenuous work being so unobtrusively done at the little church between Braidwood Avenue and McGill Street.

In the morning the choir had put up a sung Eucharist and very creditable indeed was the performance. Mr. Woodrow, the Choir-director, certainly deserves a large amount of credit for the pains he has taken and the energy he has shown in training his choir.

From a musical point of view the evening service—the "Evensong" of the Anglican Church was the biggest feature.

The choristers—newly vested—marched in procession from the entrance of the Church to their choir-stalls, singing the well-known processional hymn "Onward! Christian Soldiers," sung to Sir Arthur Sullivan's familiar tune. The harmonised Confession was well sung. This is the only choir in this neighbourhood which sings the Confession, adding much to its grandeur and solemnity. The special psalms, 147th, 149th, and 150th were sung to well-known, old-style English chants, the latter psalm, of course, being sung to Purcell's well-known "Grand" chant.

The service was intoned by the Rector, the Rev. James Price, the lessons being read in a sweetly musical tone by the Rev. Canon Plummer, Precentor of the Cathedral of St. Alban, Toronto.

At the close of the Evening Office, Canon Plummer preached the sermon—or, to be more correct, delivered an address, for it was really a heart-to-heart chat, every word thoroughly convincing. Standing on the Chancel step, without the formality of a text, he reminded his congregation that the morrow—to-day—would be St. Luke's Day. He was not going to speak in particular of St. Luke, but was going to have a little talk with us about the Saints, generally.

In the early pages of our Book of Common Prayer would be found a calendar in which some names of Saints were printed in red and some in black. There were days set apart for the commemoration of such as apostles, or evangelists, or martyrs. These names appeared for two purposes: firstly, for commemoration, and secondly, to teach a lesson; rather difficult perhaps, because we are apt to place them on too high a level—when they were but men and women like ourselves. The word "saint" means one called out to serve God. St. Paul means by "saints" all people called, and who, having obeyed the call, have been baptized, and go to Church, but they are not all good; for, as saints, many of us do things of which we ought to be thoroughly ashamed. The use of the word "saint" is frequently a term of reproach. The fact of our attending Church shows that we have received the call and are trying. The Saints' days are kept, not that we should be afraid, but just because they were men like ourselves. "I was the same as you are" you may fancy hearing them say; "so I have come to have a talk with you about what I did myself." What our Lord wanted about Him were men experienced in type of men to whom He was to speak. He called them from the common crowd to preach to men leading the same sort of lives as they did. It was a great privilege for these men to be so much with our Lord, yet at the same time when they went out, it was largely on faith, for they could not possibly form any idea as to what extent the Gospel would spread. They had no experience, as we have, of its two thousand years' of trial, backed up by a long line and history, a long roll of heroes, martyrs, etc., and those to-day living heroic lives because they are good Christians. We may, if we like, be just as good as them.

We know about Him, just as they did—not personally—but we have the Gospel story carrying to all of us all about Jesus Christ, and what He wants us to do, and the kind of lives He wishes us to lead. The preaching of the disciples was very fetching, because they had heard Jesus Christ say such and such things; yet we can do as effective work, for the effect of a Christian is never gone.

A great deal is done by example. Now, St. Paul was a tent-maker, as well as being a preacher. Do you not think there were those who asked: "What sort of man is this preacher in his private life, or in his business life?" "Does he practice all he preaches?" In the same way, now-a-days, how often is a similar question asked of a preacher, or of a professing Christian—does he do his business as he preaches? If Christian people would live the true Christian life they would soon convert not only the heathen abroad, but the heathen in our midst.

There is a tremendous responsibility on the part of those conducting services. "What sort of people are these?" is the natural question, and the Church suffers for the backsliders, not the offenders. We must sacrifice our lives to God as the men who have gone to the front have sacrificed their lives. The Lord's demands are possible and we must give up everything—just as the country has given up everything for the righteous war. We are soldiers of Christ. Are we going to fight and die for Him?

Prior to the collection of the Offertory, the solo "Ever Safe with God" was sung in a most feeling and touching manner by Mrs. Ryerson-Ritchie, a vocalist of high repute, well known to many of our readers.

The hymns used throughout the service were 320, 402, 653, 304, 97.

Several members of St. John's Church were present to lend their support to these hearty services.

Children's Day at St. Luke's Church

Special Service Yesterday Afternoon —Large Attendance of Children and Parents

Children's Day was observed at St. Luke's Church yesterday by a special service in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. The edifice had been very prettily decorated for the occasion by a committee of the lady teachers, flowers, flags and maple leaves being very attractively arranged. The scholars marched into the church, accompanied by their teachers, and occupied the centre pews. Quite a number of parents and friends also attended the service, which was of a bright and inspiring character. A catechatical address on "A Boy and the Book," a story of Timothy and his early training, was given by the Rector, Rev. Mr. White. The attentive hearing given his remarks by the children was evidenced by their ready answers.

Two of the senior boys took up the offertory, which was devoted to the Sunday School commission fund.

COUNCIL RAISE THE GRANT TO FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS

Special Meeting Was Held on Saturday Evening—Aldermen Suffer a Change of Heart—Public Was Present to Strengthen the Hands of the Council—Special Fund May Be Created.

The sum of $5,000 has been voted by the City Council towards the $500,000 fund that is being raised in Ontario to aid the British Red Cross Society. A resolution to that effect is indited in that all important lexicon which records the doings and sometimes the undoings of the City Council. This time it was the "undoing," as the net result of the meeting that was held on Saturday night was represented by the adoption of a resolution authorizing a grant of $5,000, while the resolution that was passed at a previous meeting respecting a grant of $500 was rescinded.

Mayor Buller, who presided, said the meeting had been called to further consider the response to be made to the appeal of the British Red Cross Society for assistance.

Ald. Bobbin read a resolution passed at a public meeting asking the Council to make a grant of $5,000. His Honour Judge Huycke, Messrs. D. O'Connell, H. Rush, F. D. Kerr and W. S. Robinson were heard in support of this resolution.

In Good Shape.

His Honour Judge Huycke made a stirring appeal on behalf of the Red Cross Society. He was followed by Mr. D. O'Connell, who reminded the Council that a further grant would have to be made to the Patriotic Fund. The demand this year would be at least three times greater than last year. The demand this year would be at least three times greater than last year. He said the city would be discredited if it did not do as well as other cities.

Mr. F. D. Kerr asked Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance committee, to supply him with a list of grants made by the Council this year, which is estimated at approximately $11,700.

Mayor Buller remarked that the city was in good shape financially and resented any insinuation to the contrary.

Mr. W. S. Robinson said that the city must be prepared to make sacrifices. He ventured to say that not one man in Peterborough had missed a meal so far. He voiced his approval of a grant of at least five thousand dollars.

The Resolution.

It was moved by Ald. Edgar, and seconded by Ald. Saunders, that a grant of $5,000.00 be made to the British Red Cross Society, in response to the appeal made by that Society through Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and when legislative authority is obtained to issue debentures for such purposes as named above, debentures will be issued to replace the money now granted.

The resolution contained in the report of the Finance committee recommending a grant of $500.00, and which was subsequently adopted by the Council was rescinded.

An amendment was moved by Ald. Stratton and seconded by Ald. Langford, that a grant of $1,000.00 be made to the British Red Cross Society and that the grant be supplemented by public subscriptions. The amendment was lost and the original motion adopted.

Ald. Stratton and Ald. Langford objected to a grant of five thousand dollars, mainly on the grounds that it would be a burden on the ratepayers.

Ald. Green suggested the formation of a special fund which could be used for such purposes as named in the above resolution.

The Council hope to secure legislative authority to issue debentures for such a fund which may contain twenty or thirty thousand dollars.

Liquor Shops Out of Bounds

Important Reading Affecting Number Two Military District—May Apply to Peterborough

Special to The Examiner.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Oct. 18.—All liquor shops in this military district will be out of bounds so far as soldiers are concerned this winter. Such is the decision of General W. A. Logie, on his return from Ottawa to-day, where he spent the week-end in conference with the Minister of Militia.

"I shall put all liquor stores out of bounds," said Gen. Logie, "I have no means of dealing with other people who may provide soldiers with bottles, but soldiers caught carrying bottles will be punished.

This may be discrimination, but no soldier needs a bottle. The Colonel has asked the License Commissioners to make a ruling compelling storekeepers to put the name of the vendor on the bottle. He has received no answer yet.

General Logie intimated that he was taking the action with the approval of Sir Sam Hughes, after a conference with the Minister and other divisional commanders in Ottawa.

It is thought here that similar orders will be promulgated in all the military districts of Canada.

TWO MEN WERE KILLED

When a Sixty Foot Chimney Collapsed in Toronto

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 18.—Two men were killed and six injured shortly after noon to-day when a chimney 60 feet high, collapsed at Hart House, the new students' lunch and gymnasium under construction, the gift to Varsity by the Massey estate. The chimney in its fall crashed through the roof of the building and buried eight men completely. Harry Jones and Wm. Magee were the victims.

Overdose of Morphine Caused His Death

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—Mr. Alexander Macdonald Oxley, a well-known insurance agent, residing at 188 Kingston Road, was found in an unconscious condition yesterday afternoon by his family. He was suffering from an overdose of morphine. He was removed to St. Michael's Hospital, where he died during the evening.

When Mr. Oxley was discovered Drs. Langmard and Burgess were at once summoned and they worked over him from 1.30 o'clock until 6, when their efforts to save his life proved vain. The dying man was then rushed to the hospital in the police ambulance, but his condition gradually became worse, and he succumbed to the effects of the morphine at 9.15 o'clock. It was stated by the family that Mr. Oxley had taken the drug in mistake for another medicine.

Indiana increased its production of petroleum last year for the first time in ten years, the state's output being 1,833,433 barrels.

Farmers' Bank Test Case

Is Being Argued in Toronto To-day

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct 18.—"That the farmers bank never was in business legitimately, and that therefore, there were no bank shares, legally speaking "was argued before Mr. Justice Lennox at Osgoode Hall to-day when James R. Lindsay appealed from the report of referee McAndrews. The latter was found for the liquidator and against the shareholders.

Farmers' bank shareholders have been placed on the double liability list and the present test case involves a very large amount of money.

TROUBLE IN THE CABINET

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng. Oct. 18.—Attorney General Sir Edward Carson was absent from the cabinet meeting again to-day. Belief that he had resigned gained ground. Many rumors were current of grave cabinet crisis.

The Balkan outlook was blamed mainly for the trouble.

The report also tells of a bumper crop of potatoes, the German national foodstuff these war-days. It says:

"Careful estimates figure this year's potato crop at 1,650,000,000 to 1,800,000,000 bushels. Of this volume 550,000,000 bushels are required for human consumption, for industrial purposes 188,000,000 bushels, and for seed 257,000,000 bushels. This goes to show that for fodder about 735,000,000 bushels will be available.

"As large quantities of potatoes are left over from the last crop the above total volume is very considerably increased. The authorities in charge of the potato supply and distribution report regarding the last crop that, after the demand of the army and municipalities had been covered, a surplus of 14,700,000 bushels was reached. This volume was used for industrial purposes, as 1,000,000 bushels for potato shavings, 6,000,000 bushels for starch, and 2,000,000 bushels for alcoholic liquors."

Talking Business To Business Men

You, every year, write off a percentage of your plant value for depreciation. Most likely you are building up a fund to take care of replacement.

The most important part of your plant is your own mental and physical energy. Some day depreciation will set in, and you will not then be able to replace the worn and devitalized energies.

At 65 you will probably still have to earn your living—36 out of every 100 men do. With your earning power impaired the task will be heavy and the return possibly meagre.

Why not cover this depreciation by a Canada Life Monthly Pension Policy, that will return you a monthly income for life, commencing at age 65? It is straight insurance also, because on your death prior to age 65, payments to your estate commence and continue for 120 months. If you do not live to receive 120 payments, the balance due will be paid your estate.

Will Fail in East As They Have Failed in West

Is the Opinion of Lord Northcliffe in Speaking of the Germans

LONDON, Oct. 18.—In reply to a cable request for an expression of his views on the European situation at this time, Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Times and the London Daily Mail, has cabled the following statement:

"The new war situation is particularly interesting. The Germans, after colossal losses, have abandoned their attempt to reach Calais and their more recently expressed intention of breaking through the line at Arras and cutting off the whole British army.

"My own correspondents tell me that the German losses during the last fortnight in front of the British lines have been immense. Though the censor does not permit us to say so here, I am hoping that he will allow me to let the fact get through the cable that the Germans have fought with magnificent courage against our men. The Germans were mowed down last week exactly as they were mowed down in the first battle of Ypres.

"Headed off everywhere in the west, they are now making for the east, and by crushing little Serbia hope to seize the Suez Canal and hold up the British Empire for an immense indemnity. My absolute conviction is that just as they have been beaten in the attempt to get to Calais and Paris so they will eventually, after immense further losses of life on the part of our armies and theirs, fail in the east as they have failed in the west. I still hold the opinion expressed at the beginning of the war that the world is in for a long upheaval of a nature it does not at present foresee."

North Monaghan To Do Its Bit

Special Red Cross Meeting Will Be Held To-morrow Night at May's School House

The North Monaghan Council met at the Court House on Saturday with Reeve McIntosh and Councillors Bell, Robson and Rye present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Reeve presented a lettergram from the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, regarding contributions to the British Red Cross Society, and the Order of St. John, setting October 21st as the day for collecting such funds.

It was moved by Messrs. Rye and Bell that the lettergram be received, and that some action be taken.

Another communication from the Central Committee of Ontario for the British Red Cross Society gave suggestions as to how to organize for making the collections.

The Council decided to call a special Red Cross meeting at May's School House on Tuesday, October 19th, at 8 p.m. and ask for a large gathering to organize for the work on Thursday.

It was moved by Messrs Rye and Bell that the tender of R. Byers for drawing gravel for the sidewalk on Brown Street, at $1 per load, of 1 1/2 yards, be accepted.

The Treasurer was given an order for $2 for war stamps, on motion of Messrs. Bell and Rye.

A communication was received from G. N. Gordon re Chas. Waldron's damages to crop.

Council had previously decided to pay for the gravel at 15 cents per yard, but Waldron did not feel inclined to accept anything under 30 cents. As this is more than is being paid to any other gravel pit owner, the matter was referred to the Township Solicitor.

The following sidewalk bills were presented for payment:

Estate A. McDonald, lumber, 44c; J. E. A. Fitzgerald, cement, $85.80; G. Walter Green, grates, $3.71; Estate A. McDonald, lumber, $24.76; W. J. Kennedy, irons, $9.25; W. J. Byers, supplies, $1.54; W. J. Byers, pump, etc., $6.57; Kinsan Hardware Co., $6.32. Total $138.30.

The accounts were ordered to be paid on motion of Messrs. Robson and Rye.

The following general accounts were also ordered to be paid: Kinsan Hardware Co., 90c.; H. Akey, car hire (charity) $4; W. G. Morrow, repairs, $2.40. Total, $7.30.

It was moved by Messrs. Bell and Rye that Councillor Robson investigate the case of the old couple who are camping at the Kincaid farm, and find where they came from and their circumstances.

It was moved by Messrs. Bell and Robson that the sidewalk crossing on a continuation of sidewalks with the exception of the Post Office at Brownston, and that the crossings be put in on the township side only until such time as the City is prepared to build its share.

Special Red Cross meeting will be held in Mays' Schoolhouse, North Monaghan, Tuesday, October 19th at 8 o'clock. A large and representative gathering is asked to be present.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE OVERSEAS CLUB TOBACCO FUND

There are 70,000 Canadians at the front. It needs nearly $80,000 a week to supply every man with tobacco.

The Overseas Club for 25 cents can cheer the heart of one of the 70,000 with a packet of Canadian manufactured tobacco, 50 Canadian manufactured cigarettes, and a box of matches.

The Overseas Club has facilities, by reason of exemption from duty and free transit, which enable it to send all this value for 25 cents. If you purchase the same goods in a retail store in Canada and pay the postage yourself it will cost you nearly a dollar.

The Overseas Club will make your one dollar do the work of four, or turn your 25 cents into a dollar, or nearly so.

Saturday Night says (October 9th, page 2): "The statement that the Club has undertaken to discharge all Private's obligations, and that every cent given by Canadians toward the Fund will go in tobacco for the troops, gives all the assurance that Candian subscribers need require."

The Toronto World says (September 18th, page 2, column 2): "The Toronto World has stated, and says again, that at no time has it had any grievance against the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund, and the object of its collection. As was said on Monday morning, 'what the World wanted explained was Private's connection with it.' Private no longer is connected with the Fund.—Man. Ed. World."

Cable from Evelyn Wrench, Esq., Hon. Secretary and Organizer of the Overseas Club, London, England, to Mr. F. R. Jones, Windsor Hotel, Montreal. Dated September 22rd, 1915: "Please circulate the following statement to Canadian Press and Corresponding Secretaries of the Club in Canada: 'The Central Committee of the Overseas Club regret to hear that, owing to the unauthorized extravagances on the part of their representative (Mr. Arthur Private) now recalled, attacks have been made on the administration of the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund. The facts are as follows: For every 25 cents subscribed in Canada our Fund send the man at the front fifty Canadian cigarettes and a packet of Canadian manufactured tobacco, both of sound quality, with no deduction for expenses whatever. The audited balance sheet for the past twelve months working of the Fund will be issued early in October.'".

Cable received by Mr. George R. Lighthall, Notary, etc., 802 Quebec Bank Building, Montreal, from Mr. Evelyn Wrench. Dated Sept. 10th, 1915: "Total money, eight thousand seven hundred and twenty-three pounds, received from Canada for Tobacco Fund from October to end August. One hundred and fifty-two thousand parcels dispatched in same period, each parcel value twenty-five cents. Total contents seven million, six hundred thousand cigarettes, and thirty-eight thousand pounds tobacco. Balance Canadian cash in hand, eleven hundred and twenty-three pounds. Please appreciate that two months and more must necessarily elapse before subscribers can receive post cards from the front. Delays arise through Customs formalities, military authorities, and war exigencies. Everything possible is being done to expedite deliveries, but abnormal times—abnormal delays. Post cards should be delivered to Canada free."

The money collected to the end of Aug. £6,798 x 20 equals	174,480 packets
Sent to the Front	152,000 packets
Balance in hand £1,198 x 20 equals	22,480 packets

An audited statement will be issued early in October, but the above is practically a balance sheet. Each pound sterling received in London represents 20 packets of comfort for the boys at the front.

Of course, there are other monies in transit which are being paid into the bank each day, and it should be borne in mind, as pointed out by the cablegram, that a period of at least two months must elapse before the packets subscribed for can reach the front and an acknowledgment be received by the donors in Canada; and further, it is impossible to ensure that every recipient of a packet will take the trouble to fill up the post card addressed to the donor, which is enclosed in each packet sent.

The above statement should remove the misapprehensions aroused by some of the assertions which have appeared recently in the Press. The newspapers are themselves correcting their misstatements, but corrections do not attract the same attention as articles devoted to criticism and attack. The facts are just simply as stated. All monies contributed in Canada are paid into the banks and remitted to London, and every cent is expended in the purchase of Canada manufactured tobacco and cigarettes.

$170,666 Is Amount Raised

Baptists Consider Budget at Their Annual Convention

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 16.—Consideration of the report of the Budget Committee occupied the attention of the Baptists in their annual convention this morning.

The objective for the year, namely, $200,000, was not reached, although the sum of $170,666 had been raised. Of this $110,704 came from the churches and the balance, $54,962, came from other sources. The amount asked from the churches was $174,000, but considering conditions, the returns were satisfactory. Rev. E. J. Stobo, Hespeler, presented the report and the state of religion. During the year there were thirteen ordinations. The baptisms numbered 2,087, an increase of 204, as compared with the previous year. The amount of money expended during the year at home was $202,220, or $24,000 less than the previous year. The amounts expended abroad this year was $184,972 more than in 1914.

The church attendance since the falling off, although there was little change in the rural sections. There was much divergence of opinion on the question as to whether or not there would be an increase of spiritual life after the war.

Rev. Mr. Gilmour, chaplain at the Niagara camp, was to have been present to read an address, but could not attend. His paper was read by Rev. C. E. McLeod and was much appreciated. During the year a large number of ministers of the church have died, and Rev. W. S. McAlpine read their obituaries.

MOTOR TRAIN PLUNGES INTO FLOODED CREEK

Four Known to Be Dead and Nine Are Missing

RANDOLPH, Kas., Oct. 16.—Four persons are known to be dead and nine are missing as the result of the wrecking of a Union Pacific motor train which early to-day plunged through a bridge into Fancy Creek near here. The train consisted of a passenger coach and combination baggage and mail car. About fifteen feet of the forward end of the passenger car was buried in flood waters and mud.

Four of the estimated seventy-five passengers are known to be dead and nine other bodies are said to be lodged in the buried end of the car. All attempts to reach these bodies have failed, and the correct death list will probably not be known until the wrecking crew can reach the scene and lift the car. Fancy Creek, ordinarily "dry run," was swollen into a torrent by the heavy rains yesterday.

A majority of the passengers were young women school teachers who had gathered from the southern part of Riley County to take the motor train in a party to a teachers' meeting to have been held here to-day. Several of the young women are unaccounted for. It was said few persons in the wrecked car escaped injuries.

The identified bodies are: Dr. Lewis Atwood, physician, Topeka; Alma Jellin, Garrison, Kan.

Warren Knittle, of Manhattan, conductor of the train, estimated that thirteen passengers probably lost their lives. This estimate was not accurate, however, Knittle said, as he had lost some of his tickets when he was thrown into the aisle of the plunging car and forced to jump through a door to save himself.

The train left Manhattan northbound shortly before 7 o'clock and arrived at the Fancy Creek bridge at 7.50. The train was travelling at a rapid rate when, according to passengers, the forward end of the passenger car, suddenly pitched down. The passengers were thrown pell mell against the motorman's compartment.

WOMAN WEAK, RUN-DOWN

Finds Health in a Simple Tonic.

People in Peterborough will begin to believe us when we say that our delicious Vinol is a wonderful tonic, and strength creator.

Here is another case where it has proved its wonderful power to overcome, weak, run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions.

"I was run-down, nervous, and could not do my work without being entirely exhausted, and would often faint without any apparent cause. The doctor said I was anaemic, but failed to help me. My husband brought home a bottle of Vinol and I began to improve after taking one bottle, and after taking four bottles it has built me up so I can do all my housework without help. I recommend Vinol to a neighbour, who says her doctor approves of it, and said 'Vinol is a wonderfully good tonic'." Mrs. Bessie Hering, West Philadelphia, Pa.

We recommend Vinol to our customers as the greatest strength creative medicinal elements of fresh cod livers without oil combined with peptone, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine.

BISHOP ADVISES PEOPLE TO PREPARE FOR SACRIFICES

At St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, fully endorsed the collection to be taken up on Trafalgar Day, Thursday next, in aid of the British Red Cross. He said that this was a special appeal, that these were extraordinary times and demanded extraordinary sacrifices. Even though they may have been giving as much as they have felt their means permitted he exhorted the people to assist as generously as possible in all these worthy movements. Bishop O'Brien intimated that in the coming months additional appeals might be expected and he referred in passing to the statement in the British Cabinet during the past week that the state would not consider a man to be doing his duty unless he were prepared to place at its disposal half his income. His Lordship remarked that even if a man were to give his entire income he would not be doing as much toward the success of the Empire in this struggle as the man who was giving himself by filling a place in the trenches.

Italians Storm Positions in the Trentino District

ROME, Oct. 18.—The Italians have stormed Pregasina, an important advanced position of the Riva defenses in Trentino, according to an official communication issued to-day.

It is stated that the attack has been in progress since the night of last Wednesday, when deachments advanced in a fog and made several large breaches in the Austrian entanglements, thus permitting the main body to move forward against the Austrians on the following day.

Pregasina formed a strong link, it is stated, in the chain of fortifications in the rugged mountainous zone to the west of Lake Garda.

HOW YOU CAN HELP THE BOYS AT THE FRONT

Who can have the heart to read of the hardships which our brave soldiers continue to meet with a smiling face and refuse to send him the gift of smokes he so badly needs.

"I have none left"—one can almost hear him telling the others around him—and smokers will know the misery this must mean.

Do Not Forget Him in His Hour of Hardships.

The following letter from the front shows how welcome such a gift becomes when trench life is the order of the day.

This letter, written just behind the firing line, and only a few days previous to the victorious action of Neuve Chapelle, says:

"Your very kind gift of tobacco and cigarettes was handed over to me just as I went up for my turn of duty in the firing line. I need hardly tell you how much the gifts of cigarettes are appreciated by the men who (some of them at least) would seldom, if ever, get any but for the kindness of these unknown friends at home.

"I know some of the gifts go unacknowledged at times but they are all received. Most of those that are not acknowledged are due to the cards enclosed being lost or damaged through work at the front—so much that the address of the donors sometimes cannot be made out.

"If you could only see the men when the packets come in I think you would say you were thoroughly rewarded for your kindness and generosity.

"They flock around the orderlies in the expectancy of getting a few more 'fags' (as they call them—and if they don't quite go round—oh! the look of disappointment on the faces of those who have to go short."

We confidently appeal to our readers whose patriotism and enthusiasm for our brave men, helping to hold the Germans and fighting as they have never fought before, is ready and willing to take the form of a few parcels of smokes and we hope they will continue to help our Tobacco Fund with every cent they can afford to send.

There can be no shadow of doubt that tobacco and cigarettes are needed by the men in the firing line in ever increasing quantities as our Canadian force continues to grow.

One of the most pleasing features of the scheme is the reply post-card which is included in every one of the parcels sent out by our fund. This post-card has the name and address of the contributors written on—and recipients use this to thank the senders.

Our readers are asked to remember that just three times the ordinary value is obtained through subscribing through this fund — besides which there is nothing to pay for carriage.

Parcels may be sent to any particular regiment for distribution generally—or to any particular individual soldier on active service in France.

Contributions may be sent to the Examiner.

THREE MORE TOBACCO CARDS FROM THE FRONT

The following are copies of Overseas Tobacco acknowledgment cards, further evidences that Peterborough donations, through this medium, are being received by the boys at the front.

To Mr. J. McCarney, 21 Bethune Street.

September 24, 1915.

My Dear Friend,—I received your package of tobacco and cigarettes, yesterday, with thanks. Glad to get a token from home. I once lived at 170 Dalhousie Street, around the corner from your home. I will close with thanks.

Yours truly,
Pte. V. G. Northcote,
No. 1 Co., 2nd Battalion.

This letter was to Mr. N. M. Gillis, 201 Perry Street:

September 24, 1915.

Thanks very much for the tobacco, Noah, which has been duly appreciated. Rather strange that I should happen upon the packet sent by you. Trust everything is going well with you. All Peterborough men well.

Yours truly,
A. R. Ackerman,
No. 1 Co., 2nd Battalion,
1st Inf. Brigade.

This letter was received by Mr. Enos. Mayhee, 234 Westcott Street:

Dear Sir,—Many thanks on behalf of myself and comrades for gift of tobacco, etc.

Yours respectfully,
Corp. W. Reynolds,
No. 1 Co., 2nd Battalion.

Any other Peterborough people receiving tobacco cards from the boys are requested to leave them for a short time with Mr. E. J. Soden, who desires to make a window display of them, to arouse more interest in this Tobacco Fund.

BATTERY DRAFTS LEAVE KINGSTON FOR THE FRONT

KINGSTON, Oct. 16. — Yesterday afternoon Barriefield camp said goodbye to another draft of 300 men and officers from the three batteries of field artillery which were mobilized and trained at Barriefield. They have gone to swell the number Britain is putting in the field to conquer and forever subdue the Huns of Europe and the Turks and Bulgars of Europe and Asia. Promptly at 2.30 in the afternoon, headed by the fine band of the R.C.H.A., in charge of Lieut. Light, 100 men from the 36rd battery commanded by Major Mackenzie, 100 men from the 53rd battery commanded by Major Sears, 100 men men from the 34th battery commanded by Major Massie, and six young sub-alterns marched out of the lines of the artillery camp, and out on the Gananoque road on their way to the city, where they later entrained.

A Big Demonstration.

All along the full line of the camp, the overseas draft were given a most rousing send-off. The first to greet them on the roadside was the entire 59th battalion. Lt.-Col. Dawson drew up his men facing that road, and as the draft approached called for cheers for the men who were on their way to the front. They were given willingly, loudly, and lasted until the draft had long passed on its way trainward. A little farther along the road, and the men from the trenches came up with their cheers and waving of caps, and still further down the road the 80th battalion were waiting to give their departing comrades from the camp one last long, encouraging cheer. All the way down the road to the bridge and on the city side of the bridge as well they were greeted with cheers and clapping of hands. There were the usual sad features of parting.

Seven cars were waiting on the G. T. R. track for the 300 artillerymen, and the work of entraining and placing all baggage aboard was done quietly and quickly. Major Prideaux directed the entrainment, and every officer soon had his men on board. There was an immense gathering of people present to see the boys leave, and they broke into wild and continued cheers which lasted until the last sight of the departing train was lost to the crowd on Place d'Armes. Above the cheers and enthusiastic demonstration could be heard the strains of the old Scotch song, played by the R.C.H.A. band, "Shall Auld Acquaintance be Forgot," while handkerchiefs and flags were waved, hands were clapped vigorously, and voices gave vent to heartfelt feelings.

Back from every car window came answering cheers and fervent farewells, and at 4.15 the train pulled away with another splendid sample of Canadian soldiers and British boys in khaki going out to fight humanity's greatest battle. Captain Stacey paraded "C" Battery, R.C.H.A. to the train, and they joined heartily in the big demonstration, all expressing the hope that their turn would soon come to go overseas, too. The officers of the three batteries placed $30 worth of cigarettes and tobacco on board the departing train for use of the men of the draft.

Lieut. Huycke and fifty Peterborough artillerymen are in the draft from the 59rd Battery.

WEDDING BELLS

MALONEY—KILLEN.
A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, on Oct. 12, by the Rev. M. E. Fitzpatrick, when Mary Florence Killen, youngest daughter of Samuel Killen, became the bride of Francis Maloney, oldest son of Eugene Maloney, both of Ennismore.

The bride looked charming in a suit of Russian blue gabardine and white hat with willow plume. She was assisted by her cousin, Miss Julia Killen in a suit of navy blue with hat to match. The groom was assisted by his brother, P. J. Maloney, of Walkerton.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pendant see with pearls; to the bridesmaid a cameo pendant, and to the groomsman a handsome stick pin.

The wedding party motored to the home of the bride's grandmother, where a dainty dejeuner was served to over a hundred guests. The afternoon and evening were spene in games and dancing.

The bride was the recipient of many costly and beautiful presents, showing the high esteem in which the couple are held by their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Maloney will reside in Ennismore.

ITALY HAS NOW DECLARED WAR ON BULGARIA

FIERCE BATTLE RAGING BETWEEN SERBS AND BULGARS

To Push the War At Dardanelles

Inference of Irish Times From Appointment of Successor to Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton

DUBLIN, Oct. 19.—From Attorney-General Sir Edward Carson's resignation from the British cabinet and Gen. Sir Chas. Munro's appointment as successor to Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton in command of the forces on the Gallipoli Peninsula, the Irish Times inferred to-day that the London Government means to push the war at the Dardanelles, as well as elsewhere, with renewed vigour.

The Irish Independent expressed the opinion that Carson's resignation will not make him a popular idol, inasmuch as he quit just when it was most necessary for the cabinet to maintain a united front.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF HASTINGS PARISH FITTINGLY CELEBRATED

Citizens of All Denominations Joined in Making Event a Credit to Hastings--Occasion Marked by Presence of His Grace the Archbishop of Ottawa and His Lordship Bishop O'Brien.

On Friday, Oct. 15th, there was celebrated in Hastings, the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the R. C. Church, Our Lady of Mount Carmel. The event was celebrated in such a manner, as to reflect the greatest credit, not alone, on the Pastor, Rev. C. S. Bretherton, upon whose shoulders the burden of the work fell, but on the inhabitants of the Village, at large, irrespective of religious denominations. Nothing that the Protestants of Hastings could do, was left undone, to help their Catholic neighbours to make the jubilee a success. They closed their shops for the forenoon, decorated their homes and streets, assisted at the Presbytery, and attended in large numbers at the solemn service held in the Church. The Village Council, headed by Reeve Fowls, was then in a body, and occupied front seats. Two of the reverend clergy and most of the business men of the village were also present. The Village band, an organization of no mean ability, paid a visit to the Presbytery on Thursday evening, after His Grace, the Archbishop of Ottawa, and His Lordship Bishop O'Brien arrived, and enlivened the scene for upwards of two hours. The Presbytery lawn and church were beautifully and tastefully decorated and illuminated with electric lights of all shades of colour, while British and Irish flags, with the Papal flag in the centre, ornamented the facade of the church. A cordial welcome was accorded the venerable Archbishop of Ottawa, when at 3.30 o'clock Mr. Pat. Howard's elegant car drew up in front of the Church. Here a large number of the parishioners, together with the school children, waving British flags, were arranged in double file, to greet the saintly prelate, and to show their appreciation of his kindly visit to Hastings. At the evening services, held in the Church, the Pastor read the following address of welcome:

To His Grace, the Most Rev. C. H. Gauthier, Archbishop of Ottawa:

May it please Your Grace,—In the name of our beloved Bishop, in my own name, as Pastor of this Parish, and in the name of my congregation, I bid you a most hearty welcome to our midst.

Your presence here to-day, on this occasion of Jubilee, is to us, only another proof of the Apostolic zeal which has ever blessed your long and fruitful life—a distinguished mark of honour, alike to me and to my people, and will ever remain an outstanding epoch in the history of this parish.

To some of us, at least, you are no stranger, but most of those who know Your Grace, as the young, active, energetic priest, labouring and toiling, in this backward position of the Lord's vineyard, have already received the crown of their reward.

Of those who were present, and assisted at the dedication of this Church, fifty years ago, Your Grace alone, among that coterie of saintly, revered men, is able to be present here to-day. Thankful, indeed, we are to Almighty God for the countless mercies and graces He has bestowed upon you; thankful for the high, holy, and responsible offices He has called upon you to fulfil, and thankful, above all, for the prudence, gentleness and ability with which you have guided the destinies of two of the most important dioceses in Canada. In the diocese of Kingston, when Your Grace laboured so long and so zealously, both as priest and archbishop, you have won a place in the minds and hearts of priests and people alike, which neither time nor separation can efface, while in the still larger diocese of Ottawa your many acts of Christian charity, patience and beneficience are royal and registered in a land beyond man's sceptre. Proud then are we to welcome you here to-day, and proud to have you offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in this Church, at the dedication of which you assisted, just fifty years ago.

In reply, His Grace thanked the pastor and people for their very warm and truly Irish reception,—recalled the scenes of fifty years ago—spoke in terms of highest praise of the bishop and priests who were present with him at the dedication of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church. He referred in glowing terms to the beauty of the Church to-day, its splendid Presbytery and elegant lawn. He reviewed the happy days he spent as Bishop of Kingston and Metropolitan of Peterborough diocese—of his sincere attachment for the late Bishop O'Connor—of his admiration for the young, active and zealous Bishop of Peterborough to-day. Nor did he forget to remind his hearers of his love and devotion for the priests and people of Ottawa diocese all of whom had done their best to make his life and labours there as pleasant and agreeable as possible. Being French and Scotch by birth His Grace has inherited the characteristics of both nationalities. He possesses in an eminent degree that "naivete" and "savoir faire" which marks the refined, educated, French gentleman, while his Scotch blood is evidenced by prudence, solidity and foresight.

On Friday morning, at 10 o'clock His Grace celebrated Pontificial High Mass, assisted by Monsignor Murray parish priest of Cobourg, as high priest; Rev. P. J. McGuire, parish priest of Downeyville, as deacon, and Rev. V. McFadden, parish priest of Wooler, as sub-deacon, while Rev. M. J. McGuire, parish priest of Douro and Rev. C. J. Phelan, rector of the Cathedral, acted as deacons of honour. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien who also honoured the occasion with his presence, occupied the episcopal throne, assisted by Dean McColl, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien. Rev. P. J. Galvin was master of ceremonies.

At the close of the mass, Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, parish priest of Ennismore, preached the jubilee sermon, in his usual clear, forcible and eloquent style. He spoke of the Church, its use and value to man—of the Church as the House of Prayer—the school of divine truth—the shrine of divine grace, and the house of eternal hope—and concluded a splendid address by recounting the labours of the past and present pastors of Hastings parish, and especially the labours of his own beloved pastor, Rev. John Quirk, who built the Church, and for thirty-three years ministered to the spiritual wants of the Catholics, not alone of Hastings but for many years of Campbellford, Warkworth, Norwood and the surrounding country. He thanked, on behalf of the pastor, the good Protestants of Hastings for the spirit of charity and goodfellowship which were evidenced on every side, and which would live and bear fruit in the hearts of generations yet unborn. He congratulated the pastor on the success of the jubilee and the marked tokens of respect and reverence shown by the people of Hastings, irrespective of race or religion.

His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, added a few timely and well-chosen words to those of the preacher. He expressed his deep appreciation of the visit of His Grace to the diocese of Peterborough, and thanked the good people of Hastings for their kindness and ready assistance, and offered his personal congratulations to the pastor, on the unqualified success of the Golden Jubilee of the Parish.

After mass a very sumptuous banquet was served in the spacious dining room of the Presbytery, at which Mr. and Mrs. Popham assisted in waiting on the reverend guests.

On Saturday morning, at 9 o'clock, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien celebrated a solemn requiem mass for the repose of the souls of Father Quirk and the deceased pastors of the parish. He was assisted by Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, as deacon, and Rev. V. McFadden, as sub-deacon, while Rev. P. J. Galvin acted as master of ceremonies.

General Joffre Bends Over His Map 22 Hours

Directs Champagne Battle Almost Twice Around Clock Without Relaxing

PARIS, Oct. 19.—A Paris newspaper gives an account of how General Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French forces, directed the operations during the battle in the Champagne region.

Taking a post close to the front, in an inn keeper's kitchen, where a telephone had been installed, General Joffre, bending over a large scale map, listened to officers at the telephone, at intervals giving his orders in an absolutely calm voice.

In this position, the newspaper account says, General Joffre remained longer than twenty-four hours—from nine o'clock in the morning until half past seven o'clock the next morning—neither eating nor drinking during the whole time. At the end of that period after marking certain places on the map, he put down his pencil and said: 'It is over. Let us go take a bite.'"

According to a Havas News Agency despatch from Geneva, the German troops bearing the brunt of the attack by the French along the Champagne front are not a homogeneous force, and their condition and equipment are far from being up to the standard. These assertions, the despatch states, are based on information gathered by Colonel Feyler the Swiss military writer, from persons who have been at the front. This shows, it is added, that the forces on the German side in the Champagne are made up of fifty-six regiments hastily formed from scattered units of many other regiments and various corps.

"A complete list of these is given, showing a heterogeneous assemblage of regulars, Landwehr, reservists and guards, some of whom had just arrived from the Russian front, the guards going directly from their trains to the firing line."

Don't Do It.

Solomon Isaac was very ill, and the doctor was paying him a visit. "Veff doctor," said Solomon, "if I've got to die, I die contented. My life is insured for five thousand pounds." "Well," remarked the doctor, I think I can keep you alive for a week longer." "Don't do it," doctor," said Solomon; "the premium comes due the day after to-morrow."

Farmers Asked To Contribute

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—"Don't accept a contribution of twenty-five cents from a farmer with a large farm," was the advice given by Geo. S. Henry, M.P.P., at the meeting of school trustees held in York Township Chambers on Saturday afternoon to complete arrangements for the Red Cross contribution on Trafalgar Day. "York township has 50,000 acres of land, and a contribution of fifty cents an acre would mean $25,000—not an exorbitant contribution from this municipality. The people from the front of the township have given their husbands, sons, and fathers, their own flesh and blood, which is infinitely more than money. The farmers have profited by the war. Now, let them give liberally, and in that way do their bit."

Several of the trustees told that their sections were entering heartily into the scheme, and had already arranged for meeting and the prosecution of the canvass. Meetings at Runnymede and Fairbank to-night will be addressed by Mr. Henry, and an effort will be made to secure speakers for other meetings to be held in the township schools.

BALANCE FAVOURS RUSSIA, DECLARES WAR MINISTER

PARIS, Oct. 19.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Petit Parisien in a despatch declares that General Alexei A. Polivanoff, the Russian Minister of War, stated that during the last month the German offensive has been checked along the whole front, and that every step in advance has been costing the invaders more than did every verst (two-thirds of a mile) during August, while at many important points the Russian army is progressing.

General Polivanoff declared the state of equilibrium has thus been broken slightly in favour of the Russians, whose progress, he said, could only go on improving.

He stared. "Has she ever said anything to you, old chap, that would lead you to believe she's keen about him?"

I temporized. "She's keen about somebody, my son. That's as far as I will go."

"Then it must be Amberdale. I'm on to her all right, all right. I know women. She's in love, hang it all! If you know a thing about 'em you can spot the symptoms without the X-rays. I've been hoping against hope, old man. I don't want her to marry again."

times in my short career, but for the life of me I cannot understand what attraction it possesses that could induce people to go there for luncheon and then spend a whole afternoon lolling about the place. But that seems to have been precisely what the countess and his lordship did on the day of my arrival at the Homestead. The "other chap," Skelly, came riding home alone at 3 o'clock. She did not return until nearly 6. By that time I was in a state of suppressed fury that almost drove me to the railway station with a single and you might say childish object in view.

I had a pleasant visit with Mrs. Titus, who seemed overjoyed to see me. In fact, I had luncheon with her. Mr. Titus, it appeared, never ate luncheon. He had a dread of typhoid, I believe, and as he already possessed gout and insomnia and an intermittent tendency to pain in his abdomen and couldn't drink anything alcoholic or eat anything starchy I found myself wondering what he really did for a living.

Mrs. Titus talked a great deal about Lord Amberdale. She was most tiresome after the first half hour, but I must say that the luncheon was admirable. I happened to be hungry. Having quite made up my mind that Aline was going to marry Amberdale, I proceeded to upset the theory that a man in love is a creature without gastronomical aspirations by vulgarly stuffing myself with half a lamb chop, a slice of buttered bread and nine pickles.

Along about 5 o'clock I went to my room. I daresay I was sulking. A pe-lite bellboy tapped on my door at last past 6. He presented a small envelope to me, thanked me three or four times and as an after thought announced that there was to be an answer, whereupon I read the countess' note with a magnificently unreadable face.

I cleared my throat and (I think) squared my shoulders somewhat as a soldier does when he is being commended for valor and said:

"Present my compliments to the countess and say that Mr. Smart will be down in five minutes."

The boy stared. "The—the what, sir?"

"The what?" I demanded.

"I mean the who, sir."

"The countess, the lady who sent you up with this note."

"Wasn't no countess sent me up dyer, boss. It was Miss Tarnoway."

Somehow staggered, I managed to wave my hand comprehensively.

"Never mind. Just say that I'll be down in two minutes."

He grinned. "I reckon I'd better hustle or you'll beat me down, boss."

• • • • • • • •

She was still in her riding habit when I found her alone in the parlor of the Titus suit.

I give you my word my heart almost stopped beating. I've never seen any one so lovely as she was at that moment—never. I repeat. Her hair, blown by the kind November winds, strayed—but no! I cannot begin to define the loveliness of her. There was a warm, rich glow in her cheeks and a light in her eyes that actually bewildered me, and more than that I am not competent to utter.

"You have come at last," she said, and her voice sounded very far off, although I was lifting her ungloved hand to my lips. She clinched my fingers tightly. I remember that and also that my hand shook violently and that my face felt pale.

I think I said that I had come at last. She took my other hand in hers and, drawing dangerously close to me, said:

"I do not expect to be married for at least a year, John."

"I—I congratulate you," I stammered foolishly.

"I have a feeling that it isn't decent for one to marry inside of two years after one has been divorced."

"How is Rosemary?" I murmured.

"You are in love with me, aren't you, John, dear?"

"Goo—good heaven!" I gasped.

"I know you are. That's why I am so sure of myself. Is it asking too much of you to marry me in a year from"—

I haven't the faintest notion how long afterward it was that I asked her what was to become of that poor, unlucky Lord Amberdale.

"He's a dear, and he is going to marry a bred-in-the-bone countess next January. You will like him, because he is every bit as much in love with his real countess as you are with a sham one. He is a bird of your feather. And now don't you want to come with me to see Rosemary?"

"Rosemary," I murmured, as in a dream—a luxurious, lotos born dream.

She took my arm and advanced with me into a room adjoining the parlor. As we passed through the door she suddenly squeezed my arm very tightly and laid her head against my shoulder.

We were in a small sitting room, confronting Jasper Titus, his wife and his tiny granddaughter, who was ready for bed.

"You won't have to worry about me any longer, daddy, dear," said Aline, her voice suddenly breaking.

"Well, I'll be—well, well, well!" cried my late victim of the links. "Is this the way the wind blows?"

I was perfectly dumb. My face was scarlet. My dazzled eyes saw nothing but the fine, aristocratic features of Aline's mother. She was leaning slightly forward in her chair, and a slow but unmistakably joyous smile was creeping into her face.

"Aline!" she cried, and Aline went to her.

Jasper Titus led Rosemary up to me.

"Kiss the gentleman, kiddie," said he huskily, lifting the little one up to me.

She gave a sudden shriek of recognition, and I took her in my arms.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed I, without the slightest idea of what I was doing or why I did it. Sometimes I wonder if there has ever been any insanity in our family. I know there have been fools, for I have my Uncle Silas' word for it.

Mr. Titus picked up the newspaper he had been reading.

"Listen to this, Allie. It will interest you. It says here that our friend Tarnoway is going to marry that fool of a Cincinnati girl we were talking about the other day. I know her father, but I've never met her mother. Old Bob Thackery has got millions, but he's only got one daughter. What a blamed shame!"

• • • • • • • •

It must be perfectly obvious to you, kind reader, that I am going to marry Aline Tarnoway, in spite of all my professed opposition to marrying a divorcee. I argued the whole matter out with myself, but not until I was irrevocably committed. She says she needs me. Well, isn't that enough? In fact, I am now trying my best to get her to shorten the probationary period. She has taken off three months. God bless her, but I still hope for a further and more generous reduction—for good behavior!

What Is The Ideal Age For Marriage?

Man Said Best Age For Women is Eighteen; Woman Says Twenty-five.

"No man should marry a girl more than 16 years younger than himself.

"No woman should marry a man more than eight years younger than herself.

The ideal marriage is when the man is 21 and the girl 16. Couples who wed at 21 and 28 have had too much chance to become cynical and worldly.

Thus and so reasoned Dr. Albert E. Mowry, of Chicago, before the recent Purity Congress, in San Francisco. A friend undertook to discuss the dictum with Mrs. Sarah Christopher, for some years trustee of the National Christain League for Promotion of Purity, and who is described as still retaining her sence of humor and human nature.

These are the matrimonial age limits which Mrs. Christopher suggests.

A man should always be from 5 to 20 years older than the woman he marries.

The woman who marries a man younger than herself is robbing the cradle.

In the ideal marriage the girl should be at least 25 before she becomes a wife, the man at least 30 before he assumes the role of husband.

Shakespeare Her Authority.

"Even Shakespeare tells us that a woman should marry a man years older than herself," she exclaimed. "Don't you remember the passage in "Twelfth Night" which protests vehemently against a bride who is very near the age of her prospective husband," and, pulling a little green volume from her bookcase, Mrs. Christopher read with gusto:

"Too old, by heaven! Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; o wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart:
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves
Our fancies are more giddy and infirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and won Than women's are."

"Shakespeare probably knew what he was talking about," she commented. "His wife, Anne Hathaway was several years older than himself and his marriage is reputed to have been unhappy. Dr. Mowry thinks that a woman should not marry a man more than eight years younger than herself. If she takes one that much her junior she's robbing the cradle. And why should she want to do it. The average man is a fool until he's 30."

"I think it was Carlyle who suggested that society protect itself from young men between the ages of 18 and 26 by supplying them with all the necessities of life, but meanwhile keeping them under barrels," observed her friend.

"Good idea," approved Mrs. Christopher. "And when the 26-year-olds proved too impossible we could stop up the bungs!

The Girl's Age.

"How, moreover, can any thoughtful person suggest that a girl of 18 should make the most important decision of her life, the choice of a husband? At that age she is looking for a combination of Apollo, Solomon and Croesus. She ends by eloping with the plumber's assistant—if she is foolish enough to elope with anybody. Generally speaking, the intelligent woman of 30 wouldn't touch with a 10-foot pole the boy she worshipped in high school, wouldn't pay for burying him except for the joy of getting rid of him.

"I am opposed absolutely to early marriages," Mrs. Christopher continued with earnestness. "They are and must be based almost altogether on physical attraction, for between 16 and 28 the physicial lure is stronger. But to be ideal the union between a man and a woman must be a 'marriage of true minds.' That can only come after the minds have developed; after, that is, the period of extreme youth. Twenty-five is the very youngest age at which a girl should marry; 30, the lowest limit for a man.

Reason for Divorce.

"So often people wonder why any couple is divorced after 10, 20, 25 years of married life. I don't wonder at it at all. They have simply reached the limit of their endurance. They married when they were too young to know that they were not suited to each other. They were too young for tolerance, for self-control. The quarrels were little ones at first, but they grew more serious and the gulf between widened constantly. They grew apart instead of growing together and in my opinion the former is much more likely to happen than the latter when very young persons marry.

"Glitter dominates the choice in early marriages. The bridegroom of 21 thinks he's caught a star—and wakes up to find that he has box of chocolates tied with silver gilt.

"Do you remember how George Meredith scores the early marriage?" broke off Mrs. Christopher. "To anchor the heart ere we have half traversed the world is youth's foolishness. We find the one fitted for us after hard buffeting, when our madness has misshaped our destiny, our lot is cast."

"The argument which the advocates of early marriage consider most important is that it safeguards morality," suggested the friend.

"Any one who gets married in order not to go to the devil will get there just the same," she retorted. "To advocate or to use marriage as a safety-valve is to insult its highest ideals. The principle of self-control instilled in boys and girls will safeguard morality better than the prescription of early marriage.

"The best matrimonial motto I know is, 'Look before you leap.' The girl of 18 and the boy of 21 will do neither."—Manitoba Free Press.

ITALY HAS NOW DECLARED WAR ON BULGARIA

FIERCE BATTLE RAGING BETWEEN SERBS AND BULGARS

To Push the War At Dardanelles

Inference of Irish Times From Appointment of Successor to Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton

DUBLIN, Oct. 19.—From Attorney-General Sir Edward Carson's resignation from the British cabinet and Gen. Sir Chas. Munro's appointment as successor to Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton in command of the forces on the Gallipoli Peninsula, the Irish Times inferred to-day that the London Government means to push the war at the Dardanelles, as well as elsewhere, with renewed vigour.

The Irish Independent expressed the opinion that Carson's resignation will not make him a popular idol, inasmuch as he quit just when it was most necessary for the cabinet to maintain a united front.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF HASTINGS PARISH FITTINGLY CELEBRATED

Citizens of All Denominations Joined in Making Event a Credit to Hastings--Occasion Marked by Presence of His Grace the Archbishop of Ottawa and His Lordship Bishop O'Brien.

On Friday, Oct. 15th, there was celebrated in Hastings, the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the R. C. Church, Our Lady of Mount Carmel. The event was celebrated in such a manner, as to reflect the greatest credit, not alone, on the Pastor, Rev. C. S. Bretherton, upon whose shoulders the burden of the work fell, but on the inhabitants of the Village, at large, irrespective of religious denominations. Nothing that the Protestants of Hastings could do, was left undone, to help their Catholic neighbours to make the jubilee a success. They closed their shops for the forenoon, decorated their homes and streets, assisted at the Presbytery, and attended in large numbers at the solemn service held in the Church. The Village Council, headed by Reeve Fowls, was then in a body, and occupied front seats. Two of the reverend clergy and most of the business men of the village were also present. The Village band, an organization of no mean ability, paid a visit to the Presbytery on Thursday evening, after His Grace, the Archbishop of Ottawa, and His Lordship Bishop O'Brien arrived, and enlivened the scene for upwards of two hours. The Presbytery lawn and church were beautifully and tastefully decorated and illuminated with electric lights of all shades of colour, while British and Irish flags, with the Papal flag in the centre, ornamented the facade of the church. A cordial welcome was accorded the venerable Archbishop of Ottawa, when at 3.30 o'clock Mr. Pat. Howard's elegant car drew up in front of the Church. Here a large number of the parishioners, together with the school children, waving British flags, were arranged in double file, to greet the saintly prelate, and to show their appreciation of his kindly visit to Hastings. At the evening services, held in the Church, the Pastor read the following address of welcome:

To His Grace, the Most Rev. C. H Gauthier, Archbishop of Ottawa:

May it please Your Grace,—In the name of our beloved Bishop, in my own name, as Pastor of this Parish, and in the name of my congregation, I bid you a most hearty welcome to our midst.

Your presence here to-day, on this occasion of Jubilee, is to us, only another proof of the Apostolic zeal which has ever blessed your long and fruitful life—a distinguished mark of honour, alike to me and to my people, and will ever remain an outstanding epoch in the history of this parish.

To some of us, at least, you are no stranger, but most of those who know Your Grace, as the young, active, energetic priest, labouring and toiling, in this backward position of the Lord's vineyard, have already received the crown of their reward.

Of those who were present, and assisted at the dedication of this Church, fifty years ago, Your Grace alone, among that coterie of saintly, revered men, is able to be present here to-day. Thankful, indeed, we are to Almighty God for the countless mercies and graces He has bestowed upon you; thankful for the high, holy, and responsible offices He has called upon you to fulfil, and thankful, above all, for the prudence, gentleness and ability with which you have guided the destinies of two of the most important dioceses in Canada. In the diocese of Kingston, when Your Grace laboured so long and so zealously, both as priest and archbishop, you have won a place in the minds and hearts of priests and people alike, which neither time nor separation can efface, while in the still larger diocese of Ottawa your many acts of Christian charity, patience and beneficiences are royal and registered in a land beyond man's sceptre. Proud then are we to welcome you here to-day, and proud to have you offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in this Church, at the dedication of which you assisted, just fifty years ago.

In reply, His Grace thanked the pastor and people for their very warm and truly Irish reception,—recalled the scenes of fifty years ago—spoke in terms of highest praise of the bishop and priests who were present with him at the dedication of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church. He referred in glowing terms to the beauty of the Church to-day, its splendid Presbytery and elegant lawn. He reviewed the happy days he spent as Bishop of Kingston and Metropolitan of Peterborough diocese—of his sincere attachment for the late Bishop O'Connor—of his admiration for the young, active and zealous Bishop of Peterborough to-day. Nor did he forget to remind his hearers of his love and devotion for the priests and people of Ottawa diocese all of whom had done their best to make his life and labours there as pleasant and agreeable as possible. Being French and Scotch by birth His Grace has inherited the characteristics of both nationalities. He possesses in an eminent degree that "naivete" and "savoir faire" which marks the refined, educated, French gentleman, while his Scotch blood is evidenced by prudence, solidity and foresight.

On Friday morning, at 10 o'clock His Grace celebrated Pontificial High Mass, assisted by Monsignor Murray parish priest of Cobourg, as high priest; Rev. P. J. McGuire, parish priest of Downeyville, as deacon, and Rev. V. McFadden, parish priest of Wooler, as sub-deacon, while Rev. M. J. McGuire, parish priest of Douro and Rev. C. J Phelan, rector of the Cathedral, acted as deacons of hon our. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien who also honoured the occasion with his presence, occupied the episcopal throne, assisted by Dean McColl, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. P. J. Galvin was master of ceremonies.

At the close of the mass, Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, parish priest of Ennismore, preached the jubilee sermon, in his usual clear, forcible and eloquent style. He spoke of the Church, its use and value to man—of the Church as the House of Prayer—the school of divine truth—the shrine of divine grace, and the house of eternal hope—and concluded a splendid address by recounting the labours of the past and present pastors of Hastings parish, and especially the labours of his own beloved pastor, Rev. John Quirk, who built the Church, and for thirty-three years ministered to the spiritual wants of the Catholics, not alone of Hastings but for many years of Campbellford, Warkworth, Norwood and the surrounding country. He thanked, on behalf of the pastor, the good Protestants of Hastings for the spirit of charity and goodfellowship which were evidenced on every side, and which would live and bear fruit in the hearts of generations yet unborn. He congratulated the pastor on the success of the jubilee and the marked tokens of respect and reverence shown by the people of Hastings, irrespective of race or religion.

His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, added a few timely and well-chosen words to those of the preacher. He expressed his deep appreciation of the visit of His Grace to the diocese of Peterborough, and thanked the good people of Hastings for their kindness and ready assistance, and offered his personal congratulations to the pastor, on the unqualified success of the Golden Jubilee of the Parish.

After mass a very sumptuous banquet was served in the spacious dining room of the Presbytery, at which Mr. and Mrs. Popham assisted in waiting on the reverend guests.

On Saturday morning, at 9 o'clock, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien celebrated a solemn requiem mass for the repose of the souls of Father Quirk and the deceased pastors of the parish. He was assisted by Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, as deacon, and Rev. V. McFadden, as sub-deacon, while Rev. P. J. Galvin acted as master of ceremonies.

BALANCE FAVOURS RUSSIA, DECLARES WAR MINISTER

PARIS, Oct. 19.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Petit Parisien in a despatch declares that General Alexei A. Polivanoff, the Russian Minister of War, stated that during the last month the German offensive has been checked along the whole front, and that every step in advance has been costing the invaders more than did every verst (two-thirds of a mile) during August, while at many important points the Russian army is progressing.

General Polivanoff declared the state of equilibrium has thus been broken slightly in favour of the Russians, whose progress, he said, could only go on improving.

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal Is A Food, Not a Fraud

Many so-called cereal foods are frauds. To prove it, try to live entirely upon them for a few days. Many live entirely upon Roman Meal. A recent letter from California says: Dear Dr. Jackson: A friend of mine has lived upon Roman Meal for thirteen months. His case had been pronounced hopeless. He is now in perfect health. No fraud here. Roman Meal is scientifically balanced by an expert dietitian. It's the perfect food, and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor. Make it in porridge, pancakes, gems. At grocers', 10 and 25 cents.

Many Positions Carrying Large Salaries

are open to-day to men in every walk of life. But the men must possess vigorous bodies and keen, active minds.

Success-making mental and physical activity relies largely on right living wherein the right kind of food plays a most vital part.

In many cases the daily diet lacks certain of Nature's elements essential to energizing and upbuilding the mental and physical faculties. Most white flour products, such as white bread and many other commonly used foods are in the same class.

A food especially designed to offset this lack—

Grape-Nuts

Grape-Nuts is thoroughly processed, ready to serve from the package, fresh, crisp and delicious. Then, too, there's a wonderful return of the power to "do" and to "be" for the small energy required in its digestion.

ONE AUSTRIAN ARMY HELD IN RUSSIA

ATHENS, Oct. 19, via Paris.—According to information from a diplomatic source here the army of General von Linsingen, which was originally intended to be thrown by the Teutonic allies into the Serbian theatre of war, was forced to return to the eastern field of operations to face a successful advance of the Russians.

General Joffre Bends Over His Map 22 Hours

Directs Champagne Battle Almost Twice Around Clock Without Relaxing

PARIS, Oct. 19.—A Paris newspaper gives an account of how General Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French forces, directed the operations during the battle in the Champagne region.

Taking a post close to the front, in an inn keeper's kitchen, where a telephone had been installed, General Joffre, bending over a large scale map, listened to officers at the telephone, at intervals giving his orders in an absolutely calm voice.

In this position, the newspaper account says, General Joffre remained longer than twenty-four hours—from nine o'clock in the morning until half past seven o'clock the next morning—neither eating nor drinking during the whole time. At the end of that period after marking certain places on the map, he put down his pencil and said: "It is over. Let us go take a bite."

According to a Havas News Agency despatch from Geneva, the German troops bearing the brunt of the attack by the French along the Champagne front are not a homogeneous force, and their condition and equipment are far from being up to the standard. These assertions, the despatch states, are based on information gathered by Colonel Feyler the Swiss military writer, from persons who have been at the front. This shows, it is added, that the forces on the German side in the Champagne are made up of fifty-six regiments hastily formed from scattered units of many other regiments and various corps.

"A complete list of these is given, showing a heterogeneous assemblage of regulars, Landwehr, reservists and guards, some of whom had just arrived from the Russian front, the guards going directly from their trains to the firing line."

Don't Do It.

Solomon Isaac was very ill, and the doctor was paying him a visit. "Well doctor," said Solomon, "if I've got to die, I die contented. My life is insured for five thousand pounds." "Well," remarked the doctor, I think I can keep you alive for a week longer." "Don't do it," doctor," said Solomon; "the premium comes due the day after to-morrow."

Farmers Asked To Contribute

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—"Don't accept a contribution of twenty-five cents from a farmer with a large farm," was the advice given by Geo. S. Henry, M.P.P., at the meeting of school trustees held in York Township Chambers on Saturday afternoon to complete arrangements for the Red Cross contribution on Trafalgar Day. "York township has 56,000 acres of land, and a contribution of fifty cents an acre would mean $28,000—not an exorbitant contribution from this municipality. The people from the front of the township have given their husbands, sons, and fathers, their own flesh and blood, which is infinitely more than money. The farmers have profited by the war. Now, let them give liberally, and in that way do their bit."

Several of the trustees told that their sections were entering heartily into the scheme, and had already arranged for meeting and the prosecution of the canvass. Meetings at Runnymede and Fairbank to-night will be addressed by Mr Henry, and an effort will be made to secure speakers for other meetings to be held in the township schools.

Rumour That Prince Of Wales Shot In France A Falsehood

Was at Windsor Castle When Incident Was Said to Have Occurred—King George is Intent on Victory, Will Not Agree to Inconclusive Peace

Cosmo Hamilton, the English dramatist, who for the last year has been an officer in the Royal Naval Aviation Corps and was held personally responsible for the safety of King George V. at Sandringham Palace during the Zeppelin raids, gave to a reporter many intimate details of the life of England's ruler under war conditions. He also said that the rumours of the Prince of Wales having been shot in France were untrue.

"When I left Liverpool on Sept. 29 by the American liner "New York," said Mr. Hamilton, "the Prince of Wales had just returned to his regiment in France, having been on a furlough and a visit to the King and Queen at Windsor Castle. On the day he is supposed to have been shot by the jealous husband of a French waitress near Ypres, the Prince was visiting the New Zealanders in the hospital outside of Windsor. He is a very keen soldier, and is not the type of young man who would spend his time flirting with a waitress. His training and home bringing-up were against that sort of thing, and, moreover, such conduct would displease his parents very much.

With regard to the report that King George had told Premier Asquith that he would abdicate the throne immediately if the war terminated by an inconclusive peace, Mr. Hamilton said he thought it was quite likely to have happened.

"The driveling 'wait and see' policy of the political hucksters in power under Asquith," he continued, "has been so stultifying that it may have given rise to the impression that the Government would agree to a peace of that kind. But the country would never consent to such a course, and it would cause a revolution.

"The people have paid 38 per cent. of their earnings for income tax, and every man is willing to do his duty, and die in defense of the country. The only clog on the nation is the party in power at Westminster, which has not improved much since the coalition. King George is a great little man, a sailor, and a soldier every inch of him. There is not much connected with the navy and the army that he does not know about.

Soldiers Fond of the King.

"When the war first started it was the magic name of Kitchener that caused thousands in England to enlist, but to-day the men in the trenches speak with affection of 'G. R.,' which is their pet name for the King.

"The Tommy Atkins of to-day differs from his predecessors. He is sober, intelligent, and attentive to his duties. His one object is to defeat the enemy at all cost. The new army has leveled all class distinctions, and you will find the son of the Baron sitting side by side in the trenches on equal footing with the son of a baker. Six years 'training were considered necessary by the War Office to make a good artillery officer, but the present war has shown us that more efficient officers can be turned out in six months. In the old days the cadets spent about three hours a day in studying and the rest of the time on pleasure jaunts. Young business men from banks, law offices, and counting houses have shown that six months of intense application, backed by a business education, is superior to the six years' course.

"Kitchener trampled on the newspapers, and it is the irony of fate that this is a newspaper war, because it was the newspapers which turned the corner for the Allies by forming the coalition government. That did not do much in itself, but the Munitions Department was formed and Lloyd-George was placed in full charge. Forty factories are turning out over 1,000,000 high-explosive shells a week, and Sir John French can now get all the ammunition he needs to carry on the fight in France and Flanders.

"Lord Northcliffe was a little rough perhaps in his treatment of Lord Kitchener, but it was not a time for exchanging pleasantries. The life of the nation was at stake and some drastic action had to be taken.

Kitchener's Way Obsolete.

"After Sir John French arrived in France he soon realised that the only way to answer the attacks of the enemy successfully was with high explosives. The Germans had spent forty years in studying war and knew what they were about. French sent to Kitchener six urgent messages for this kind of shell. The War Minister is an old-fashioned soldier and cannot change his ideas of warfare, which were quite good in his day. He replied that he had used shrapnel in Egypt and shrapnel in South Africa, with success, and he intended to send shrapnel to France. Von Donnop, who was absolutely fossilized, so far as modern artillery was concerned, of course agreed with his chief and nothing was done. Then the Commander in Chief of the British forces in the field decided upon a bold stroke and sent for Colonel Repington, the military critic of the Times and Daily Mail. Kitchener heard of it and wired to French asking why he had disobeyed his instructions by having a newspaper correspondent at the front. To this the General replied that Colonel Repington had come over to France as his personal guest. French showed the Colonel everything that was happening daily on the field, and the two spent a night visiting the trenches and watching the effect of the German shells. Then Repington returned to London and Lord Northcliffe fired the bomb which roused England."

Mr. Hamilton said the disaster in the Dardanelles, where two of his cousins have been wounded, was due to the failure of Greece to keep her word and enter the war. Winston Churchill sent the fleet to the Dardanelles to make the attack from the sea under the belief that Greece would back it up with her forces on land. The Queen of Greece is a sister of the German Emperor, and it was due to her influence over the King that he failed to live up to his promise.

"Sir Ian Hamilton is a good soldier," said Mr. Hamilton, "and from the letters I have received from relatives and friends among the officers, both navy and army, the strait will be forced before the rest of the year. There are 250,000 regulars in Egypt, an addition to another 200,000 New Zealanders and Territorials, and several batteries of Field Artillery.

Guarding the King.

With regard to his duties at Sandringham Palace early in the year Mr. Hamilton said:

"We left London with two 4.7 guns and two electric searchlights. The guard consisted of thirty-six men of the Royal Naval Aviation Corps under my command with a lieutenant as my aid. On our arrival at Sandringham we found a detachment of 250 Grenadier Guards commanded by Major Gilbert Hamilton, with Lord Stanley, son of the Earl of Derby. The guns were placed in position, one at each end of the palace with the searchlights on motor trucks about 300 yards away. As the guards had been billeted in the stables our chaps took up quarters in the village a mile from the palace gate. Among the thirty-six men in my detail I had fifteen baronets, who owned town and country houses with yachts and motor cars, two well-known surgeons from Harley Street, a clergyman who was the son of a Bishop, a professor of history at Oxford University, two painters, three architects, four lawyers, two young bankers, and the remainder were merchants and insurance and shipping brokers. All of them had all been well trained as gunners and gave up their incomes to earn forty cents a day without meals.

"The first day after we arrived the King invited the officers of the guard, including myself, to see the grounds, which had been laid out under the direction of King Edward VII. A portion of the garden was set apart for trees planted by distinguished personages. 'There, gentlemen,' said the King, 'is a tree planted by my grandmother, Queen Victoria. Here is one that was planted by the late King Christian of Denmark, and on the other side is the one that was placed by the Kaiser.' After a pause, the King added: 'You will see that it is crooked.'

"That was the only remark that I heard him make in reference to the German Emperor while I was on duty at Sandringham. He asked me about the men in my command, and when I told who they were he said, with tears in his eyes: 'This war has brought out the most sincere manifestations of patriotism. Please say how grateful I am to them all.'

"When we left London Kitchener instructed us to sit on the King's head if necessary to protect him from harm in the Zeppelin raid, but it was a difficult order to carry out, because he is absolutely fearless and would not hide in time of danger for any one.

"On the night of the first raid, the Zeppelin struck the east coast at Hunstanton, about nine miles from Sandringham. There was a low lying fog at the time, rising about thirty feet from the ground, which was very favourable for the raiders. Sir Charles Cust, the equerry-in-waiting, was in his bath when he heard his telephone ringing in his room and jumped out to answer it. While he was listening to the report from the commander of the station at Hunstanton, the King walked into his room and said 'What's up?'

"Sir Charles told him the Zeps were on their way, and the King replied, 'Well, I hope they go by before dinner without harming anybody.'

"Going out of the equerry's room, King George saw the electrician rushing along the corridor to shut off the lights, whereupon he called out: 'If you switch off a single light I will have you shot. I have had electric light at my dinner nearly all my life, and I am not going to do without it now, whether there are Zennepins or not.' As a result of this order, the palace was the only house showing lights within a radius of 100 miles during the raid. The Zeppelins passed within three miles of Sandringham Palace.

"Just after dinner a sergeant of the Grenadiers came up to me and reported that there were some 'Frank terrors' about. After a minute or so I perceived that he meant franctireurs, the French term for sharpshooters. I told him to have a corporal's guard ready to come at the double quick when I whistled twice, and I started out in the grounds to investigate. Loaded rifles in the hands of amateurs are dangerous, I thought, because one might go off accidentally and startle the soldiers on guard.

Even the Rector Had a Gun.

"The first man I found had a rifle in his hand and the pockets of his overcoat were bulging with cartridges. I said, 'You must give me that gun and go home. He replied in stern tones, 'I have been a friend of the King for twenty-four years and I am here to protect him with my life. I will not obey your order.'

"I repeated the command, and said that if he did not obey I would have him lashed to the wheel of a gun carriage until daylight. 'I have been a friend of the King for twenty-four years and I will not give up my gun,' he retorted in firm tones, so I blew my whistle, and then the guard came up. I ordered them to arrest the man and march him to the gun carriage. Just before we arrived there the Rector of Sandringham came along. He is a very high church person, indeed, and I saw that he had a gun under is coat. He admitted the fact, and said that he thought a minister of the gospel ought to do his share of duty in the hour of danger. Like his predecessor, who proved to be the schoolmaster, he refused to give up his rifle. After I had them placed with their backs to the big wheel of the gun carriage and they were about to spend the night standing in the wet grass they reluctantly surrendered their weapons.

Sentry Halts the King.

"In the meantime the King had put on his overcoat and started for a stroll through the grounds on his own account to see what was going on. He had not gone far in the fog before a Grenadier on sentry go challenged him with the words 'Halt! Who goes there?' There was no reply, and again he shouted 'Halt! Who goes there,' and, as no answer came to his challenge, he charged at the double with fixed bayonet toward the moving object until stopped by the magic words 'The King!'

"'Pass, King,' said the sentry. 'Why the 'ell didn't you sing out who ye was?'

"The King did not mind in the least, and laughed over the joke when he told us about it afterward in the smoking room."

Mr. Hamilton told of the affection of the Prince of Wales for his parents describing a scene that was enacted on one occasion when the young man was at home. He said:

"I saw Prince Albert bend over and kiss the Queen's hand and say 'Good night, madam' and then throw his arms around her neck, kiss her affectionately, and say 'Good night darling mother.' Then he went to the King and kissed his hand and said, 'Good night,' or' and afterward kissed him on both cheeks, and said 'Good night my dear father.'"

Mr. Hamilton said the war would be a long one, but the men of Great Britain would never give in, even if it took five years instead of three, to finish it.

He is staying at the Great Northern Hotel, in West Fifty-seventh Street, with his wife and two young children and will spend some time in this country looking after his plays.

HOPE.

Despond who will—I heard a voice exclaim,
Though fierce the assault, and shattered the defence,
It cannot be that Britain's social frame,
The glorious work of time and providence,
Before a flying season's rash pretence
Should fall; that She, whose virtue put to shame,
When Europe prostrate lay, the Conqueror's aim,
Should perish, self subverted.
Black and dense
The cloud is; but brimes that a day of doom
To Liberty? Her sun is up the while,
That orb whose beams round Saxon Alfred shone.
Then laugh, ye innocent Vales! ye streams sweep on
Nor let one willow of our heavenbiest Isle
Toss in the fawning wind, a mumbler plume.

THE IRISH DIVISIONS IN BRITAIN'S ARMY

(From London Chronicle.)

There are now two more Irish Divisions in England. They are here for their divisional training preparatory to starting for the front having come over within the past few weeks. There are the 16th Division and the 36th, or Ulster Division. In coming to England for their divisional training these divisions are following the course adopted in the case of the 10th (Irish) Division, which is now at the Dardanelles, where its battalions in the terrible fighting there have been covering themselves with distinction.

We think it well to say a word at this juncture about the Irish Divisions. The war, whether on the Western front or in the unprecedented fighting at Gallipoli, has proved again the astonishing enowment of the military spirit which the Irish race has received. But the political and international significance of forces of Irish Nationalists fighting for the Empire and known to the world as Irish forces is a new thing, and needs to the emphasized. We have always had Irish troops, enlisted soldiers, but this is the first time in history that the national sentiment of the Irish people of all classes at the summons of its political leaders, overcoming inherited prejudice and putting aside an old feud, has flung itself whole-heartedly, offering its best blood, into the cause of England. Mr. Redmond took a bold and noble resolution when at the moment of the declaration of war he bespoke this great act of faith and loyalty on behalf of the Irish people. If we would measure the service rendered to the Empire by Mr Redmond in that course it is not in Ireland alone, that seat of Imperial weakness transformed into a strong bulwark, but away in the vast populations of the United States and throughout the self-governing Colonies of the Empire, where the influence of the Irish race is something which only those who have travelled there can appreciate, that we must study it.

Obviously this momentous revulsion was not brought about without some risks and perils on Mr. Redmond's part. It was a delicate as well as a great operation, and it needs all the collateral help and encouragement that can be given. We commend this consideration to the Government in their dealings with the Irish Divisions. It would be a most perilous mistake if there were any lack of understanding and generous sympathy in the treatment of these corps. They have indeed been allowed to have some causes of complaint. Happily, the 10th Division, which has scattered on its arrival at the Dardanelles, has now been reconstituted. The break-up of the 16th Division which also seemed imminent at one time, has likewise been averted; and, as we have said, it is now training as a unit in England. But other things complained of in regard to this 16th Division have not yet been put right.

Nobody among the Nationalists claims for it such exceptional treatment as has been accorded to the gallant Ulster Division; but it is well to refer to that treatment so that the contrast may be realised. For the first time in the history of the British Army a division has been formed on a religious and political test. Whether it was wisely or unwisely done, we do not now discuss; but the fact is that not a single Catholic is allowed into that division, and from its commander and brigadier-general down to its N. C. O's every one of its officers is in religious and political sympathy with its men. In the 16th Division on the other hand, 85 per cent. of whose rank and file are Catholics and Nationalists, there are not 10 per cent. of the officers of the same religion as the men, and none of the brigadiers is even an Irishman.

The Nationalist leaders ask for no religious or political tests. The ranks of the 16th and the 10th Irish Division and the contrast with that of the Ulster Division has done harm and an injury to recruiting. And Mr. Redmond does most reasonably request, as a guarantee to the Catholic Nationalist of the South of Ireland, which would help to remove the injurious impression that there should be amongst the higher officers of the 16th Division at least one or two known to be in sympathy with the religious and popular sentiment of the troops of which the division is practically altogether composed. One of the most valuable results of satisfying this natural feeling will be that, by giving a sense of equality of treatment, it will conduce to the best sort of feeling between the other Irish Divisions and their comrades of the Ulster Division. One day would it be too much to hope, for the sake both of the military and Imperial significance of the fact, to see these three Irish Divisions serving together as one Army Corps?

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sensitive Lover

By SARAH BAXTER

Barnard was walking the floor. When a man walks the floor with a knit brow it is evident there is something on his mind. And there was something on Barnard's mind—a good deal, in fact. He was a worshiper of Miss Brayton, and Miss Brayton was very ill. Barnard had heard that the doctors were desirous of making the experiment of a transfusion of blood, but had not then for found any hearty person who was willing to give up his or her blood for the purpose.

Barnard had offered himself to Miss Brayton, and she had refused him. He was now ready to give her his blood or his life, if necessary, but would not this be placing her under an obligation which might cause her to reconsider her refusal? It seemed to him like taking an unfair advantage of her; that it would be an obtrusion, an ungracious act, rendering him liable to a charge of trying to win her by unfair means. Besides, Barnard had always said that unless the girl he wanted wanted him, and that very badly, he didn't want her.

How would it do for him to give her his blood without her knowing from whom the gift came? Barnard stopped short in his walk and tugged at his mustache. Then he took up his hat, crammed it down on his head and hurried away to Miss Brayton's physician.

After an interview it was settled that the invalid should receive Barnard's blood without knowing it. This could be done by performing the operation in a room dimly lighted, with Barnard's face covered. No one but the doctor and the couple operated on need be present, and the identity of the blood given need not be divulged.

The operation was performed, and Miss Brayton regained her health and strength. Barnard had the satisfaction of having saved her life, but saw no more evidence of a predisposition for him than before. Indeed, it was not long after the operation that he heard she was engaged to a man whom he had feared as a rival. This threw Barnard into despondency.

One evening at a young persons' gathering, at which Barnard, Miss Brayton and her fiance, Mortlake, were present, Barnard heard a young lady near him say that there was a very pretty romance between Miss Brayton and Mr. Mortlake. Barnard pricked up his ears, but failed to learn what the romance was. But a week later he met a friend who asked him why he had not got in ahead of Mortlake when Miss Brayton was ill and offer her his blood. Thus it came out that Mortlake had saved his fiancee's life.

This was a romance with a vengeance. Mortlake had undoubtedly won the girl by claiming to have saved her life at the risk of his own.

That evening Barnard was walking the floor in a more disgruntled state of mind than before. His rival had beaten him by a lie, and he was not in a position to set the matter right. True, he had only to refer the matter to the surgeon who performed the operation, but this would be interfering between a girl and her lover—a dog in the manger business that was far beneath a man of Barnard's sensitive honor. On the other hand, what right had he to permit the girl he loved to marry a man who had lied to get her?

Barnard, being in a quandary, remained in a quandary. These sensitive fellows who keep themselves in the background are usually overlooked by girls who, did they know the facts, would most assuredly prefer them. Barnard was too refined in feeling to save either himself or the girl he loved.

But one morning Miss Brayton, being indisposed, sent for her physician. During his visit she told him that there was a certain secret which she knew he was pledged to keep, but she knew it all the same. Then she announced to him her engagement.

"I congratulate him," said the doctor. "He took considerable risk for you and deserves you."

"How he must have loved me!"

"I fancied he was doing it for love."

"It would have been ungracious for me to refuse him after the sacrifice he made for me."

"You have got a fine fellow. I took a fancy to Barnard the moment I laid eyes on him."

"Barnard!"

"Yes, Barnard. You're engaged to Barnard, aren't you?"

Miss Brayton's eyes grew as big as butter plates.

"Was it Mr. Barnard who saved me?"

"Why—yes—I thought you knew."

The cat was out of the bag.

Soon after this revelation Mortlake received a note from his fiancee stating that she must break her engagement with him, since she had discovered that she could not love him.

Barnard heard that the girl he loved was free, but since she had pledged the doctor to keep mum he had no idea of the cause of the breaking of her engagement. One day he received a note asking him to call. He did so, and Miss Brayton frankly told him that in refusing him she had misjudged his feelings. Barnard was not slow in giving her an opportunity to correct the mistake. They were married, and it was not till the day after the wedding that his wife told him the secret.

"Why didn't you tell me that before?" he asked in an injured tone.

"Because I didn't presume that you should indulge in any more sentiment."

BY JOVE!

said a well educated man the other day when he was asked this question:—"Why, when you have a cold, a cough or bronchial irritation, you will most of these and often do you persist in pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into your stomach, which is perfectly absurd?"

Ever think of it? The stomach and the lungs are not connected, otherwise fatal weaknesses would choke you. Lung and throat troubles were never yet cured by dosing the stomach. To cure coughs, colds and bronchitis, you must inhale the cure. Peps provide the rational treatment for these ailments. Peps are tablets made up of pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapour. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—no ridiculous dosing to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a box, but if Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. All druggists and stores or Peps Co., Toronto, will supply

BURNING WATER.

Coal Wet Gives a Much Larger Amount of Heat Than When Dry.

Dry coal does not produce as much heat as coal that is considerably damp. It is, of course, a fact that a greater heat makes the fuel more valuable, and it is essential to know how to secure the most from ordinary fuel.

Coal that is to be burned in a furnace, a stove or a grate for immediate heat will produce nearly one-fourth more heat when wet than when dry. Coal that is to be placed in a stove or furnace to be closed up so as to produce a long continued, moderate heat will produce a little more than one-third more heat if there is plenty of moisture than can be secured if the coal is real dry.

Large lumps of coal can be soaked in a pail of water for a half hour, and the heat will be increased nearly one-half. This is done in cases where the lumps are used in stoves tightly closed, such as those known as air tight furnaces.

Several pails of water thrown over a ton of coal will increase its value greatly to the consumer. Coal will burn briskly in wet and almost clinkerless mines, and it is said the heat is intense. When there is a fire and the coal pile burns it is difficult to drown that portion of the fire with water. We might as well expect a block of the best seasoned hardwood water so as permit it all to go unused.—Philadelphia North American.

Allah and the Cotton Worm.

This glimpse of oriental character is from John A. Steel's "The Banks of the Nile:"

"Well, how is the cotton worm now?" said an English cotton worm inspector to an old Egyptian sheik. "Finished. There is none. How can there be cotton worms now? It is more than one life is worth. If we do not pick the cotton worms you fine us, you send us to prison, you take us as prisoners to another man's fields and make us pick his cotton worm. What can we do? And so there is no cotton worm." "And hasn't it saved your cotton this year?" "Assuredly, the praise to Allah." "Then won't you do all this picking next year without us coming to make you do it?" "No." "Why?" "Because that is the way Allah made us!"

Human Nature Always the Same.

One evening a little boy entered a grocery store and handed the clerk a note which read: "I am a poor woman and have no money. My children and I are starving. Won't you give us something to eat?"

The kind-hearted clerk filled a large basket with food and gave it to the boy, who quickly departed.

In a few minutes he again entered the store.

"What's the trouble now?" said the clerk.

"Mamma sent me back to get the trading stamps," the lad replied.

TO THE LIVING FROM THE DEAD.

We who were once such men as you are brothers,
Have one last word for you ere we are aged
Upon our journey through the silent spaces,
The dim and shadowy places of the dead.
Scarce can the souls of mortal men discover
Strength to disperse the veil 'twixt us and you,
Yet we, by this desire that lies within us
To speak that word, have rent that veil in two.
We fought and fighting fell in France and Flanders;
Giving all we possessed to stem the flood.
The hellish flood of hell inspired barbarism
Which sought to win the world through seas of blood.
We penned it in and checked it for a moment.
Seeing through sweat as we lay down to die
The first mad surges ebb, but also hearing
Thunder of greater surges down the sky.
We know that all we did was very little
Toward the sure safeguarding of our race,
And, knowing that, we cry now from the darkness
This last appeal!—Go you, and take our place.

KEEPING SOLDIER FROM GOING STALE

"But it may well happen that in spite of babies, and baths, and brasbands, and football, and boxing gloves, and playing marbles (the general in command of one of our divisions told me he had seen six Argyll and Sutherland sergeants playing marbles with shrapnel bullets in some support trenches), the men get bored," says a correspondent. "Men may become 'stale' or get on each other's nerves. When a company commander sees signs of this he has one very potent prescription; he prescribes a good, stiff route march. It has never been known to fail. Many a time in the winter months when on my visiting Divisional headquarters did I, in the shameful luxury of my car, come across a battalion slogging a long muddy and cheerful in the mud, and singing with almost reproachful unction, 'Last night I s-s-saw you. I saw you, you naughty boy!' "

Big Liners Transformed

English Government Using Them as "Mother Ships" for Seaplanes

FLOATING WORKSHOP

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Strangest looking of all the ships with the Grand Fleet is the Atlantic liner which has been transformed into a mother-ship for the sea-planes. There are platforms in place of the promenades where passengers used to lounge, bombs in place of deck-quoits, and the dining-saloons have been fitted up as workshops. Everything that a seaplane needs in the way of repairs can be supplied.

"Here is our assortment of bombs," said an officer, showing an exhibit of different sizes on a shell. "That one weighs a hundred pounds, the same as a six-inch shell."

"What do you use them on?" he was asked.

"Anything, from a German cruiser, if we get a chance at one, to a submarine. That big bomb would finish a Zeppelin, too."

A crane that once had taken passenger's trunks out of the hold lifted a seaplane off a platform and deposited it on the water, where it bounded on the waves before the motor was started and it skimmed across the surface for a hundred yards or more, rose, circled around the fleet two or three times, and then disappeared out at sea. With its float it looked clumsy beside an aeroplane—the difference between a duck and a hawk.

Most of the romance and the action of sea warfare while the British Grand Fleet waits for a German fleet to come out are with the seaplanes and the destroyers. The Dreadnoughts remain in harbor, except for occasional cruises into the North Sea; but the planes and the destroyers are always on the move. They work together in hunting "Fritz," as British officers and men universally refer to submarines.

A submarine is visible to an aviator when it is cruising below the surface. It never travels deeper than 30 or 40 feet and leave a characteristic ripple and air-bubbles and streaks of oil. When a plane has located a submarine it signals the hunters where to go. But before they arrive a squall may have hidden the track. A submarine may be known to be in a certain region and be lost and seen and then lost and seen again. Submarine hunting is a tireless game of hide and seek. Naval ingenuity has invented no end of method of location and of destruction. Experiment has proved some to be effectual, and some useless. Strictest kept of naval secrets, these.

Very thin is the skin of a submarine and very fragile and complicated its machinery. It does not take much of a shock to put it out of order or a large cargo of explosives to dent that skin beyond repairs.

"The difficulty is to know when you get them," an officer explained; "for it is in the nature of the submarine to sink, whether vitally injured or not. It may have gone to the bottom to stay in 50 fanthoms of water, or it may have submerged under a choppy sea and made safe its escape. We have been hunting them for a year, now, and no doubt we are getting the better of them. We have not only learned how to keep them off from our great ships, but how to destroy them."

If oil and bubbles come up for a long time in one place or if they come up with a rush, that is considered fairly good evidence of success. There is no escape for the crew. They cannot make the submarine rise or get out of it. It becomes a steel casket, in a watery grave. No nautical mind is required to realize that by casting about on the bottom with a grapnel you will learn if an object with the bulk and size of a submarine is there; and the "death" of submarines is established in this way.

"The Admiralty will not accept any guesswork about it," said an officer. "We may have put an explosive right into one or rammed it in a way that must have broken its back, but that is not proof enough. The record goes down on the chart as 'supposed destroyed.' "

With Admiral Crawford the correspondent went to see the submarine defenses of a harbor. Cruisers and destroyers and auxiliaries are going and coming, but the narrow openings through which they pass were closed instantly they were by. There was more than one obstruction. If a submarine got past the first of second, it was in a pocket. Several have been caught in this way.

"Take care! There is a tide here!" the coxswain of the admiral's barge was warned. "We don't want to get caught in a trap meant for Fritz."

At one naval base the correspondent saw a number of destroyers lying moored to a quay as close together as fish in a basket. They had just come in from a tour at sea.

"Here today and gone tomorrow," said an officer. "What a time they had last winter! And they age in for another winter of it. You know how cold the North Sea is—no, you cannot unless you have been out in a torpedo boat dancing the tango in the teeth of that bitter wind, with the spray whipping up to the top of the smokestacks. In the dead of night they would come into this pitchdark harbor. How they found their way is past me. It's a trick of those young fellows who command."

If a destroyer gets on the track of a submarine it has 30 knots against the submarine's six or eight. There is no difficulty in keeping up; her wireless brings a swarm of assistance. The fast turbine destroyers seemed to slip over the water as if their bottoms were oiled. Only a few of the crew are exposed when showers of freezing spray sweeps the decks, and all are clad in thick, short coats of lama wool, which keeps their bodies warm and leaves the legs free for movement in keeping footing as the destroyers roll and plunge in a heavy sea.

Every ship on the blockade from Iceland to the British Channel is also a part of the system of submarine hunting. They show no lights; there are no lights along the coast at night.

"It gives one an idea of England's maritime resources," said an officer, "when you consider that we have 2,000 trawlers and other auxiliary ships on service."

The trawlers plow over plotted sea-squares with the regularity of mowing-machines cutting a harvest, on their back and forth sweeping up mines. They were fishermen before the war and are fishermen still. They come into harbors stiff with cold, thaw out, have a rest, and return to their vigils and their hardships. Beyond them, the cruisers and the destroyers are patrolling on the watch for any signs of a German ship coming out past Heligoland.

WOMEN EAT BIG MEALS

Alfred Steinter, famous as a chef in the cafes of San Francisco, made the statement before the national convention of cooks in session here that women eat more than men. "No matter how small a woman is," he said, "she can eat three times as much as a man can when she gets into action. If it were not for the gentler sex the big restaurants of the country would go broke, for men do not eat big meals as a rule when they are paying big prices for them. Women's appetites are increased by lights, music and high prices, while a man's hunger is proportionately decreased under these circumstances."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

The practical shirt waist must be simple, but it need not be absolutely plain. The one herewith shown is of the kind that can be used for many different materials and purposes.

The characteristic feature is found in the sleeve. This is full length and is gathered at the wrist into a cuff which turns back from the hand. The upper end is extended to the very edge of the neck in the raglan style and thus it forms a narrow shoulder yoke. The fronts are gathered and attached to this sleeve extension, while the back is likewise joined to it, but without fulness. The closing of the waist is in the centre of the front in duchess style and has a deep facing which is stitched at the inner edge and gives much the impression of a trimming.

At the neck is a high, turnover collar, but this leaves the front of the throat exposed and a band of velvet is usually passed across the opening.

This waist is suitable for the more serviceable fabrics, such as wash silk, crepe de Chine, challie and the like, but it will be extremely dainty in Georgette crepe voile and the many nets and laces which are so much worn.

Novelties showing stripes of satin ribbon combined with weaves of crepe and voile are to be had and are much liked for these waists, especially in delicate colors such as light tan, pale blue and the like.

The waist pattern, No. 7,313, is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 44 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Italians Are Given Best Food Possible

With the exception of the British fighting in France, it is said no other nation takes as good care of its soldiers as Italy. The food is excellent and plentiful. The rations are cooked twice a day and served hot, regardless of whether the soldiers are in the trenches, on the reserve firing line, or on the highest mountain.

In addition there are numerous reliefs carried on by private and public subscription. Chief among these are the "first aid restaurants," which were established by an English woman, Signora Hullah-Scalti, widow of a former prominent officer of the Italian Alpine, and Signora Bagnani, who was Miss Dewar of Hamilton, Ont.

Some of these restaurants are set up close to the firing lines. Others are located at bases or main railroad points.

The Helpless Ultimate Consumer.

The idea that everybody is virtually defenseless against the gas company and the ice man appears to be taken as a universal joke. It crops out in unexpected places.

In a western town, according to the New York Times, the attorney for the gas company was making a popular address.

"Think of the good the gas company has done!" he cried. "If I were permitted a pun, I would say, in the words of the immortal poet, 'Honour the Light Brigade!' "

Whereupon a shrill voice came from the rear: "Oh, what a charge they made!"

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys neutralize, irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

It Paid to Sleep

There was only a thin partition between the bar parlour and the taproom of the suburban hostelry, so that I could not help hearing what was perhaps a confidence about a certain Bill's terrible condition the previous afternoon.

"Well, to cut a long story short," said the voice, which was husky, probably from emotion, "I 'ad to set 'im on a doorstep and leave 'im there. 'E must 'a fell asleep and 'is 'at dropped on to t' footpath, an'—would yet believe it?—when 'e woke up there was 11 pence in it?"

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my actions or keep," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Bagwell, N.B. "By the time a Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but

The Italian Fleet Is Co-Operating With Allies

THE BRITISH SUBMARINES SCORE AGAIN

Italian Fleet Steaming East To Assist in the Blockade

Will Co-operate With British and French in Covering the Landing of Allied Troops at Enos---British Submarines Torpedo Two German Vessels in the Baltic Sea, Sending One to the Bottom---Cabinet Crisis a Grave One.

GERMAN ATTACKS IN WEST WERE REPULSED

ROME, Oct. 19.—It was reported that an Italian fleet was steaming already to help the British and French in blockading the Turkish and Bulgarian Aegean Sea coasts in covering the landing of Allied troops at Enos and perhaps in the bombardment of the Bulgarian port of Dedeaghatch. It was believed in many quarters that an Italian land force will be despatched to invade Bulgaria.

PARIS, France, Oct. 19. — (French Official Communique). — "Solidly installed in positions they had taken from the Germans in Bois en Hache," said the statement issued by the War Office to-day, "the French infantry forces on Monday night repulsed three formidable grenade attacks by the enemy.

"Lively fusilades were exchanged at Lihons and east of Navarin Farm, in the Champagne, bomb and petard fighting occurred.

"The French artillery silenced an intense bombardment by the Germans on Esparges.

"Our aviators bombarded the German Burlincourt aviation grounds on the nights of October 17 and 18, and demolished several hangers."

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 19.—British submarines to-day torpedoed the German warships Pernambuco and Soderhamn in the Baltic, sinking the former vessel.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The belief was growing that the Allied plan was to strike eastward from Enos against the Turkish capital. For this movement there are railroad facilities, and while Turkish opposition was looked for, it was thought scarcity of ammunition would render this comparatively ineffective.

On the Western front, it was surmised from heavy German concentration in Champagne and Vosges, that a fresh drive was about to be attempted in these districts. Otherwise there had been little change.

In the East the Germans were reported to have made unimportant gains between Riga and Dvinsk, but along the rest of the line, south to the Roumanian frontier, the Russians were said to be on the offensive.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 19.—A collision with a factory chimney at Maubeuge killed all the crew of a Zeppelin, though it also demolished the chimney, according to a Paris message received here to-day by Pilkington Bros., the factory's English owners.

Maubeuge is a town on the French side of the Franco-Belgian frontier, captured early in the war by the Germans.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Oct. 19.—The capture of the town of Obrenovac, 40 miles south-west of Belgrade, by the forces of Field Marshal Von Mackensen and a further advance of the Teutonic army to the heights south of Belgrade were reported by the War Office this afternoon.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Whether or not Attorney General Sir Edward Carson's resignation foreshadows the present British Cabinet's fall was a topic much discussed by politicians and the press here to-day.

On all sides the crisis was recognized as a grave one.

"We should deeply regret," said the London Globe, summing up the situation, "to see the Government come down, but it assuredly must fall unless it can show strength and decisions in such grave matters as the Gallipoli expedition, the rescue of the Serbians, the problems of rescruiting and waste, and attacks by Zeppelins. The nation cries out for leaders who can show courage to face the truth. If the Cabinet fails us now, it will fall."

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The sinking of the British Wilson liner Aleppo, 3,000 tons, presumably by a German submarine, with the rescue of the crew, is announced to-day.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The most effective method for Italy to co-operate with the British and French in the Balkans is being considered by the Allies, Minister of Munitions Lloyd George told the House of Commons to-day.

It is understood here that the decision of the Entente Powers to send large reinforcements to the Balkan front has been communicated to the Greek Government.

In the form of a friendly note from the British and Russians Ministers at Athens to the Greek Government, in which the plans for the Entente Powers are outlined, and which also pointed out that the Allies' interpretation of Greece's obligations to Serbia were not in conformity with that of the Greek Government.

Speaking for Premier Asquith, Lloyd George said it was not yet possible to name the day for the promised Government statement concerning the Government's Dardanelles policy.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—"The break of the Coalition Cabinet," commented the Pall Mall Gazette, "would mean the breakdown of the party truce. The dissolution of Parliament now would be an exasperating misfortune, conveying grave reproach upon those responsible for it."

"We risked being called optimists," said the Westminster Gazette, more hopefully, "by saying that in our opinion, nothing has happened to justify the depression and agitation which some people think the right mood in which to meet the new German stroke in the Balkans."

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Prince Alexander of Greece, the King's second son, has broken his leg by a fall from his horse, an Athens cable said to-day.

PTE. A. W. PHIPPS BRINGING A BRIDE BACK WITH HIM

Wounded Peterboro' Member of the 2nd Battalion Who Was Married Several Weeks Ago is Now on His Way Home

SAILED ON CORSICAN

Pte. Arthur W. Phipps, son of Mrs. A. E. Phipps, 9 Fradette Ave., who left Peterborough as a member of the 57th Regiment detachment in the 2nd Battalion, and who was wounded at St. Julien last April is in mid ocean on his way home. Pte. Phipps is not coming alone, either, as he was married several weeks ago in England, and his English bride is accompanying her wounded soldier husband across to his Canadian home. They sailed on the Corsican on Friday, Oct. 15, and are due in Peterborough about the beginning of next week.

Speaking of the marriage of Pte. Phipps, the Kidderminster, England, Shuttle, says:

On Sunday a wedding took place at St. Anne's church, Bewdley, the contracting parties being Miss E. Bow, daughter of Mr. Geo. Bow, and Pte. A. W. Phipps of the 1st Canadian contingent, son of Mr. A. E. Phipps, late of Messrs. Brintons, Kidderminster, and now of New York, U.S.A. The bride has five brothers serving with His Majesty's forces. The bridegroom was wounded at the famous charge on Hill 60 and disabled from further service in the army. The best man was Sergt. Pardoe of the Worcester Regiment. The bride who was given away by her father, was daintily attired in a white lace dress. She wore a bridal wreath and veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies and roses, the gift of the bridegroom. She was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss D. Cox of Wolverhampton, and Miss S. Elson. They wore white dresses with black hats, with pink roses. The happy couple were the recipients of many useful presents. They also received telegrams of congratulation during the day from Canada. They are leaving England shortly to take up their residence in Peterborough, Canada.

Was Killed By A Falling Tree

Remains of the Late Wm. Conway Arrived in the City at Noon To-day

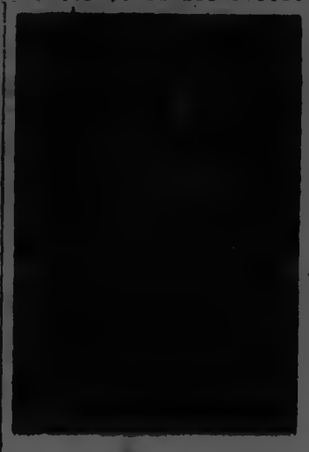
The remains of the late Wm. Conway, who met death in a lumber camp in Northern Ontario, arrived in the city at noon to-day, and were removed to the home of his father in Bridgenorth. It was learned that the deceased was instantly killed by a tree falling on him.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to St. Martin's church, Ennismore, interment taking place in St. Martin's cemetery.

WEST WANTS FREE WHEAT

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Premier Norris, of Manitoba, who is here attending the conference on soldiers' employment, stated in an interview that there is a strong movement in the west for free wheat. Mr. Norris asserted that prices in Minneapolis at present are from six to eight cents higher than in Winnipeg, and that this stimulates the movement, particularly for export, of that part of the crop which is slightly damaged and suitable for mixing purposes.

Under the Wilson tariff, the 10 cents per bushel duty imposed by the United States would be removed automatically if Canada places wheat on the free list. The question of the removal of the wheat duty is the subject of petitions to Ottawa, and the matter is being considered by the Dominion Government, but reports that the duty will be taken off are declared here to-day to be wholly unfounded. The Government if it so chose could make wheat free by Order-in-Council under the War Measures Act and without the need of legislation.



PTE. A. W. PHIPPS, wounded Peterborough soldier who is on his way home, and who is bringing a bride with him.

PTE. VIC. BULLIED, one of the Peterborough boys in the 9th Canadian Mounted Rifles, who are experiencing their first day in an English camp to-day.

MORE OUTFITS ARE SUPPLIED TO MEN OF LOCAL BATTALION

Kit Bags, Underwear, etc. Are Issued--More Recruits Added to the Strength of the Battalion--Vaccination Featured This Morning at the Armouries--To-day's Military News

Quartermaster Sergt. Jack Williams and his staff were busy yesterday issuing kit bags, underwear, shirts, housewives, etc., to the members of the Peterborough battalion. The members of the band and of No. 1 platoon received their supplies yesterday.

Lance Corp. Austin Tobin of the Peterborough Battalion, whose marriage was announced a day or two ago was pleasantly surprised by his comrades in No. 1 platoon yesterday when they presented him with a handsome wedding present in the shape of a beautiful silver butter dish. The presentation was made by Sergt. Sam Callaghine on behalf of the platoon, in a neat speech. Lance Corp. Tobin in reply expressed his deep thanks to his comrades-in-arms.

Word has been received that Pte. Geo. Brunton of the Peterborough detachment in the 2nd Battalion who was wounded at St. Julien has recovered from his injuries and has been attached to the 39th Battalion. By a happy coincidence he has been placed in the quartermaster's stores, where his commanding officer is none other than Major A. G. Carruthers of Peterborough, who commanded C company of the 57th Regiment of which Pte. Brunton was a member before the war broke out.

Bugler Alan Sharpe one of the Peterborough boys with the 39th Battalion has sent home some splendid pictures of the battalion on the march to Lydd church, England, to deposit their colours in the church. D. company of the Battalion, in which all the Peterborough men are, formed the escort, and Sergt. Langham of Peterborough, was the non-com. selected to accompany the officers carrying the colours. Sergt.-Major Dunkerly, formerly sergt.-instructor of the 57th, Sergt. Dodds, formerly sergt-major of the 57th, Sergt. Harry Barrett, Buglers Lord and Sharpe, of the 57th Bugle Band, Sergt. Max Metheral, formerly of the signalling section of the 57th and many other Peterborough boys are prominently displayed.

Mrs. Fenwick, 418 1-2 George street, has received word that her son, Sergt. Stanley Fenwick, of the 2nd Field Company, Canadian Engineers, who has been at the front ever since the first Canadian contingent landed in France, is now in hospital suffering from a wrenched knee sustained in jumping into a trench.

Pte. Sam Saunders, nephew of Ald. Jos. Saunders, has been transferred to the machine gun section of the 39th Battalion. Pte. Saunders left this morning for Harrietsld, having spent three days here on leave, the guest of his father, Mr. Robt. Saunders, Rink street.

More Tobacco Cards.

Here are several more Overseas Tobacco Fund cards received in Peterborough from the boys at the front:

Mr. H. M. Latimer, 297 George street, has received the following:

Sept. 24th.

Dear Harry,— Thanks very much for the tobacco, which has been duly appreciated. Most thoughtful of the people at home.

Yours truly,
A. E. Ackerman,
No. 1 Co., 2nd Battalion,
1st Infantry Brigade,
C.E.F.

Mr. T. L. Huffman, 324 Sherbrooke street, received this card:

"Dear Sir,—Just a line to thank you very much for the cigarettes and tobacco. We all appreciated them very much. Hoping you are in the best of health,

Wm. Dodd,
No. 81284,
No. 1 Company,
2nd Battalion.

Tobacco Appreciated.

Sept. 22, 1915.

Dear Doc.— Hope you will excuse the familiarity. I don't suppose you will remember my name. I only knew you slightly. We have received four packages of dandy cigarettes lately, and I understand that you are the donor, so thought I would drop you a line to thank you. Of course we get cigarettes issued to us, but they hardly come up to the "dopes" that you sent us. Most of the boys intend writing you, so you may get a bunch of letters together. If you could be here when the cigarettes arrive and see the smile on the boys' faces it is a sight to gladden the heart of anyone. In fact tea and "smokes" are our mainstays. Again thanking you, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Pte. F. Carke, No. 7618,
2nd Battalion, C.E.F.

Here is another one:—

Dear Doc.—As Clarke is dropping you a line I thought I might as well contribute a little bit also. I don't know that I can add much to what Clark has already written, but I must add my thanks to his. I want you to know that we appreciate such acts of kindness as yours. We sure did smoke to your health. I might also say that the cigarettes were A1 and we appreciate a good article, more so because it comes from our old home town.

I will ring off now, thanking you again and then some. I remain,
Your friend and well wisher,
Lance Corp. E. Dunnitt,
2nd Battalion, C.E.F.

The Peterborough Battalion Band will give a concert in Lakefield on Friday, Oct. 29th in aid of the band fund.

A big squad of the Peterborough battalion were innoculated this morning by Majors Eastwood and Cameron. A large number have received their two courses of innoculation and have also been vaccinated, so that they are through that stage of a soldiers' life for some time.

The Kingston Standard says:

If civilians think the soldier in camp is not fed well, their minds should be disabused on this score by the following ration list which is issued to every man: 1 1-4 pounds of bread, 1 pound of potatoes, 1 pound of meat, 5 ounces of fresh vegetables, 1 ounce of cheese, 2 ounces of sugar; 3 ounces of beans, 2 ounces of butter, 2 ounces of beans, flour, rice or oatmeal, 2 ounces of jam or prunes, 1 ounce of coffee, 1-2 ounce of tea, with pepper, salt, split peas and dried milk. This totals 6 pounds, 9 1-2

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN PATRIOTIC FUND MADE

Families of Soldiers Living at Home and Drawing Subsistence Allowance Will Not Receive a Grant From the Fund Until Men Go into Barracks.

SCHEDULE OF RATES

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—A new schedule of grants applying to cities in Eastern Canada has been adopted by the executive of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and will in future govern all assistance to be given to the families of Canadian soldiers on active service. Besides a general revision of the rates, new regulations for the distribution of such allowances were made. Hereafter no assistance will be granted by the fund to families in which the father is alive, able-bodied and under 65 years of age, or where there are other males over 15 years of age capable of assuming its support; families of men on garrison and picket duty in Canada, known as active service men; where there are several children in a soldier's family, only one may be reckoned at the maximum rate, only one at the intermediate rate, and all others, no matter what age, at the minimum rate. Where the wife of a Canadian volunteer (C. E. F.) has no children in receipt of separation allowance and assigned pay, she will not receive more than $5 per month from the fund. This ruling does not apply to widowed mothers nor to married women with children. No C.E.F. family receiving separation allowance may draw more than $20 per month from the fund, no matter how many persons it may include. The family of a discharged soldier will on his return home receive no further assistance from the fund. Families of soldiers who, though they have have enlisted for overseas service, are still living at home and drawing in addition to their pay a subsistence allowance receive no help from the fund. Only when these must go into barracks and the subsistence allowance ceases may their families be helped from the fund. No allowance will be granted where the women, before the soldier's enlistment, was in no way financially dependent upon him. The schedule of rates prepared provides for the following grants: Wife and one child, from $13.00 to $17.50 per month, according to the age of the child; wife and two children, $16 to $20, according to ages of children; wife and three children, $19 to $25; wife and four children, $22 to $28; woman with five children, $25 to $30; with six children, $28 to $30; with seven children, or more, $30 in all cases. A widowed mother depending entirely for support on an unmarried soldier son may receive $10 per month if necessary, and parents in a similar situation $20.

Thursday night's patriotic concert in the Opera House is practically an assured success before the curtain is raised. Every seat at twenty-five cents, and none are reserved. The Children's Aid Society and Its Friends

The Officials Make Grateful Acknowledgment of the Efforts That Realized Good Results

The following graceful acknowledgment has been received by the Editor of the Examiner with permission to make it public:

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the Executive of the Children's Aid Society of Peterborough we wish to thank you and also your editorial staff for the very great assistance rendered by you in the recent Tag Day campaign. The strong appeals contained in your editorials and other press notices assisted in a very large measure to bring about the very liberal and gratifying response on the part of the people of Peterborough.

You have always been most kind sympathetic and generous in your support of our Society, and we wish to assure you and your staff that it is most heartily appreciated.

Yours truly,
The Children's Aid Society of Peterborough.
R. W. Travers,
President.
J. E. L. Goodwill,
Secretary.

This indicates that the officials and the members of the executive recognize their responsibility and their indebtedness to the press and the public, who have so handsomely implemented its appeals. Since the first announcement of the money result of tag-day—$1,138—additional contributions of $24 have brought the total up to $1,162, only $8 short of $1,200. Here is an opportunity for some one with a fondness for the rotund season of round numbers to supply the missing link and make the fund, in the language of good old Horace—a name significantly identical with that of the treasurer—Plenus atque rotundus."

It is a credit to the officials and the press, the lady solicitors, and the public, and all concerned, that their interest in the splendid work of the Children's Aid Society is not allowed to become lessened.

More Donations For the Children's Aid Society

Mr. W. H. Walkey, treasurer Children's Aid Society, gratefully acknowledge the following donations received since Tag Day:

W. G. Morrow	$25.00
J. D. Collins	5.00
Friends	4.00

ASTIGMATISM

Was first discovered by Thomas Young over one hundred years ago, but the cure for it was not found till a few years later, when a Mr. Airy, suffering acutely from the same defect of sight, cured himself by means of cylindrical lenses. Since then, Astigmatism in all forms has been closely studied by the leading eye specialists of the world, till a method has been perfected by which this defect, and if allowed to develop becomes a disease, can be cured permanently. The usual symptoms of Astigmatism are Headache, pain in the eyes and head.

Dr. Lacey, successor to Tait Optical Co., 410 George street, opposite Examiner Office, is a specialist for all eye troubles, and has had some wonderful results in the curing of this disease, as his patients testify. Consult him about the eye troubles you have. 'Phone 1160 or 1164.

THE PRIZE RING PICTURES.

There are differences of opinion regarding the Government veto of the presentation of the moving pictures of the Johnson-Willard prize ring battle. One can perhaps find room for argument, that the action smacks of puritanism if not of Pharisaism, and that the Government shows a little lack of consistency. The Government could "stand off" the recommendations of its License Commission and the pleas of moral reformers, and refuse to close the bars as requested at 7 o'clock. Yet one will admit that an hour extra of open bar can do infinitely more moral damage than an hour's contemplation of a generally tames and uninteresting exchange of fisticuffs. The extra hour is given the bar, not for patriotic reasons, nor to serve any patriotic purpose. It was a mere concession to greed of gain, at the expense of patriotic interests. The "fight pictures" were to be put on in the interests of the soldiers who are fighting for us to give them a comfortable home, to help save them from the temptation of the open bar from 7 o'clock till eight o'clock. On one side we have the beneficiaries of the traffice catered to; on the other we have the highest citizens of the law, judges, etc., interested in helping the soldiers, discriminated against. The Examiner has no use for prize fighters or prize fighting per se. It is not a good thing, but a very bad thing in itself; but if the mere shadow of it can be made to serve a good purpose, as an offset to the demoralization it may yield, why not balance the account? If the Almighty Potency can "make the wrath of men to praise Him," why not convert the folly of man to the service of men. In this time of stress there are many things that are not strictly lawful, that become expedient. This is a fight for democracy—freedom of individual action. We have to submit to minor things that are contrary to the spirit of democracy in the major interests of democracy. Shakspere tells us in Henry V. that "nice customs courtesy to great kings"; fine distinctions — moral hair-splitting — the letter of the law are required to yield to the demands of larger interest. The moral of straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel, does not lose its force with the passing away of the "scribes Pharisees, hypocrit—"the blind guides," that called down divine denunciation of their finicking insistence upon the letter of the law.

The problem of the disposal of our fallen leaves is a difficult one. Their destruction wholesale by burning is one of the ironies of necessity or convenience. For months the now fallen leaves or those yellowing to the fall were the glory of our streets and homes, giving grateful shade and cooling shelter and gladness to the eye. A few days ago they lined our highways with walls of flame picked out with the deeper glow of crimson. Now they are down and none so poor to do them reverence.

They repeat the too frequent story of human ingratitude. Our friends when they have served our purpose, are too frequently cast aside as of no further immediate use. The beautiful foliage that now is regarded as a nuisance, was a good friend to us in the scorching heats of summer; when alive with the twitter of nesting birds, it made life worth living. Now we rake together and give to the flames our best friends.

We do this because it is a easy way to rid ourselves of the encumbrance. We reverse the plan of nature which is to restore to the soil what it has taken from the soil, and enriched with elements pumped by nature's fine machinery from the air.

Leaves have made our fertile soil, the humus that is indispensable to crop growth. The leaves falling in the deep woods and decaying where they lay, with century on century of yearly layers, make the earth yield richer increase. They form reservoirs on the forest flowers where the rainfall is stored to ooze out gently and slowly and form our brooks, our rivulets, and our mighty rivers and broad lakes. Within the memory of many now living, strong streams, enough to turn mill wheels, when there was much forest area, are now, that the woods are gone, mere dry ditches, and the whole land suffers from forest removal and leaf storage destruction.

We might make better disposal of our leaves than burning them. Some citizens imitating nature's thrifty ways, gather and store them and let them decay in corners to make new fertility, the best encouragement to flower growth and lawn fertilization. But destruction by burning is the easier way, and we are often inclined to adopt the short road in meeting the discharge of duty. Though the process is objectionable to some, the pungent fragrance of burning leaves scattered through the air, is not always disagreeable.

However, piling and storing leaves to decay for future fertility for flowers or lawn dressing, is the wise way. The leaves do most abound on our residence streets, where there is nearly always back yard space for piling and rotting. Removing leaves on account of their bulky but fluffy nature is not a difficult thing if the easier way is taken. The ordinary barrow or basket is clumsy and slow, but an easy way is easily available. Rake the leaves in heaps; then pile them in the middle of a soiled sheet or blanket spread out on street or lawn. Heap the leaves high. Then bring the four corners of the sheet together, grasp them firmly, swing over the shoulder, and one can carry away a burden of leaves bulky but light—more than a dozen barrows would hold and with less labour, and greater expedition.

The removal of leaves from paved streets is a somewhat difficult problem, and it should not be neglected. On some of the paved streets the leaves lie deep, and when they are dry a carelessly thrown smoker's match may ignite them, and we have great injury to the asphalt pavement, which has cost us so much good money, and will cost enough to keep in good repair without the employment of incendiary methods.

SIR WILFRID KEEPS THE TRUCE.

While a few ultra Conservatives journals in Ontario desirous of bringing on a premature general election declare that there is no political truce and that the Government can dissolve at any time without breaking any agreement, implicit or explicit, a very different view of the situation prevails in the Province of Quebec. There The Montreal Star, which strove mightily to turn the Liberals out of power, and can hardly be suspected of undue regard for Sir Wilfrid Laurier says:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to be warmly commended by Canadians of all parties—who realize that the first business of every British community to-day is to fight and win this war—for the decisive fashion in which he prevented a breach of the political truce in Hochelaga. Sir Wilfrid pledged himself to such a truce when the first German gun was fired, and most loyally has he kept that pledge. He is with those who believe that there should be no civil division—no party election—in this country until the war is over, and with him stand, we are confident all the better and more patriotic elecents in the community.

"He has resisted a considerable temptation in vetoing a contest at this time in Hochelaga, when it is felt by many that the ill-smelling war purchase scandals might have offered him an effective issue. But he believes, apparently — and, we think, correctly—that the time is not yet for a discussion of these vital and far-reaching questions before the electorate. Undoubtedly, it is the duty of Parliament as at present constituted to discuss them, for this Parliament must stand until the war is finished as the trustee of the nation. The whole country has been shamed by the revelations before the Davidson Commission, and in war time punishment for such offences should be even swifter than in the less critical periods of peace. But this is a far different matter from seeking to strengthen a political party in Parliament by contesting an open constituency.

"In taking this stand Sir Wilfrid will have the support not of the saner sections of his own party, but of the less partisan portions of the Conservative party as well. He may not get his just meed of praise from sycophants who ever worship the risen sun, from self-seekers who fawn upon the powers that be, but he will receive his reward in the esteem of all manly men whom neither partyism nor 'patronage' can blind, and from the calm verdict of history which will immortalize the statesmen who stand most steadily by the State in this, her supreme hour of trial."

When this statement in The Montreal Star is placed alongside of the rancorous criticism to which the Liberal leader is subjected in reactionary Ontario papers like the Toronto News and London Free Press the contrast is very marked. There is no doubt at all that the verdict of history will be that predicted by The Montreal Star. Sir Wilfrid Laurier need not fear that his place in the affections of his fellow-countrymen or in the annals of the Dominion will be rendered less secure because he has been shorn of power and has as a result lost the praise of "sycophants who ever worship the risen sun, of self-seekers who fawn upon the powers that be."—Globe.

A Prize Court Judgment Based More on Common Sense Than on Technicality

There never has been, and probably never will be, a thoroughly satisfactory definition of contraband of war, and particularly of conditional contraband. The subject is too intricate for precise definitions. The Prize Courts have to take into consideration the good faith of consignors and consignees; the nature of the cargoes, probabilities regarding ultimate destination and purpose, precedent jurisprudence, special treaty provisions, the rights of neutrals as well as of belligerents, and the customs of nations in the matter of interpretation. In the very nature of things direct evidence of a convincing character is hard to obtain. The most important part of the evidence is purely circumstantial, and the utmost that can be established is a high probability. For a nation like Germany, which has no scruples about breaking treaty obligations and no regard for international law, the problem is a simple one. The Germans interpret the law to suit their own interests and according to their necessities; and do not bother their heads about inconsistency. British courts, of course, cannot act upon this principle. Both law and custom sanction some high-handed proceedings between belligerents, and these must sometimes work serious injustice to individuals. The most difficult points to deal with are those which affect the interests of neutrals, and most of the cases which come before our courts now affect the interests of neutrals, because the enemy ports are so effectively blockaded that all shipments of suspected materials are made in neutral ships, and the cargoes are consigned by neutral exporters to neutral consignees in neutral countries.

The British Prize Court recently gave a most important judgment with reference to four Danish ships and their cargoes, consigned from New York to Copenhagen last October and November, and seized by British cruisers. The judgment was important, not only on account of the magnitude of the amount involved, running into millions of pounds sterling, but on account of the legal principles laid down in the judgment. There were no less than 625 bills of lading covering the four cargoes, which consisted chiefly of lard, hog and meat products, oil stocks, wheat and other foodstuffs. Two of the ships contained large shipments of rubber, and one had a cargo of hides. The effect of the judgment is that a few of the shipments are released, but most of them are condemned. Every shipment had to be dealt with on its own merits. For instance, Armour & Company, who, with the American packers, contested the seizures, had 176,559 pounds released and 7,449,003 pounds condemned. It may not be much consolation to Messrs Armour & Co. that Sir Samuel Evans, President of the Prize Court, was able to base his decision largely upon American precedents established during the Civil War; or that he was able to cite the opinion of the Hon. W. J. Bryan in support of his judgment. Mr. Bryan, in a State paper addressed to the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate, said; "The rule of 'continuous voyage' has been not only asserted by American tribunals, but extended by them. They have exercised the right to determine from the circumstances whether the ostensible was the real destination. They have held that the shipment of articles of contraband to a neutral to port 'to order,' from which, as a fact, cargoes have been transhipped to the enemy, is corroborated evidence that the cargo is really destined to the enemy instead of to the neutral port of delivery." There was no lack of evidence to prove a "high probability" amounting to practical certainty that most, if not all, of the foodstuffs, rubber and hides were intended to be transhipped to the enemy country; and any other judgment than that handed down would simply have opened a back door into Germany through Denmark for all kinds of contraband. It would have made the British blockade as ridiculously ineffective as the German blockade of the British ports. The Armours had agents who had a small office in Copenhagen, and between October 20 and November 11 they were shipping to them twenty times as much as they were shipping to all Scandinavia per month before the war, when the principal office of the agents was at Frankfort. There was a suggestive lack of evidence from Copenhagen, not even the name of the manager of the agency being forthcoming. The judgment is more remarkable for common sense than for technicality, and does substantial justice to all concerned.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

FIGHTING AROUND DVINSK HAS COST THE ENEMY THOUSANDS OF LIVES

LONDON, Oct. 19.—German pressure against Dvinsk has increased in the last 24 hours, says a despatch from Petrograd. While they were bringing up heavy artillery and getting it into position their object was to hold the ground they had won. They may be said to have succeeded, the correspondent says, although at some places the Russian attack has forced them to retire, and although their losses have been especially heavy.

Altogether the fighting around Dvinsk is believed to have reduced their strength by 80,000 men. They repeatedly attacked in close formation, finding, however, no compensation for these sacrifices or improvement in their position. The Germans are beginning now where they were three weeks ago, and have evidently decided that against the greater power of Russian resistance as it has developed in the Russian armies in the last weeks they cannot hurry matters as they had hoped.

There is little doubt if the Russians now had the equipment the Germans have, as they will have in a few months, they could defeat them completely and paralyze further activity on this front. Every day, the correspondent concludes, the position in this respect is improving and that apparently is why the Germans are renewing their efforts against Dvinsk and are doing all they can to hasten their plan to cut Petrograd off from the south. If they cannot succeed against Russia now they never can.

The Russian offensive on the Galicia front has been renewed, and an important success on the Styr River is announced officially from Petrograd. Among the prisoners taken in the occupation of one village in this region were two battalion commanders. Altogether General Ivanoff reports the capture of nearly 3,500 Germans and Austrians in the last 24 hours.

More Outfits Are Supplied

Lieut. Hamilton of the 33rd Battery who is here taking on recruits for the battery, will be at the artillery orderly room at the Armouries daily at 11 a.m., 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. for the balance of the week. Lieut. Hamilton has already secured the names of some fifteen recruits who will be medically examined to-night. Apparently in spite of the demand made on Peterborough for recruits the 33rd battery will receive another splendid quota from Peterborough.

Lieut. E. D. Huycke and Lieut. W. W. Boyd of the 24th Field Battery, Kingston, have been appointed to a permanent place in the 33rd battery to fill the vacancies caused by the officers who left with the draft on Friday.

Kingston Standard: Both the 59th and 80th Battalions have Russian platoons. There is one platoon in each battalion composed entirely of Russians. Their non-commissioned officers are Russians, and when a word of command is given by the officer commanding the platoon, in English, and it is not understood by the men, it is repeated in Russian by a sergeant. By this means it has been possible to train these men until they are equal to any other platoon, although handicapped by a limited knowledge of the English language.

Kingston Standard: Lieut. Hamilton of the 33rd Battery is recruiting in Peterborough, from which place the battery has already secured a great many recruits. In spite of the fact that there is a company of the 80th Battalion in Peterborough, which is on the watch for recruits every day, it seems fairly easy for a recruiting officer to secure recruits for the artillery from that city.

Among the latest recruits who have been passed for the Peterborough Battalion are the following:

John Monks, Brownton.

Walter Wagstaff, Brownton, 5 years in the Manchester Regiment.

John Andrews, R. R. No. 5, Peterborough.

Fred S. Smith, 728 Bethune street. 12 years in Essex Regiment, 6 years in the 57th Regiment.

J. P. Horton, 426 London street, 3 years in the 57th Regiment. 1 year in the 24th Field Battery.

Clifford Wilson, Clarady P. O.

Douglas Lee, Norwood, Ont.

There was a lecture for the noncoms. of the Peterborough Battalion at 8 o'clock this morning on "Discipline." Yesterday afternoon Lieut. Stewart lectured to the men of Nos. 3 and 4 platoon on deportment, etc.

A splendid picture of the Peterborough men in D. Company of the 39th Battalion appears in the window of Mr. T. H. Hooper's store. The photograph was sent home by Bugler Alan Sharpe.

Company Sergt.-Major Robert Webster, of the 77th Battalion, Ottawa, and formerly chief of police at Lakefield, was in town to-day. He is home on a few days leave.

The Handicap of Bigness.
Many have thought that the mere bigness of the mail order houses enables them to sell more cheaply than the local merchant. On the contrary, bigness entails vastly increased expenses, out of proportion to the increased business. Trace your order through mail-openers, checkers, cashiers, more checkers, billers, still more checkers, shippers, teamsters, etc., with checkers to check the checkers at every step. Then consider the enormous taxes and rents they have to pay. You will find that your local merchant, who superintends his own business, is in a position to give you better service at the same or better prices.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

LINDSAY RUGBY TEAM HERE ON SATURDAY

The Lindsay Collegiate Institute Rugby team will visit Peterborough on Saturday and will clash with the Peterborough Collegiate in a game at Riverside Park. This will be the first rugby game of the season and also the first battle in the new Intercollegiate League.

WIVES OF PHILS WATCH BATTLES

One of the interesting features of the world's series of games played in Philadelphia was a group of young women. There wasn't one of them who asked "Why does that funny man wear a mask?" or "What made the crowd yell a minute ago?" The reason they didn't ask foolish questions was because they were the wives of the players.

How does it feel to be a baseball star's wife? To watch nervously as your hubband walks to the bat? To strain you ears for the groans or cheers with which his play is greeted?

"Nobody knows except the wife herself," admitted vivacious Mrs. Pat Moran, wife of the Phils' manager, as the game was about to begin. "I'm so keyed up now that I hardly know what I am saying, only—" The grand stand burst into furious applause and Mrs. Moran's dark brown eyes glowed as she saw her husband, a stock figure in white baseball trousers and blue sweater, acknowledge the plaudits. "O!" she exclaimed, the colour rushing to her face. And "Oh!" exclaimed little Pat, aged 2, scrambling down from Mrs. Moran's lap to learn over the rail of the Moran box. Likewise, "O!" breathed the grand stand and bleachers.

Mrs. Moran Applauds.

It happened to be the moment when the big silver loving cup given by the fans was flourished before Moran's enraptured gaze. His gaze was not more enraptured than that of his admiring family. "My daddy!" announced Patsy in a voice of subdued pride, doubtless speculating on what a nice silver mug that would make for his morning draught of milk. The grand stand began again to clap its collective hands. Mrs. Moran clapped, too, and little Pat caught the infection with a hearty beating of his tiny palms.

"Proud of him" Mrs. Moran's eyes follow I her husband while her tone answered the question in a decided affirmative: "I'm only sorry we couldn't have attended more of the games."

From the plumes of her wistaria velvet hat to the hem of her deep blue suit, she was a-sparkle with excitement. Her box was at the edge of the grand stand, her chair was at the edge of the box, and she herself was at the edge of the chair. If there's anything in thought waves to influence baseball scores, then the Phillies' trumpins must have been due in no small degree to Mrs. Moran.

Wives Sit Together.

Not far from the Moran box and not far from one another, were seated half a dozen of the Phillies' wives. Og toward the Boston section of the grand stand were the Boston spouses.

Mrs. James Erskine Mayer, wife of a Philly pitcher, sat in the former group. Under a fetching big black velvet hat sat Mrs David Bancroft, whose husband shortstops for the Phils. Her violet feathers nodded as she shook her blonde head.

"It's like war," confided Mrs. Niehoff, her glance on the Phillies' second baseman, her muscles as tense as his own. "the women suker most. Our husbands are down on the field having a good time, when all's said and done. But we wives have to stay up here and watch, and wait, and worry. I don't know how many boot soles I've tapped off or how many handkerchiefs I've torn to ribbons this season."

FEDERAL LEAGUE AIMS TO PLAY BALL AT NIGHT

Elaborate System of Lighting Park Will be Tested this Week.

Some night this week two semi-professional baseball teams will play at the Federal League Park in Brooklyn to test the new lighting system which has been installed so that night games can be played regularly next season. Should the plan prove effective in operation, it is the intention of the Federal League to install similar plants at all of the parks throughout the circuit, and night games will become a part of the regular schedule. James A. Gilmore, President of the league, said that it was not the intention to play the early season games at night, but that from about the middle of June to the middle of September the league games would be played in the evening, except that there would be afternoon games on Wednesday and Saturday.

All of this hinges on the successful operation of the Brooklyn plant, but the federal league officials have little doubt that it will prove effective. It was tried out on a small scale on the grounds of Robert B. Ward's home at New Rochelle, and a small black ball thrown or batted was distinctly visible, it is said, during the entire time of its flight. At the Brooklyn park five towers, 80 feet feet in height, have been erected, and each contains four lights. In addition there are lights located near the ground which project their rays upward, these being back of the left field and right field foul lines. Some time ago one light was tried on a tower near the home plate, and it is said that a paper could be read by one out in the bleachers in centre field. This gives some measure of the power of the lights.

The system cost about $18,000, and with this installed at all of the Federal parks so that night games can be played, the Federal League men believe they will draw large crowds of those who, for business reasons, are barred from seeing games at the time they are now played.

"Duffy" Lewis— Left fielder of the Red Sox, who won the third and fourth games of the world's series by producing the hit which brought the winning run in for his team.

Battle of Loos Banishes Calm of London Man in the Street

For the First Time Since the War Began Throng Gathers at the Station to Cheer Wounded Returning From the Front

LONDON, Oct. 15—Soldiers have started for the front and wounded have returned from the war by the thousands without a cheer, without a welcome home from the man in the street. Amid all the calmness with which Londoners regard the war, its heavy cost in blood and money, the periodical Zeppelin raids, this is the most inexplicable characteristic of the Londoner which has struck the neutral stranger to England's great metropolis.

But all this was changed by the battle of Loos. When the first trains of wounded arrived from the coast, late in the night, there was a great waiting crowd at the station to give them a cheer, in spite of the drenching rain.

It was at once a most touching, weird, moving, impressive sight. The heavy trains, like wearied monsters, panted and puffed into the darkened station, and gradually the platforms grew more and more crowded with the wounded soldiers, their khaki uniforms, most of them, still caked with Flanders mud. Some were limping but able to move with the assistance of only a stick, others hobbling painfully and awkwardly on unaccustomed crutches. Some were led by their kindly Royal Ambulance attendants, the more serious 'cases' being taken away in the Red Cross automobiles, which had been waiting for hours in a long line outside the station. The slightly wounded disappeared in private automobiles and taxicabs, which they hailed with a quiet, matter of fact query, "Are you engaged?"

An officer with his arm bandaged and limping on an umbrella was met by a woman in evening dress. She arrived in a private automobile, and the one word "Carlton" was all that passed between him and the chauffeur.

Her Boy Not There.

A little group of men in khaki limped and swayed down the platform between the rows of nurses, porters and policemen. Some of them were smoking and chatting laughingly together. An occasional cheer broke from the fringe of the crowd, and an arm or a hand would wave in response above the swinging hammock in the Red Cross automobile.

An old woman stood alone in the crowd. She was very old and had no umbrella. The rain dripped from her clothes.

"I knew he was in it," she kept on saying "I knew he was in it. Some of his friends in the same regiment told me he was. I wonder what has become of him. Ah! That may be him waving out of the car."

But it wasn't.

Two stalwart soldiers, stained with the chalky mud of Loos, walked arm-in-arm down the platform. Each had an arm in a white sling and each had a bandage round his head.

"They are brothers," said one of the policemen. "I know them well. They used to work with me on the line at London Bridge.

They were smoking, and when they got outside the station the rain beat in their faces. They stopped to buy cigarettes in a tobacconist's in the station yard.

"It's hell here, Jack," said one to the other; "just like it was out there."

"It's worse," replied the other. "I see they've put up the price on the cigarettes." And they hailed a taxi and told the driver to 'look slippy" and drive them to the hospital.

Dodging Machine Gun Fire.

"Damned hard lines, I call it," said one tough rifleman, who had been "sent down" with a bayonet thrust in the calf of his leg. This young man, otherwise undamaged, did not see very much of the assault. For hours and hours, he said, he was lying on the ground while the big guns roared and bellowed over him, and the ground shook as if half a dozen earthquakes were quarrelling among themselves under him.

"The noise was so terrific that everybody was struck deaf," he said. "The only thing to do was to lie there and wait for the whistles to go, and if you couldn't hear that you had to watch out sharp to see what the other chaps were doing and then follow them.

"Then, when the time came to rush it, our chaps were up with a fine old yell—you could hear that—and over the first line of trenches and into the next before you could say 'rats!' The fighting in this particular section was pretty hot while it lasted; the Germans fought well, steel to steel, with the shrapnel bursting all around like fireworks and the machine guns kicking up a hell of a dust.

"Being up against a machine gun is a sort of experience that you don't want to be up against more than once or twice, if you value your health. You can hear it coming and when the swivel's turned your way, you've got to dive pretty nippy.

"'Turning on the garden hose,' they call it, and it's just like that, only the garden hose as it comes your way makes a sort of noise like an express train approaching in a tunnel."

"Taking the ruined, desolated village of Vermelles as the centre, our advance was made due east toward the LaBassee-Lens road," said another wounded soldier. "Vermelles itself is now nothing but a crumbling, red brick ruin set in the centre of four cross roads—church, houses, hovels, form buildings and everything down and smashed, with the solitary exception of the village shrine, which still stands. In the long, slightly curved line of our forward trenches our infantry lay, ready for the plunge while the guns vomited a tremendous hail of shell directly over them.

The Dismal Promised Land.

"Ahead lay the promised land, a dismal disconsolate region if ever there was one. Simply a wide, sloping plain, steadily rising for two or three miles—a plain of dingy, clay colored, arid stuff with never a tree or a building or a tuft of grass on it to relieve the eye or afford possible cover. No sign of the German trenches; not a rampart, not a sandbag visible. If a field mouse moved there you could see it.

"Away to the right and just over the crest of the rise lay Loos, with the two towers of its mine shaft just visible. Further beyond but invisible in the mist and a few miles due north of Lens was Hill 70. The long, gently sloping rise toward La Bassee road could only be attempted under a continual, an incessant screen of shrapnel and the unwearying attentions of 'Mother' and her big family of attendant sprites.

"And that is how it was done. Under an absolute inferno of shell our men took the rise at the run and in a series of splendid charges fell tumultuously upon the German stronghold. It was not until then, when they were close under their own bursting missiles, that the screen was lifted and they were able to drive home and clinch triumphantly their audacious thrust. They fought splendidly, officers and men charging together and sharing death and glory with that high hearted bravery which has ever been the trademark of the British soldier."

Khaki Band a Feature of the Salvation Army's Big Congress in Toronto

TORONTO, Oct. 19. — Massey Hall echoed and re-echoed the martial music of the Salvationists at three monster mass meetings on Saturday night, Sunday afternoon and evening. The thirty-third annual Congress of the Salvation Army has brought hundreds of officers and soldiers to Toronto, but local citizens who participated in the gatherings at Massey Hall were greatly impressed with the marvellous strength of this organization.

Nor do the Salvationists lack patriotism. They have given generously of their force towards the cause of King and country. At Saturday's meeting, when the Khaki band composed of men training for the front, played "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" a wild scene of patriotism was precipitated, the like of which Massey Hall has rarely witnessed. There were altogether five hundred musicians on the stage and the compelling force of the martial music simply carried the immense audience off its feet.

Training for Service.

The khaki band was made up of men who are training in the overseas forces at Barriefield, Peterborough and Niagara-on-the-Lake and who had been accorded special leave by the military authorities. They were assisted by other bands from Hamilton and different Toronto districts. There were also a number of choirs, principal amongst which were the "Dovercourt Songsters." The work of the staff orchestra was worthy of high praise. Taken all in all, Saturday night's musical festival was one that will live long in the memories of Toronto citizens, not alone for its exquisite composition, but because of its patriotic fervour.

In Memory of Fallen.

A memorial service for "the officers and soldiers of the Salvation Army promoted to glory during 1913 1914 and 1915, including those lost of the Empress of Ireland, and those fallen in battle "somewhere in France," was conducted on Sunday afternoon, and Massey Hall was again filled to capacity. The service was featured with inspiring music, but over all there was that solemnity so characteristic of an occasion of that nature. Commissioner Richards spoke briefly, paying a tribute to those who have "gone before."

"The Battle for Souls," was the subject of Commissioner Richard's eloquent discourse in Massey Hall last evening. The snares and pitfalls of city life were portrayed in a language so illuminating that one was thoroughly impressed with the remarkable duties which devolve upon Christian forces. There were many kinds of sin, but practically all of them had their sources in a spirit of selfishness.

A number of members of the Peterborough Battalion Band, and also several from the 59th Battalion Band, were in attendance.

Teuton Protest is Ignored in States

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The State Department does not contemplate any action on the affidavits filed by the German Embassy charging that marines and sailors of the British patrol boat Baralong killed the commander of a German submarine. Officials pointed out that the case did not differ from many others filed by belligerent Governments charging violations of military law and atrocities. The American Government has merely filed all such protests.

The use of the American flag by the British patrol boat is regarded as a ruse in keeping with the naval practice of previous wars, and used by the United States as well as other nations.

Unofficial advices from Germany said that people there were wildly excited about this "barbarous" affair, and one correspondent had worked himself up into quite a state of indignation over the "misuse of the American flag," forgetting that Germany considered false colors and fraudulent ship's papers as pretty trick on a foe.

PHYSICIAN DIES ATTENDING PATIENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Suddenly stricken when prescribing for a patient, Dr. Joseph J. Noll, died of heart disease in the reception room of his home, No. 64 West Sixty-ninth street.

Dr. Noll was called to his office a few minutes before one o'clock yesterday to attend a woman, who was there with her little daughter. Later, while opening the door to allow the woman and her child to leave the room, he staggered and fell to the floor.

The woman called the members of the family and they hurried to the assistance of the physician, who was unconscious. Meanwhile, the woman and her child left the house without leaving their names.

Dr. Herbert P. McGregor and Dr. J. Randolph Graham, who were called in by the family, said that death probably was due to heart disease.

Dr. Noll was fifty-one years old and was born in old Greenwich Village. He was educated at Columbia University and at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He was a member of the Lotos Club of the New York Athletic Club and of many medical societies.

GET NO TRACE OF MISSING GERMANS

NORFOLK, Va., Oct 19. Seven days after the yawl Eclipse and her complement of six German officers from the interned cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm were last reported in Hampton Roads the fate of the yacht and the men who broke their paroles is as much a mystery as ever. With the area searched in every direction and coast guard cutters covering every nook of nearby inland waters no information regarding the whereabouts of the Eclipse has been reported here.

Early this morning the cutter Onondaga took up the search in Chesapeake Bay. A second British war ship has joined the cruiser which ran down the coast from New York as soon as the disappearance of the yacht was reported. The two vessels were reported today fifteen miles off Cape Henry.

The coast guards at Virginia Beach station have reported to Washington that they sighted off the coast at three o'clock Monday a boat answering to the description of the Eclipse. Admiral Beatty said to-night that he had information that this boat was not the Eclipse.

One of the officers from the Kronprinz Wilhelm had sixty photographs of American ports, according to W. F. Johnson, formerly Postmaster at Ocean View. Mr. Johnson says he was told that the prints were made by a young man in Norfolk, and that among them were views of American fortifications.

Letter From Dr. E. V. Frederick Describes Hospital on Lemnos

Writes to Mrs. Frederick of the Native Customs, including the Ancient Method of Flailing Grain —Doctors and Nurses Kept Busy

A TENTED HOSPITAL

An interesting letter from Dr. E. V. Frederick, who is with one of the hospitals on the island of Lemnos, reveals some of the conditions under which their work is carried out. It is dated August 24, and in part is as follows:

We are now getting things into a pretty good swing. As I told you, we arrived on shore Thursday, and on Sunday received our first patients, and by to-day, Tuesday, have over two hundred, and we are putting up tents all the time. I have been made assistant to the senior surgeon. Six of us are in surgery and six in medicine, and the rest divided over other work—X-ray, anaesthetics, etc. We expect to be as large as Toronto General Hospital, and you know how many beds they have. You can rest assured we will be very busy, and it is now we realize how much every little help in the line of supplies counts. Shields from Port Hope was in the harbour the other day but I did not see him. I do not know where he has gone, but expect it is on a hospital ship, which is a rather nice life.

I am sitting on my bed writing this by candle light, the candle set in a tin can with stones inside to hold the candle, with it sitting in a tent peg bag to keep it from blowing out. I had some views which are going to be very good. Between us we will have a good collection.

Now is the time when the doctors and nurses are so glad we volunteered for this service. I heard one of the nurses say yesterday she would rather die than have to go home and give up her work before the war is over. One hospital here has been working along bravely with only 3 medical men and 60 orderlies and no nurses and with nearly 900 patients. They now have more assistance as each of the new hospitals has been loaning them doctors and nurses and orderlies.

We are getting enough to eat, and it is improving every day. Four of our men started off the other day at 3 in the afternoon on four packages and went 16 miles over the mountains and returned at 3 in the morning with a bottle of pickles. We had some green corn yesterday, it was a little too ripe, and some little tomatoes the day before and potatoes to-day. Of course we have plenty of meat and jam and tea, and nearly always bread and ship biscuits; plenty of tea, of which we have about 3 or 4 cups four times a day to keep from drinking much water. We do not go hungry, and we have as much food as is necessary to keep fat, but we are not living on the fat of the land. We have not had much recent news, although some fifties in, but we do not know how much of it to believe. Of course we get plenty of news of the fighting at the Dardanelles, and two of our nurses were up where they could see the fighting both from ships and on land.

I am trying to learn to talk Greek now. We see some very interesting things here. One is the old threshing floors, simply a round circle about 30 feet across, paved with stones and a row of stones around the edge. On this they flail out the grain the same as 2,000 years ago. Every one travels on a package about half the size of the tider. There are no roads except what the British have [illegible] desire to continue living here any longer than necessary. We often wonder where our next move will take us. I bet on Italy. How nice to have our Christmas dinner in Rome or Venice.

The moon is [illegible] we can [illegible] village [illegible] plant [illegible] away. The island [illegible] tained [illegible]

Just now and every night about bedtime we have a jackal chorus from all directions, which sounds like a bullfrog chorus at Percy Boom.

Our hospital consists of about 100 tents, ranging from bell tents to our 50 big Indian tents for about 20 patients each. The beds are set as close together that there is only room to stand up between, but the wind blows through all the time, as we do not put the sides on. Each ward consists of 3 tents, laced end to end. They are thus 17 feet wide and 210 feet long, with bright yellow lining, so that it makes one of the prettiest wards you could imagine. All the ropes are of snow white cotton, two bows outer and inner, and two over the top, which makes it look like one large long fringe on the slant. The floors are like turpentined and easily swept, although they are as rough as an ordinary field with part of the stones removed. I had a long talk with one of our chaplains last night. He is one of the finest chaps I have met. He is our food scout. Sunday he spent rowing all over the harbour to every ship and returned with a box of prunes, some cabbage, spuds and onions. He is in the same tent with a Jesuit priest. His name is Whitaker. His father is in command of the Northern Division of England. He is wealthy, married to a daughter of Lady Aberdeen, was a naval cadet at 20. Lived in the Yukon for a couple of years, is now in charge of a small town out in West Canada, was through the South African war.

Well I guess I have written you all the news I can which I am permitted.

Just to remind you that the tinsmithing department of Messrs. F. R. J. MacPherson & Co. can put your heating system into good running order for the winter. Book your order

The Scene of the Saddest Side of The War and Also of Much Heroism

Fine Qualities of Men Are Seen Where Wounded Enter Paris —Teutons Become Human

PARIS, Oct. 10.—La Chapelle, the station at which the wounded who go to the many hospitals of Paris arrive, is the scene of the saddest side of the war, but it is also the place where the heroic qualities of the French are manifested in their best light. A Frenchman remarked recently that even the Germans seemed to show a trace of human nature when they were lying wounded on a stretcher in La Chapelle.

He referred to a German officer who, being brought in with wounds in his cheek and shoulder and a piece of shrapnel in his leg, was asked by the French medecin-en-chef where he was wounded. The story goes that the German answered proudly:

"I was wounded in France, sir."

An incident has occurred which has nothing to do with this except that it happened in the same place, La Chapelle. The ambulances were arriving because they had been notified that a hospital train was expected with 470 "grands blesses" (seriously wounded at 3 10 o'clock on this particular Sunday morning.

Sought Wounded Husband.

A woman, sitting on a pile of stretchers in the corner, called one of are ambulance drivers and asked whether she would be allowed to wait there for her husband, who was to arrive on this train.

She was a beautiful little woman, very well gowned in a dress of white silk and lace, and she held at her breast a baby of three or four months, which she continued to nurse with pride as the captain in charge of the station approached her.

After her appeal to him the captain not only allowed her to remain, a thing which is seldom permitted to civilians, but led her to the inner part of the station, where he recommended her to the care of the nurses in their quarters, explaining that the husband had been at the front for a year and had never seen the baby.

The station is divided into rooms for the wounded by collapsible bungalows, each one large enough to accommodate about 40 stretcher cases. Into one of these, when the train arrived, but one soldier was carried. He was just a "simple soldat," with no officer's stripes; both his arms were bandaged and he semed to have stood the strain of the train journey very poorly.

Bandaged Arm Pulls Baby.

To this bungalow the captain and a lieutenant led the mother with her baby. She went to the stretcher and embraced her husband, then handed the little war baby to him. He could not receive it, but he managed with a bandaged arm to pull its head toward him until he could kiss its cheek, and he said something that would probably be the best part of the story had it been overheard.

The two officers, standing at the other side of the stretcher, and touched by this family reunion had come to the salute. The wounded man turned to them and said:

"I am out of it now, but her is another little soldier come to take my place."

"I accept him in the name of the army," the captain answered, "and if he becomes half the man his father is France will some day be proud of him."

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 510 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Constant Reader, Peterborough:—Please tell me the right way to polish an oak desk. I want it to look fairly good and smooth, and not that glary, cheap look, and can I do it myself?

Ans.:—If you are real careful and follow directions closely, you may possibly make a presentable job; otherwise it will look cheap and amateurish when compared with another piece of furniture finished by an experienced man. You do not say what colour you wish your desk, so I will guess at the ever popular golden oak because of its wide attitude as to shade, varying with the individual tastes. First see that your wood is clean. Then stain with water stain the shade desired. You may buy the stain ready made in any hardware store. Allow this to dry; rub lightly with very fine sandpaper, which will bring out the high lights, as the water stain will raise the grain. Then apply a second coat of the stain, to which has been added one half or three quarters of its bulk with water; another very light sandpaper followed by a coat of thin orange shellac. When dry sand lightly and apply a filler made by mixing corn starch to a paste, with one part boiled linseed oil, one part drier, to three parts turpentine, adding a little burnt amber to get the desired shade, i.e., the shade of your stain or near it. Rub the filler well into the grain. When nearly dry wipe off the surface thoroughly, then sandpaper lightly, after which give two or three coats of some good rubbing varnish. Rub the first and second coats with curled hair lubricated with raw linseed or crude oil. The last coat should be rubbed with felt and finely powdered pumice stone and oil. Be sure to wipe all oil off after each rubbing; this is most important; a sharpened stick is useful to pick out the corners.

Polisher, Peterborough:—I have an oak extension table to repolish. There has been a new top put on and of course I must make it match the legs. Now the legs, etc., are real fumed oak. What is the best way to do fuming, and how can I protect the lower part while fuming the top?

Ans.:—It is not the prerogative of this column to pose as an authority, or an instructor, to the artisan, but or an instructor, to the artisan, but experienced as the heading suggests. However, if I can be of any assistance to a fellow tradesman, I will gladly help. Fuming is done by enclosing the articles to be fumed, in an air-tight (or nearly so) box or room, with a pane of glass or two in such a position that the process may be watched. On the floor place some shallow vessels, such as saucers in which has been placed liquid ammonia. As the ammonia evaporates the fumes arising, penetrates and gradually colours the wood, which is taken out when the desired shade has been attained. Of late years a lot of so-called "fumed oak" is merely "stained oak," and it can never be made to look or last like real fumed oak. With reference to your table top, see if you can take it off. If not then coat the raw wood with ammonia. It may require several coats. But you will get your colour nearly as well as by fuming and away ahead of either oil or water stain. Of course you will raise your grain first by a couple of coats of warm water, after which sand lightly with 0 sand paper. Hope this will help you out a bit.

A Lindsay Reader:—I am an interested reader of your "Arts and Crafts" column, and would like the following answered in next Wednesday's issue: 1st—What is the width and length of ordinary wall paper? 2nd—How can I fix my ladder so as to paper my back staircase? 3rd—How should I make my paste?

Ans.—1st—Ordinary paper is 18 inches wide, 45 to 48 feet long, the double roll. 2nd—I do not know what your staircase is like, but try using the flat top on the step with the back of the ladder out. 3rd—Simply make a batter of flour and cold water, beat out the lumps, and with boiling water cook as you would starch.

Old Girl, City:—Can wall paper be washed or cleaned in any way, or must it all come off and be redone?

Ans.:—There are wall paper cleaners on the market, or you may make one by mixing flour and dilute ammonia to a dough. With this rub your wall paper in down strokes only, frequently working the dirt into the centre of your dough ball. It requires great care or you will get it all streaky. Certainly use no water to try to wash it.

X.Y.Z., Peterborough:—Kindly enlighten me as to the best method of removing scratches from furniture?

Ans.:—If the scratches are not too deep they can be removed by rubbing them over with linseed oil, allowing it to stand on them a few minutes, then wiping thoroughly with a soft cloth.

THE RED CROSS APPEAL— THE ANSWER.

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, you have done it unto Me."

From yonder far-off lonely grave
Home comes a ghostly call—
"For God and truth and honour's sake
I gave my life, my all."

"But you, my friends, at home, abroad
Canadians one and all
What have you done with God giv'n wealth
To meet your Country's call?"

List also to the message,
Whispered in every ear;
It comes across the ocean's waves
From men no longer here:

"In fight for King, for Country,
For Canada's fair fame
Stricken I called 'I need your help'
Your help, it never came."

"Your bravest men have sickened
Your soldiers strong have cried
For lack of the aid your wealth could bring
Your heroes suffered, died."

To all men comes this message,
To each man comes the call;
It comes from sick and wounded
It comes from those who fall.

Proclaim your faithful answer
To the men in white-washed hall
"We too, like you, are Canadians true
And have heard our Country's call."

"For God, for King and Country,
Whate'er on earth befall,
We gladly give our treasure
We gladly give our all
To aid the fight for God, for right,
For those, who in battle fall"

Rather Be In The Trenches Than Out

Says Pte. Wilfred A. Throop With the 21st Battalion, Second Canadian Contingent In a Letter to His Cousin

Miss Etta Throop, 104 Lock street, has received a letter from her cousin, Pte. Wilfrid A. Throop, with the 21st Battalion, second Canadian contingent, now in France. It is appended and is as follows:

Dear Etta: Received your very welcome letter a few days ago while I was in the trenches. I was certainly pleased to hear from you. I have been in the trenches six days and now I am out for a rest. Expect to go back again to-morrow. We have fine trenches and I would just as soon be in the trenches as out. I don't mind watching at these Germans at all. One can hear them talking when they are quiet at night but can't hear what they say. Their trenches are from 300 to 350 yards from ours. This is a very nice country. It is very much like Canada. It is awful to see all the nice towns destroyed by shell fire. I have been through a lot of ruined buildings. For three nights I slept in a barn without any roof on it. Now we are in the camp. The Allies are doing good work all along the line. Hoping to hear from you often.

WILFRED A. THROOP.

Fruitful Work of the Canadian-American Club

The following is a list of the articles contained in the box prepared by that splendid organization, the Canadian-American Club, and shipped on Oct. 15th to Queen's No. 5 Stationary Hospital 90 hospital dressings, 96 wipes, 54 compresses, 12 large sponges, 13 triangle bandages, 11 many tailed bandages, 1 abdominal many tailed bandages, 7 jaw bandages, 73 gauze bandages, 19 fomentation cloths, 24 property bags, 8 small pillows, 7 ring pillows, 3 pr. slippers, 6 hot water bag covers, and 2 towels.

Pte. H. Ballard Writes of Life In Trenches

Peterboro' Boy With 21st Battalion Has Spent Several Days in the The Trenches

Miss Lottie Fair, 182 Reid street, has received the following letter from Pte. Horace Ballard, No. 3 Company, 21st Battalion, Second Canadian Contingent, now in France:

4th Brigade,
British Expeditionary Forces,
War Office, London.

Dear Lottie, — Just a line hoping all are well as it leaves me in fine condition. We have been in the trenches seven days and came out yesterday for a few days' rest. We are billeted back of the firing line a couple of miles. Our casualties were small. No one was seriously hurt. Don't mind the life as long as it doesn't rain. It rained one day and it was mud up to our knees. We have names for very turn in the trenches. Have not seen any of the boys of the First Contingent. The people around her seem very good to us. Most of the houses are all ruined. The French have made big gains here. I received a couple of Peterborough papers in the trenches. It is raining out tonight. All the Peterborough boys are in good health. Don't forget to write once in a while. I have a big piece of German shrapnel that dropped in the trench beside me. I would like to send it to you. It did no damage. Their Jack Johnsons shake everything. You can hear them for miles around. The German trenches filled with Bavarian troops (the best of them) are 200 yards from us. We can hear them singing. They thought they brought down one of our aeroplanes. Should have heard them cheer. Will write again soon.

Hot Weather From the South

The warmer weather this month, while not extreme, has been favorable to the propagation of mosquitoes. They appeared in many homes on the banks of the Otonabee.

Though not a record warm October, the temperature this month has maintained an average of 53.5 degrees, which is five degrees above 48.5, the normal for October on the basis of the records of 76 years. Sunday's highest temperature was 65 in Toronto. The maximum temperature this month occurred on the 13th when a temperature of 70 degrees was experienced.

"The warmer temperature is due to the movements of atmospheric pressure from the south," said the weather man. "Wind is one of the big factors in temperature, and it makes no difference whether it is winter or summer, a continued blow from the south will bring warmer weather.

"This October has been fairly warm, but nothing exceptional. The weather Sunday has been surpassed several times this month. There have been very few Octobers in which the temperature was not higher than Sunday on the 17th.

It was higher in 1913, 1912, 1910, 1908, 1906, 1904."

BULL DERAILED A C. P. R. TRAIN

OTTAWA, Oct. 19—An incoming passenger train on the Pontiac branch of the C.P.R. was derailed yesterday when the engine struck a bull that had wandered on to the line near Connaught Park, a few miles west of Hull. The engine turned turtle into the ditch and three cars left the rails but did not overturn. Engineer Murphy of Ottawa was painfully scalded about the neck and bruised, but his injuries are not serious. None of the passengers were hurt.

Ploughing Match in Ennismore Provided Exciting Contests

First Time in Many Years That Such an Event Has Been Held in This Township—To Be An Annual Event—The Prize Winners

ENNISMORE, Oct. 18.—For the first time in many years a ploughing match was held in the insular township to the north, which was beyond all matter of dispute, a huge success. So successful was it; that the Township Council have decided to make it an annual affair. The Township of Harvey was to have competed against Ennismore, for several very excellent prizes, but at the last moment, for causes yet unknown, Harvey backed out, and an open field was therefore offered to the young aspirants from Ennismore. No less than seventeen entered the contest, twelve to compete in ploughing stubble land, and five in sod. By 1 o'clock a large crowd had assembled, not alone from Ennismore, but from Peterborough, and all the neighbouring township. Before 2 o'clock the match was fairly begun, and from that to 6 o'clock, only the very best judges of ploughing had any idea who would stand first in each class.

The competition was of the keenest nature, and the ploughing, on the whole, even by the boys of fifteen and sixteen years, showed evidences of care, practice and good judgment in the useful art of upturning a graceful sod.

The Township Council, headed by the Reeve, Mr. W. H. Crough, were indefatigable and untiring, not alone in conducting the match, but in securing valuable prizes, staking out the ground and in inducing the young men to enter the ploughing contest.

This is evidently a move in the right direction. A noble emulation, devoid of any semblance of jealousy or dissatisfaction, is already being created, which cannot fail, when wisely and judiciously guided, to produce most desirable results, which in time will leave its impress upon the farming community of this prosperous township. The judges were well chosen, Mr. John Telford, an ex-farmer of Ennismore, now a native of the village of Bridgenorth, and a man widely known as a model, tasty and progressive farmer, and eminently fair in all his decisions, acted as one of the judges. He was ably seconded by the County Treasurer, whose long experience, ripe judgment, and impartial dealings, fully qualified him for the position of judge, while Michael Sullivan, of Otonabee, some years ago a contestant in several large ploughing matches, and the winner of many first prizes, was the third judge. So from the standpoint of judges, general satisfaction was expressed on all sides, and their decisions met with the hearty approval of all.

We look forward, with pride and confidence, to the good results, which the Council of this year have done so much to bring about. Whatever tends to a more scientific and profitable system of farming, deserves a l the encouragement which a community can bestow upon it, and Reeve Crough and his able assistants in the Council, are worthy of the highest praise and gratitude.

The Prize Winners.

The following is a list of the various prizes, contributed by those interested in the ploughing match:

Patriotic Addresses Given at Mt. Pleasant

Cavan People Are Reminded of Their Duty in Connection With the Canadian Patriotic and Red Cross Funds.

$8000 TO BE RAISED

A large and enthusiastic patriotic meeting was held last evening in the Methodist Church, Mount Pleasant, for the purpose of stirring up public interest in the necessity of raising in the Township of Cavan at least $8,000 for the Canadian Patriotic and Red Cross Funds.

The meeting was presided over by Rev. Mr. Butler, and interesting and inspiring addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Rollins, Mr. R. R. Hall, and Rev. J. P. McInnes. A very interesting musical programme was also furnished by the local choir and its members.

The Rev. Mr. Rollins in the course of his speech emphasized the importance of every able-bodied young man in Canada offering his services to Canada and the Empire. He also urged upon those who could not go to the front to do their duty here in making their sacrifices in money in seeing that the wives and dependents of those who do go to the front are properly supported and protected. It was mainly for this purpose that the Canadian Patriotic Fund was established and is being maintained.

The Rev. Mr. Rollins further urged that it was of prime necessity that the soldiers at the front should not lack for medical care and attention, and that the soldiers who were wounded should be properly nursed and cared for from the time that they fell on the field or are taken in charge by the stretcher bearers and ambulance drives, until they reached the various base hospitals that are located behind the lines. It is to assist in this great work that the Red Cross Fund had been established, and is deserving of our heartiest support.

Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., gave a most interesting and instructive address upon the cause and course of the great European War that is being waged by Germany and her Co-Conspirators against Great Britain and her Allies, and the forces of liberty and civilization.

He pointed out that so far as Germany was concerned, this is a War of Conquest on her part. She desired to extend her territory at the expense of her neighbours. She desired to rob her neighbours of their rich coal fields, iron fields in Belgium and in France, and to rob Russia of her large wheat belts and other resources, and finally after this Giant German Boa Constrictor had digested its ravenous meal she proposed with the aid of conscript armies she could raise in France and Russia, to crush Great Britain and her Dominions beyond the seas. With this end solely in view the Kaiser during his reign of 26 years, has drilled and trained the entire male population of Germany into soldiers, and has educated her people into the belief that they have a divine right to rule over the rest of mankind. To accomplish this purpose the religion of the Germans has been misdirected; their moral principles have been perverted and the ambitions of her people have assumed the lustful proportions of crazy tyrants. To see the extent to which the religion of Germany has been perverted we have only to read the Kaiser's speech to his soldiers when they were on their way to the front to deal out death and destruction to the poor innocent Belgians. He said: "Remember that the German people are the chosen of God. On me, the German Emperor, the spirit of God has descended. I am His sword, His Weapon, and His Vice Regent. Woe to the disobedient, and death to cowards and unbelievers."

Never at any time in the history of religious tyrants was death and cruelty meted out to their unbelievers as has been done by the Kaiser and his troops in this great war. He has respected neither age nor sex. He has encouraged his soldiers to commit crimes against men, women and children which can find no parallel except in the history of savage nations. Against such perverted religion, morality and ambitions the forces of civilization are to-day being up to their supreme test. "It is the duty," said Mr. Hall, "of every young man who possibly can go to the front to assist Canada in doing her part in this great war to do so, and it is the supreme duty of every one who remains at home to contribute to the Patriotic Fund which cares for the dependents of those who do go to the front, and to the Red Cross Fund, which preserves the health and lives of those who are fighting for us.

The Rev. J. P. McInnis in a brief address pointed out the insecurity of life and property under German rule. The farmer holds his deed from the Crown, and if the authority of the Crown is taken away it goes without saying that the farmer will lose his title to his land. He urged that every one in the Township of Cavan should do his share in his own interest and in the interests of Canada and the Empire.

WILL RAISE CORPS OF ARMENIANS TO FIGHT THE TURKS

LONDON, Oct. 19.—A despatch to Reuter's from Petrograd says:

"Capt. Torcom is planning to raise volunteer corps from the Armenians now residing in the Balkans, Egypt, Italy, France, Great Britain and the United States to fight in the ranks of the allies against Turkey.

In an appeal with this end in view Capt. Torcom says the Armenians have been unable to prevent the massacre of Armenians in Asia Minor, by the Turks, but that those living in other countries can help fight Turkey and that the allied powers will not refuse them the right and honour of joining in the war against their oppressors.

"Capt. Torcom's plan provides for the formation of a maximum of 30 battalions and a minimum of 10 battalions. Torcom was wounded during the recent fighting in Galicia, but is now able to leave the hospital and is about to start for London to get his plan in operation."

Patriotic Funds Carefully Handled

Norham Clergyman Asks for Information Regarding Rumours in His Community

Base rumours of the misappropriation of funds obtained by public subscription for patriotic purposes are persistently circulated in spite of the exposure of their falsity.

A minister in Norham, Ont., wrote last week to a Peterborough citizen reporting a rumour in that community and requesting information regarding it.

"A soldier wrote home," the letter said, "telling his people not to send out any more socks as they had to pay 80 cents per pair. If that is the case where does the money go?"

In reply to this, Dr. Ryerson's remarks in his address on Friday night are most applicable.

Norham is not the only place this rumour has been heard. One variation of it told of socks intended for soldiers reaching the lumber camps. But when the rumours are sifted the anonymous soldier proves a myth. A Red Cross Society officer told The Examiner that none of the workers receive salaries, and no charge is made for the articles forwarded to the wounded. Similarly the products of the various patriotic societies are handled by the Government, and reports to the effect that the men are asked to pay for socks, etc., are absolutely untrue.

Again the writer asks—"Have you had men around Peterborough and surrounding country demanding money from every one toward the war fund. I was told the other day there was suspicion of German spies."

In regard to this query it is only necessary to say that the funds the country is contributing to have the sanction of the highest authorities, for example the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds. The Overseas Club Tobacco Fund is another medium of assisting the men at the front and is likewise recognized by the Government.

Committees, especialy in rural districts, should first demand the credentials of persons colelcting for any war fund. It is possible that unscrupulous individuals would attempt to take advantage of the present conditions to their own advantage, but a little caution will readily protect the people. The funds to which they should give are usually community movements, which provide their own safeguards.

APOLIGIZED TO HOLLAND AND SWITZERLAND

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Oct. 18—Germany has apoligized to Holland and Switzerland for passage of Zeppelins over their territory.

PARIS, Oct. 18—Late despatches from the front, this afternoon, reported no change in positions of the allied troops, despite heavy German attacks.

366 GEORGE STREET . . . . . NEAR SIMCOE ST.

Proprietor of Motion Picture House Fined Fifty Dollars

Was Convicted of Admitting Children Who Were Under the Legal Age and Were Unaccompanied—Case Will Be Appealed —The Evidence

In this morning's police court, Lee Petre, proprietor of the Red Mill theatre, was fined $50 and costs, amounting in all to $54.15. He was convicted by Magistrate Dumble of having admitted, unaccompanied, three boys under fifteen years of age to the theatre, contrary to the regulations. Through his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, defendant entered a plea of not guilty.

Police Constable Blade swore that on the evening of October 8th, he saw three boys enter the theatre in question. He followed them in and secured their names, and before leaving spoke to the ticket-seller about letting children in under age. He was informed that a lady had purchased tickets for the bunch.

Each of the three boys were placed in the witness box and each in turn swore that they had purchased their own tickets and were unaccompanied when they entered the theatre.

Theatre Parties.

In summing up the case Mr. Gordon contended that the ticket-seller could easily have been under a misapprehension that the boys were in the care of a lady who preceded them into the show. He intimated that he knew of cases were an adult was known to take six and eight children into a theatre. A woman would take her own children and those of her neighbour.

"That is done to evade the law," put in Chief Thompson.

Mr. Gordon asked for an adjournment for one day in order to enable him to produce another witness whose evidence, he contended, was material to the case.

His Worship refused on the grounds that the case was closed, and if an adjournment was desired, application should have been made earlier.

To this Mr. Gordon replied that he did not know that the missing witness was to play such an important part in the case until the evidence was produced in Court.

This failed to move Magistrate Dumble who closed the case with a fine of $50.

Mr. Gordon expressed his intention of appealing the case.

"That's one way of finding out more about the law," observed the Court.

Another charge against Lee Petre, concerning a similar contravention in which the "Tis-It" theatre was concerned, was withdrawn.

OPPORTUNITY

Did You Ever Think How Closely OPPORTUNITY and EXPERIMENT are to one another ?

Many an eyesight sufferer believed he had the Opportunity of getting relief from his suffering, only to realize it was another Experiment.

Had he gotten the relief he desired, it would have meant an Opportunity taken advantage of. Therefore—what is the difference between Experiment and Opportunity?

The sudden realization of Experiment is when you fail to get the relief you anticipated from Eye Suffering and Headaches, while the reward and fruits of Opportunity taken advantage of, are those

SEEKS FREEDOM FOR CHARLTON

COMO, Italy, Oct. 19 — Porter Charlton, the American who is awaiting trial here on a charge of having murdered his wife, seemed somewhat nervous in anticipation of being interrogated by Baron Sciacca, the presiding Judge.

Signor Picardi, counsel for Charlton, has petitioned Baron Sciacca to consider the fact, should Charlton be found guilty, that the prisoner has been under restraint since June 24, 1910, when he was arrested in New York, and also that under the amnesty granted for crimes committed prior to Italy's entry into the war one year shall be taken from all sentences. Signor Picardi expects that by reason of the time Charlton has been held prisoner and the one-year deduction under the amnesty if Charlton is convicted he will be set free, provided the sentence of the court does not exceed six years and four months' imprisonment.

What Does PEBLO Mean to You?

It's most important meaning is, that as improvements in the manufacture of eye-glass lenses reached greater perfection, MR. FOWLER obtained this highest grade lens for his customers exclusively, and no where else can PEBLO lenses be supplied.

The Peblo lenses are really a protection to the buyer because every one of them must be of the same clear, hard, first quality, thus giving the eyes the very best possible assistance that glasses can give.

With every pair of PEBLO eye-glasses also goes the FOWLER absolute guarantee of satisfaction, a guarantee backed by the longest continuous optical business in Peterboro.

If everything is not exactly right Mr. Fowler is always here to see that his work is made right. That means dollars and much trouble saved to patrons of the Fowler Optical Establishment.

Says Lindsay's Socialist Mayor Not a Success

Three year's trial of a Socialist Mayor has not been a success, according to a Lindsay citizen who was discussing Mayor Beal's administration, yesterday. The assessment, he stated, has doubled in that time, and the tax rate (37 mills) is the highest in Canada. Before his election Mayor Beal promised methods out of the ordinary, but he has fallen short of his pre-election dreams. This Lindsay man further stated that men working on Government contracts are receiving from 90c to $1.25 a day of ten hours, in spite of the fair wage restrictions which are appended to these contracts. And this in Victoria County. These statements would not be used but for the fact that the Lindsay man vouched for their truth.

Police Give A Day's Pay

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—The policemen in the city only a short time ago were called on to subscribe nearly a day's pay for a machine gun for the Government and they promptly responded.

Now an appeal has been sent out by the chief constable asking the men if they would contribute towards the British Red Cross. Immediately it was suggested the men in the different divisions agreed to help. Lists were posted up in the stations and the men wrote their names down for a day's pay each.

The sums range from $5.25 from an inspector to $3.50 from a third-class constable. Altogether the police expect to raise $9,000 from the force for the fund.

MONAGHAN'S GIFT TO BRITISH RED CROSS ONE MILL ON DOLLAR

Will Mean Over $900 If Council Ratifies Recommendation of Meeting of Ratepayers Passed at Meeting in May's School Last Night—Rev. Jas. Rollins and Mr. D. O'Connell Place Unadorned Facts Before the Township Ratepayers.

SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE GROWING AMONG PEOPLE

An assembly of North Monaghan ratepayers in May's school house last night passed a resolution, moved by Mr. Harry Webber and seconded by Mr. Will Grady, requesting the Township Council to levy one mill on the dollar as a contribution to the British Red Cross Society.

The motion was passed unanimously, and Reeve McIntosh said that he would call a meeting of the Council to-night in order that it might be dealt with before Trafalgar Day.

Mr. Bruce Johnston, who was chosen Chairman for the meeting, stated that the assessment of the Township was $916,445, and that one mill on the dollar would provide about $916, or at least $900.

Another evidence was provided at this meeting of the awakening of the public's responsibility, and in fact, the North Monaghan men passed a resolution, moved by Mr. Wm. Anderson, seconded by Dr. T. Johnston, thanking Rev. James Rollins and Mr. Daniel O'Connell for their splendid addresses, and expressing their appreciation of the clear-cut manner in which they crystallized the duties arising out of this crisis.

There were in fact two motions covering the proposal to ask the Council to levy a mill on the taxpayers for the British Red Cross appeal. The first one was moved by Mr. O'Connell as a ratepayer of the Township, and seconded by Mr. Alex. Archibald. But a discussion ensued in which some of those present felt that it might be better to defer action until a larger meeting could be arranged. It was said that the western or farming section was not sufficiently represented, and that those ratepayers might wish to express their opinions.

Mr. Johnston stated that he had advertised the meeting and the Reeve said he had made the wires hot communicating with neighbours requesting them to attend.

It remained for Mr. Webber to obtain an immediately practical result. All those with whom he had discussed the question were satisfied to abide by whatever was done at this meeting, and he was confident that not a ratepayer would object to this contribution of one mill. Hence nothing would be gained by deferring action. He concluded his remarks by putting in motion the resolution as given above.

Plain Speaking.

Both Rev. Mr. Rollins and Mr. O'Connell spoke in terms whose effectiveness lay in contrasts. Mr. O'Connell, speaking first, urged his audience to arouse themselves to the danger that confronts the Empire in this struggle, and in their conversations with neighbours to awaken in them a realization of the liberties at stake. It was only now, he said, that the country was really appreciating the great gravity of the situation. The people should consider that they are fighting here just as surely as if the German hordes were coming down over the confines of our territory. If Great Britain is to succeed, every man, woman and child, as far as it lies in their power, must put forth every possible effort to see that success crowns the efforts of the allied forces.

Striking Comparisons.

Mr. O'Connell then drew a few comparisons, plainly and with the full force of their facts. Eighty-six thousand of our men have gone overseas, prepared to make the full sacrifice, and there are sixty thousand now in training in Canada.

They, too, are prepared, if need be, to lay down their lives in defense of the Empire.

"Do you recognize the fact that while we are in this war as much as the other countries, we have suffered the least?" Mr. O'Connell referred to the devastation of Belgium, Northern France, Poland, and Galicia. In England thousands of homes have been bereaved, the City of London invaded by Zeppelins, and peaceable citizens killed. Every country has suffered, but here in Canad we have escaped the devastation that follows in the wake of war. Canadian farmers have been blessed with a bountiful harvest; their farms and their crops have not been occupied and commandeered by the enemy. Whereas the farmers in the occupied countries have been reduced to

SPECIAL SERVICES ARE CONCLUDED

Were Concluded in the Methodist Church, Hastings, by Gipsy Simon Smith

HASTINGS, Oct. 19.—Baker Bros. shipped live poultry from the G. T. R. station here on Friday last. Prices are not very high and in all probability will be still lower while the warm weather continues.

The special services in the Methodist Church in charge of Gipsy Simon Smith, concluded on Tuesday evening. All through the services the speaker was listened to with rapt attention and made many friends during his stay. He left on Wednesday to join his family in Toronto, carrying with him the best wishes of all.

The W. M. S. held their October meeting on Thursday afternoon in the basement of the church, when the new study book "The King's Highway" was introduced, and proved most interesting.

On Thursday evening the play "Ten Nights in a Bar-room" was given in the town hall. A small audience was present.

A great number of our citizens took in the Norwood Fair on Wednesday last, and report a very large attendance.

Mr. Victor German has been appointed as mail carrier on the new rural route and began his duties last week.

Mr. Perreault has been removed to the Peterborough Hospital for treatment. His friends are hoping that he will soon be sufficiently recovered to return to his home.

The ladies of the I.O.D.E. have asked for a jam shower for the soldiers. It is hoped that the request may meet with a hearty response.

Workmen are busy shingling the school house under the direction of the Board.

The marriage is announced of Miss Sarah Scriver and Mr. Wm. Thomson both of Hastings. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Thomson will take up residence in the house recently made vacant by Mr. Al. Scriver.

Mr. John Taylor has moved to Hastings and commenced blacksmithing in the shop recently occupied by Mr. Sapping.

Dr. Edmison and family returned on Wednesday from a trip to Toronto.

Miss Minnie McConnell is visiting friends near Port Hope.

Miss B. Campbell of Morganston is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Baker.

FIR SLABS NOW USED FOR TANNIN PURPOSE

Fir slabs, the disposition of which is such a problem for the sawmills of the northwest, can be utilized profitably in making tannin. Their tannic content and the method of extracting it have been discovered by Thos. G. Thompson, a student at the University at Washington, working under the direction of Prof. H. K. Benson.

Thompson, says the University of Washington Bulletin, found that from three cords of fir slabs he could obtain as much of the extract, which is used in tanning and in the manufacture of ink and dyes, as from a cord of western hemlock bark. The bark costs $11.50 a cord, whereas three cords of fir slabs may be bought at anywhere from $3 to $6, depending on the location of the mills.

Further, the tanning content of chestnut wood, which yields 200,000,000 pounds of extract annually in the east, is only little greater than that of the fir slab. Chestnut has an average content of 6.62 per cent., while the fir slab runs from 5.45 to 5.92 per cent.

The soft, brown inner lining of the bark on the slabs contains nearly 10 per cent. tannin. This, however, is not readily separated from the bark and wood, hence the entire slab is submitted to the process which liberates the extract.

Bad Complexions Are Now Easily Discarded

Every woman has it in her own hands to possess a beautiful and youthful complexion. No matter how soiled, faded or coarse the cuticle, ordinary mercolized wax will actually remove it, and Nature will substitute a skin as soft, clear and lovely as a child's. The action of the wax is not drastic but gentle and agreeable. Minute particles of cuticle shed off day by day, yet no evidence of the treatment is discernible other than the gradual complexional improvement. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drugstore, suffices for most cases. It is put on at bedtime, like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water. It is a certain method of discarding freckles, liver spots, moth patches, blackheads and pimples.

Wrinkles can be treated with benefit by bathing the face in a lotion prepared by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Instantaneous results are secured.

CRUEL.

"Oh, dear," groaned the young wife, "I don't know what to use to raise my bread; I've tried everything."

"A derrick and a couple of jack screws ought to do it," thought her husband, but he didn't say it aloud.—Boston Transcript.

Weddings Suggest Gifts of Silverware

Silverware suggests the name 1847 ROGERS BROS. because it is the leading brand of silver plate and has been for over half a century.

When buying silverware for personal use or gift-giving always look for the name

1847 ROGERS BROS.
"Silver Plate that Wears"

because it identifies the original and best make and is your assurance of securing silver plate that is backed by an unqualified guarantee made possible by the test of over 65 years. Other makes bear the name "Rogers," but not the date 1847.
